Rev. J. R. Roy, Bryson, Texas, March 10, 1898: "Having many friends in the Louisiana Conference, and thinking they would like to see a few lines from me, I thought I would write. After six years hard work in the Louisiana Conference, my health depreciated to that extent that I believed I saw in the near future a total collapse. After having consulted with my physician, he advised me to go to a higher climate. So by the consent of Bishop Hendrix, I transferred to the North Texas Conference, and the North Texas Conference saw fit to station me on the Bryson and Salt Hill work. We met here a kind and godly people. We are domiciled in a nice little parsonage in the town of Bryson, Texas. Our home is all new built since we came to the work. This is a delightful climate. We are at an altitude of 1,500 feet above sea level. There is no malaria here. Bryson is in Northwest Texas, near the Panhandle Texas. My health has much improved already. We have been here only two and a half months. This is fine farming country—small grain, also for corn and cotton. While drouth sometimes visits this section, yet the people press onward. This is one place only that I have found where people are not talking of hard times; talking of when I was a boy, or before the war. This country is populated with almost every nationality of the globe. The East and West, North and South, meet together as one common brotherhood. I am very much delighted with the country and people so far. If everything continues as pleasant in future as it appears now, I shall enjoy my situation; and if my health continues to improve, I shall believe it is in the providence of God that we are here. There is a great deal of mission work to be done in this western country—not that I would intimate that there are heathens in this country, but there are those of good breeding and of religious families who have strayed from the Father's home. This people appreciate the gospel. My people have assured me a liberal support. One thing is needful here; that is church-buildings. We have five school-buildings in this country, and these are used for religious services. Referring to the Louisiana Conference again, I was loath to leave that Conference. It is like the old homestead; but we owe some things to ourselves, and one of these is health. I love the brethren of the Louisiana Conference dearly, and assure them that I appreciate every courtesy and kindness shown me by them. I served under four presiding elders in the Louisiana Conference, and only knew them to love and esteem them as men of God. I served four works in the Louisiana Conference in six years. During that time I built two churches, and secured material for another; built three parsonages, and received into the churches that I served over three hundred on profession of faith. The Lord wonderfully honored my effort assisting other brethren. All honor and praise to God."

Every man watches his balance in the bank, and his balance in his cash account, pretty closely. There is another ledger account that the average man entirely forgets to his own undoing. It is his account with death. It is more important than a "profit and loss" account, for its a "life and death" account. It is a man's duty to himself and family to look up this account once every day and see that the balance is on the right side.

It doesn't pay to let this account run on, and have it debited with indigestion, and then impure blood, and finally nervous exhaustion, or prostration, or deadly consumption. When these diseases come it means a debit balance with death brought down in the blood red ink of another life sacrificed on the altar of foolish overwork and neglect of health. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the appetite keen, the digestion perfect, the liver active and the blood pure. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and health-forger. It makes firm, healthy flesh, but does not produce corpulence or raise the weight above nature's normal. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, bronchial, throat and catarrhal affections. Honest dealers don't urge substitutes.

"My wife had suffered for seven years with dyspepsia, sick headache and costiveness," writes Mr. Alonzo D. Jameson, of Dunbarton, Merrimack Co., N. H. "We tried many doctors and many kinds of medicine, but all were of no avail. We purchased six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which together with the 'Pleasant Pellets,' has entirely restored my wife's health. We cannot say enough to you in thanks for these valuable medicines."

It may save a life some day. Send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser; cloth binding 10 cents extra. Contains 1008 pages, over 300 illustrations—a valuable medical library in one volume.

Distrust that man who tells you to distrust. He takes the measure of his own small soul And thinks the world no larger.

It is a much easier task to speak an unwelcome truth to other people than to speak it to yourself.

Conscience is permanent and universal. It is the very essence of individual character.—Samuel Smiles.

The sure result of regeneration is a devout reverence for the law and a resolute keeping of it in the heart.—Spurgeon.

Is your religion of the sort that is pleasant to have around? And does it make you pleasant to have around?—Bible Reader.

There never was found in any age of the world either religion or law that did not highly exalt the public good as the Bible.—Bacon.

The darkest hour in the history of any young man is when he sits down to study how to get money without honestly earning it.—Exchange.

You may not be a sun—an original fountain of light—but you can be, and you ought to be, a moon reflecting the rays of the "Sun of Righteousness."

A locomotive usually lets off steam where it will not scald folks. There are a good many hot-tempered people who have not the same consideration.—Selected.

In rebuking evil it is well to remember that while a Christian should speak out and show his colors there is no occasion for him to show his choler.—Bible Reader.

Take the self-denial gayly and cheerfully; and let the sunshine of thy gladness fall on dark things and bright alike, like the sunshine of the Almighty.—James Freeman Clarke.

The most irresistible argument in favor of Christianity is a holy life. We do not mean a life composed chiefly of noisy demonstrations, but a life that is Christ-like in act and spirit. Such a life puts a gag in the mouths of gainsayers.

"I can not return good for evil." You can't? Then what have you done with the injunction, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus"? Have you never read that "they who have not the spirit of Christ are none of his"?

Cease from antedating your experience. Sufficient for to-day are the duties of to-day. Don't waste life in doubts and fears; spend yourself on the work before you, well assured that the right performance of the hour's duties will be the best preparation for the hours or ages that follow it. 'Tis the measure of a man, his apprehension of a day.—R. W. Emerson.

INDOCTRINATION.

Denominational controversialism, with its bitter partisanism and intense feeling, is well-nigh a thing of the past. Though ofttimes it has engendered hatred and strife between the different branches of the church, no churchman is warranted in asserting that doctrinal disputation, such as raged in the days of our fathers and grandfathers, was an unmixed evil. The people who listened to the theological debates which formerly were so frequent, became thoroughly instructed in the doctrines and tenets of the several denominations to which they belonged, or toward which they leaned, and, in consequence, displayed greater church loyalty and zeal than do the average church members of to day.

Though doctrinal preaching is not popular nowadays, mainly, we suppose, because discourses of this nature are too often dry and lengthy, if we had more of it, there would be more ardent attachment to the church, and less of shifting from one denomination to another.

Members who know little about what their denomination teaches, who are uninstructed as to its fundamental principles, are easily swayed by passion or prejudice, and not seldom are led astray by false teaching and ecclesiastical wolves. Intense loyalty can not be expected of people of shallow convictions and superficial knowledge of Methodist doctrine and polity. Ignorance is rarely the mother of heroic faith and devotion.

In these times there are multitudes of people in the various churches who are unable to give an intelligent reason why they are where they are. Not a few join a particular denomination without duly considering what it stands for—what its articles of faith comprise. Hence they come to believe that one church is about as good as another, and, of course, are utterly worthless as defenders of their own church. Many a Methodist, we are sorry to say, can give no better reason for being one than that his parents were Methodists.

The notion that one denomination is about as good as another is the source of no little indifference and disloyalty. Were such a belief to pervade the entire membership of the church, its usefulness and progress would soon be at an end. In order to fight efficiently, each soldier of the cross must march under the banner that he feels convinced, after serious reflection and careful investigation, best represents the truth of God. Persons who connect themselves with this or that denomination for social, family, or business considerations instead of love for and a true appreciation of its doctrines, are a drawback to any church. A small membership deeply in sympathy with the spirit and principles of our church will do far more in any community towards its upbuilding than a legion of members who know little and care less about the great doctrines for which she stands. Such people have no real attachment for the church as a church.

The great men in all ages have been men who believed something with all their hearts and souls. Some of them we know were wrong in their views, but the intensity of their convictions, and the confidence they had in their mission, were the cause of their mighty achievements. The lack of strong convictions, Dr. Joseph Parker thinks, is the one of the great evils of this age. It is undoubtedly true that a large per cent. of our Methodist folks are lacking in that devoted loyalty which ever proceeds from thorough knowledge of Methodist history and doctrine. We fear there are many among us, who, if questioned as to the Methodist creed, could say nothing except that it teaches "falling from grace." The ignorance that prevails in some sections regarding Methodist tenets is as shameful as it is hurtful. Certain preachers and people of the much-water persuasion (we mean only a few of them) are given to throwing it into the teeth of Methodists that they teach the unbiblical doctrine of "justification by works," and, shame to say, many of our people are so densely ignorant regarding our articles of faith as to be unable to gainsay it.

We have a broad platform to stand upon, and have reason to glory in the fact; but let us not become so liberal as to neglect to keep before the people the grand mission and doctrinal peculiarities of Methodism.

It is strangely true that while Baptists, Presbyterians, Romanists and others preach doctrinal sermons every now and then, little or no criticism being made by the public, such preaching by a Methodist frequently causes a buzz in the community, and other churchmen begin to raise the cry of intolerance and bigotry. To heed such a senseless clamor is to be untrue to our own best interests. We have nothing to fear from the proclamation and promulgation of our distinctive doctrines, provided they are not presented in a belligerent, dogmatic spirit. Arminian theology is fast leavening the creeds of all the churches.

We would urge our pastors, Sunday-school teachers and League workers to renewed diligence in the circulation of doctrinal pamphlets and tracts, and in their instruction of the people along doctrinal lines.

Let us leave no stone unturned in the way of work of indoctrination, for in the fierce rivalry of these times a church that slights this important duty will soon lag behind. In proportion as our people are grounded in the fundamentals of our creed will they be faithful and zealous. To be a loyal Methodist means to be a Christian in earnest. If any among us believe otherwise, let them at once join some other denomination, and not remain to act as a traitor in the camp.

Methodism has lost much in some sections by the disuse of the catechism in the Sunday-school. It is folly to expect our young people to develop into loyal Methodists unless they be carefully instructed in her doctrines. No other church that we know of is so negligent in this matter.

We are not so illiberal as to believe that ours is the only true church, or that there are few Christians in the other churches. We do hold, however, that Methodism is the grandest religious movement of modern times, and that she is fulfilling a mission peculiar to herself.

HOW TO DO TWO GOOD DEEDS AT ONE TIME.

We have a friend who is an agent for the Ladies' Home Journal, which is recognized as one of the best journals of the day. If this friend can get a large number of new names accompanied by the cash within three weeks from this date, it will be vastly advantageous to her. She needs money to aid her in the laudable work of educating her children. She is the daughter of an eminent and useful minister now gone to his reward in heaven. Will not some of our subscribers help her in this way? Those who do so will get value received for all the money they pay out, the Ladies' Home Journal being worth more than the subscription price in any household. Subscriptions may be sent to this office for the next three weeks.

A LECTURE ON GEN. LEE.

President E. Benjamin Andrews, of Brown University, lectured on Monday night to a large audience in the auditorium of Sophie Newcomb College, his subject being Gen. R. E. Lee. The lecture fully met public expectation, and that is saying a great deal. He is not only a profound thinker, but also an orator of high rank. He has an unbounded admiration for Gen. Lee. He can get an immense audience in this city whenever he chooses to come.

PROTESTS AGAINST THE ABOLITION OF THE SUNDAY LAW.

In different ways the people of Louisiana are working to prevent the repeal of the Sunday law by the Constitutional Convention. At Delhi our pastor, Rev. J. M. Martin, brought the matter before his congregation on Sunday, and there was a unanimous vote against the contemplated action. The colored pastors of the town took the same course with the same result. The vote was unanimous in every case.

AN APPEAL.

We desire to call special attention to the article of Rev. F. S. Parker. We happen to know of a young man who is a student at the Conference college who needs a small sum just at this time to enable him to go on with his course. He is a most worthy young man—a preacher. Surely such a case only needs to be stated in order to call forth numerous responses. Give what you are able to give, however small the sum may be.

A NEW BOOK.

CRUCIFIXION. By John H. Osborne. 10 mo. 85 pages. Wolcott & West, Syracuse, N. Y.

In this volume are brought to light facts with reference to the Roman method of crucifixion which are far from being generally known, and which are of extraordinary significance because of their connection with the sufferings and death of Christ. A number of erroneous notions regarding the manner of crucifixion are corrected, and explanations are given which are in more perfect accord with what history tells us of the practices, customs, and spirit of the Romans. The author makes it clear that in crucifying captives and criminals the Romans designed to inflict torture as cruel and prolonged as possible, and that never in anything done to or for the victim was there a merciful motive. He shows that in administering vinegar mixed with gall to the poor unfortunate, the aim was not to alleviate his suffering, but to stifle his cries by constricting the throat and the vocal organs. A more vivid picturing of the horrors of death by this method of punishment we have never seen.

The latter half of the volume is devoted to the consideration of the crucifixion of Jesus, certain striking facts and incidents attendant thereupon being discussed and explained. In considering the cause of Christ's early death, the author reaches the unique conclusion that our Lord, "consciously, and by the single operation of his own will, separated his own soul from his own body," and that for this he had received a special "commandment" from the Father, he being the only person ever authorized to effect such a separation. In support of this view the writer quotes the words of the Master: "No man taketh it (my life) from me, but I lay it down of myself," and insists upon their literal interpretation. The author justly remarks upon the danger of forgetting "that expiation and reconciliation were made on the cross through death (not annihilation) of the 'soul' of Jesus, and not through any corporeal agony." He thinks the theology and religious practice of Protestants has been too deeply infected by the Roman Catholic view of the expiatory and redemptive nature of the physical sufferings of Christ.

It is a reverent, thoughtful book, and is well worth reading.

CHURCH-GOING HABIT.

Some persons ask the question, "Is it wise to compel my children to go with me to church?" Certainly it is. The earlier they form the habit of attendance at church the easier it will be for them to go. Perhaps they will not enjoy the service. The little heads may "nid-nod" or find a place to rest on mother's lap, the Sabbath-school book or paper be read, but in the end they must feel the importance of being in the house of God, and form habits of going to church that will last for life. It is very easy for children in Christian homes to be in their places at church as each Sabbath returns, but the habit must be formed in childhood, so that it may be a part of their very nature. Christian parents will not leave the forming of habits in other things to the choice of the child; then why should they as regards the habit of going to church?—The Commonwealth.

While every effort should be put forth for spiritual enlargement and religious revival in the churches, the times also seem ripe for a better development of some of the attributes of man's moral nature, such as a nicer sense of justice, a finer appreciation of the equities, a keener sensitiveness to right and wrong, a sense of the brotherly relationship of all men—in short, all those ethical attributes which, because of little use nowadays, seem to have become greatly enervated and enfeebled and, in some instances, almost extinct. It may be fairly questioned whether the closing century is drifting toward or away from the Golden Rule. There are serious social discontent and suffering on every hand. Many attribute this to the feeble moral sense exercised in social relation and business transaction. Men, say they, are honest from compulsion, not from a sense of justice. We are sure society and the world of business both would be improved by a revival in ethics as well as in religion.—Ex.

AT JEANERETTE.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. R. M. Blocker, we lectured at Jeanerette, La., on the sixteenth. Having never visited Jeanerette before, we found that we had greatly underestimated its size. Instead of being a place of a few hundred inhabitants, it claims a population of near two thousand. It is a live, progressive town, and is steadily growing. It will have electric lights in the near future. The lecture was well attended by an appreciative audience. The proceeds went to the parsonage improvement fund. Bro. Blocker has made extensive additions to the parsonage in order to accommodate his orthodox family of ten. He is exceedingly popular not only with his own flock, but also with people of all creeds, who regret that the time-limit will soon remove him to another field.

We had delightful association with Bro. Blocker and his interesting family. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. and Sister Jackson. We had the pleasure of meeting some old friends, and making several new ones.

CUBAN SUFFERERS.

Nashville, Tenn., March 14, 1898.

MR. EDITOR: Last week I forwarded you an appeal in behalf of Cuban relief. Inclosed please find a communication just received from Bro. Somellian, our Cuban missionary in Tampa. This will reinforce what has already been sent. Am glad to say that the preachers of all denominations in Nashville have agreed to take up collections for this end. The need is so great, and the condition of the sufferers so critical, that what is done must be done quickly.

Yours cordially,
WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

Tampa, Fla., March 8, 1898.

DEAR DR. LAMBUTH: I suppose you are informed of the great distress prevailing among our Cuban people here in Tampa. Many refugees are located here, and many of the cigar factories are closed. The suffering among the unemployed is appalling. We have established three soup-houses, from which about 16,000 rations are served weekly. Were it not for this I am quite certain many would actually starve to death. Many are sick, and some have died among them. Our churches here are doing everything possible to relieve the suffering; but the need is greater than the ability to help. Bed clothing, wearing apparel, shoes, hats and some cash is greatly needed. The latter is used to supply medicine and the needed articles for the sick. The Baptist Mission here and the Congregational are receiving help from all over their connectional territory. I have so far appealed to our churches in Florida only, and many have responded. We want to do our duty in this charitable movement. The situation is about the same and will continue so for some time to come. We are depending upon our friends at home and abroad to keep our supplies from giving out. The spiritual good that is being done through this charitable work is simply wonderful. Some have been happily converted in our services, and there are in our own church about 16 applicants to be received into full membership. I appeal to every pastor and congregation within the territory of our great M. E. Church, South, for help in this our time of great need. I am sure your noble heart will send up an earnest prayer to the throne in our behalf.

May the Lord bless and keep you! is my prayer.

Your brother in Jesus,
H. B. SOMELLIAN.

About the only decent man the world has no respect for is the quibbler. We mean the pedantic porcupine who never reads an unbalanced sentence in a newspaper without sending the editor a column and a half of vinegar-soaked criticism; who never hears a sermon without going into spasms over some unscientific statement; who can't listen to a plain man talk in prayer meeting without jumping up to correct his rhetorical blunders. We can not hope to learn what part of the divine plan such men were intended to fill until we have heard the latest opinion of science on the mission of fleas.—Bible Reader.

LEARN TO BEAR CRITICISM.

One of the things a theological seminary should teach its students is, how to bear criticism with patience and equanimity. A minister gets criticised, unfairly, it may be, but not more unfairly than other men, and forthwith he is tempted to feel that his usefulness is at an end, and that he ought to resign. Nonsense! Such criticism is wholesome. It is a direct inspiration to patience and long-suffering. One has little chance to acquire these graces, if he runs away from the first opportunity for their exercise.—The Watchman.

It is a cheering sign to learn that there are evidences that the tide of population is now drifting toward the country. After the late war the tendency was away from the farm to the city. Labor gravitated toward the great centres of wealth. As the result, there has been terrible competition in trade and much overcrowding of population in our cities. Besides, the young have been growing up with the idea that rural life is tame, hard and unattractive, and that fame, enjoyment and fortune await them in some enchanting metropolis, East or West. But it is now stated that city experience is not what it was fancied to be. Many are finding out their mistake; that a better living, more comfort for the laborer's family, better health and more respectability and independence, with brighter prospects of substantial gains, are possible in the country. Ten years ago this idea would have been scouted at, but now it appears to be gaining favor, and is having its effect upon thousands. When it becomes more general, it will be better both for the dwellers in the city and in the country.—Presbyterian.

DR. DAVID MORTON

Has closed his earthly career. He as in splendid spirits, bnbbling over ith his accnstomed humor, when e were with him at the close of the eek. A little splinter in his thnmb turday scarcely attracted his attntion. On Snnday, in fine trim, he reached at Asbnry at 11 A. M. (the th) for Rev. L. B. Davidson, his e-long friend, and administered e sacrament. He dined with Bro. avidson, and enjoyed greatly his sit. He had preached a grand dis nrse from, "Despise not the day of nall things." A gospel of cheer for e hnmble and sorrowing. Perhaps ne of his greatest disconrses was e one on, "Gather up the fragents, that nothing be lost." He ached home in the evening comaining of his thnmb. During the ght he twice called the doctor who ved next door. When we called, onday, he was very sick. Blood isoning set in, the heart became voived and other complications ose; the grim monster came on ith a relentless and steady march, d at 9 A. M., Wednesday, claimed victim, the only foe to which that n will and brave heart had ever elded.

At 4 o'clock, Thursday, the fnral occnrred in Walnnt Street ethodist Chnrch with a packed nse, where many prominent dines and citizens were to be seen. hen we annonnced the opening mn,

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly," felt that these words to which he d clung while alive, and in the ick of the fight, were still dearer to n now, since the parting hour had me. His intimate friend, Rev. B. Biggs, followed with an nnctnons yer. Rev. J. S. Scobee, another end and fellow worker for more an half a century, annonnced the nd hymn,

"Servant of God, well done, Rest from thy loved employ."

. Moore and Dr. Chapman read lessons, and Bishop Hargrove llowed with a solid, strong disrse from the words, "Blessed are dead which die in the Lord from nceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that y may rest from their labors; for ir works follow with them." Dr. W. Lewis, whom Dr. Morton had ked some two months before to e a part at his fnneral, with deep otion paid a heartfelt tribnte to dead. After which Rev. L. B. vidson prayed with the old-time thodist fervor and liberty. Then me the last look, and we filed out the bnsy world our brother had t. The floral offerings were nnrons and very fine, but they could t greet the glazed eye, any more an honeyed speech could soothe dnll cold ear of death.

David Morton was not the soft ater that followed fancy. It took rock for him to walk on, a promise t was plain, and a hope that held like an anchor. Still he had heart as well as strength and business. Elevated to one of the most important offices in the church, he organized an infant enterprise with a master's hands, cut ont its grooves and set its pace and bnilt it np to magnificent proportions. He left all in snch complete order with subordinates so well trained, that the Board has entrnsted them with the bnsiness nntil the annual meeting the last of April, and probably nntil the General Conference fills his place.

In this brief mention I will not attempt a sketch of his life or analysis of his character. Many a one will hasten to speak on so inspiring a theme.

Epworth League

By H. N. HARRISON.

TOPIC FOR MARCH 27.—"MISSIONARY LEADINGS." Acts xvi, 6 14.

1. Panl made three great missionary jonrneys. His starting point was always Antioch in Syria. His first journey was with Barnabas and Mark. The second was with Silas, and the third with Timothy. Of conrse, there were other persons along with them on all these occasions. We are now with Panl and Silas on the second jonrney. We find that they had picked np Timothy on their way through Lystra. What a grand trio were these! They were filled and thrilled with one desire—the evangelization of the Gentile world. These were trnly fishers of men who endnred heroic hardships in the Master's cause. Their love for Jesns and the sonls of men discounted all obstacles. We imagine we can hear the great apostle exclaiming as he contemplated the terrors of these dangerons jonrneys, "None of these things move me, neither connt I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my conrse with joy."

2. The missionary spirit is the moving impulse of every true Christian. Whenever a man is soundly converted, his first thought is, "I must tell it!" When this desire to tell it departs, the convert has fallen back upon a lower plane. He has lost the freshness and joy of his experience (Rev. ii, 1-5). A Christian without the missionary spirit is as salt without savor. When the missionary spirit dies out of a church, its members become dry bones. (Matt. v, 13 16.)

3. Paul and Silas "were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia," and when they turned their faces toward Bithynia in the northeast, "the Spirit suffered them not." Rather, this unerring Guide turned their footsteps to Troas in the northwest on the Ægean Sea. Here Paul had his vision in the night of the man crying out to him from the Macedonian darkness, "Come over and help us." Immediately taking ship, they betook themselves to Philippi and were soon imprisoned in the Philippian dungeon. Here, at midnight, with their feet in the stocks, and their backs bleeding from many stripes, those two men broke forth into songs of praise and thankfulness to God. What wonderful singers were Paul and Silas! And what a wonderful prayer meeting they were holding there in the dungeon! Their song in the night watches rose up from the inner dungeon and fell strangely upon the prisoners' ears. They listened. Never before had they heard of Jesus and the resurrection; never before had they seen men so wonderfully serene and joyful under such hard conditions. Even the prison walls began to tremble under the power and presence of God, and the jailer himself, overcome by conviction for sin, came and fell at their feet, saying, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Thus, if we are faithful witnesses for Christ, and willing to enter into the fellowship of his sufferings, the Holy Spirit will surely guide us in our missionary work, not all the time into easy, pleasant places, but always for the glory of God. (II. Tim. iii, 10-12; Isaiah xlviii, 17; Ps. xxxii, 8; Acts i, 8.)

4. It is a supreme honor to be prompted of God to special missionary work. Our Father is seeking for men and women whom he can trust with these divine commissions. Many are resisting his earnest promptings. Here and there a voice cries out, "Here am I, send me!" If those whom God thus calls to posts of honor in his kingdom prefer ease and comfort, houses and lands, it follows inevitably that they have their reward. They become humdrum Christians—or worse. Does any Epworth Leaguer shrink back from being a missionary for Christ? Then you shrink back from the supreme honor and the highest privilege. Do we hear God calling, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" If we hear this voice and would shine as the stars forever and ever, then we must come forward as volunteers for him and the gospel's sake. (Isaiah, vi, 8; Dan. xii, 3.)

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has always been kept up to the standard. It is the same it was forty years ago, the best sold.

A few weeks since we published an editorial notice of the above-named book. Here is our editorial notice:

A NEW BOOK.

THE HOME OF THE BIBLE: WHAT I SAW AND HEARD IN PALESTINE. By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 416 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day; how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

We were so much delighted with the book that we resolved, if possible, to offer it to our subscribers at a reduced price. We are glad to be able to state that we have made arrangements whereby we can offer it at a price within the reach of all.

OUR PREMIUM PRICE.

We do not sell the book at all to those unprogressive people who do not take and pay for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. But to our subscribers we sell it at the low price of $1.25, postpaid. The only condition attached is that one's subscription must be paid up one full year in advance—viz., to April, '99—at the regular rate of $2 a year.

AT SET OF SUN.

If we sit down at set of sun
And count the things that we have done,
And, counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard,
One glance, most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then we may count the day well spent.

But if, through all the livelong day,
We've eased no heart by yea or nay;
If through it all
We've done no thing that we can trace
That brought the sunshine to a face—
No act, most small,
That helped a soul and nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost.

—South African Methodist.

THE POWER OF A SMILE.

A young man was once confined in a darkened chamber by a long and painful illness. The inmates of the house were distant relatives, and seemed to think that they were doing their whole duty toward the friendless youth by allowing him to remain there. They seldom went into his room, and his attendant was a sad-faced old woman who never smiled.

The young man became despondent, and resolved to commit suicide. While he was writing a note telling his reasons for ending his life a knock was heard upon the door, and a sweet-faced lady entered. She was a neighbor, and hearing of his illness, had sought him out.

She smiled so sweetly that even before she spoke the young man gave up the idea of the crime which he had contemplated. She spoke a few encouraging words to him, and when she placed her soft hand upon his hot forehead in a motherly way he broke down and sobbed like a child. She smiled again, and knelt in silent prayer by his bedside, with the sweet love token by which God spoke to him still glowing upon her bright, womanly face.

In that holy silence all his bitterness of soul left him, and there came an intense desire to seek and find Christ. The repentant one felt the presence of God's Spirit, and his hungry soul cried out for rest and peace. Ere the smile had faded from the upturned face of the Christian woman, the loving Savior had entered the open door of the seeking soul.

In a week's time the young man left the dim chamber of pain, and went out into the great world to do the Master's work.—American Messenger.

BARRED OUT.

Many a father is almost as much of a stranger to his boys as though they were simply casual visitors at his residence, lads whose existence he recognized and in whose welfare he had a general interest, but with whom he was not on confidential terms, and never expected to be. An incident that has recently come to our knowledge may be taken as typical of others. There was once a little fellow who had a father whom he reverenced and feared, but in whose presence he never felt at ease, and with whom he indulged in the briefest conversation. One day the little fellow was at his grandmother's home, standing in the kitchen doorway, when his father chanced along and stopped to chat with the grandmother. As he talked he put a hand on the boy's head, patting it occasionally and running his fingers through the hair. The man was probably unconscious of what he was doing, but the child did not know that, and his little heart swelled with love for the father. Nearly fifty years have flown away since that memorable hour, but the boy, living in an Eastern State, recently said that the incident had ever remained fresh in his memory, and that it is one of the most pleasing reminiscences of his childhood.

This picture of a timid lad, hungry for love, and in his loneliness barred out from the recesses of his father's heart, is full of pathetic significance and suggestive ness. How many more such lads are there in the world? Fathers, give a little thought to your boys. Show them that you love them. Invite their confidence. Give them yours. It will pay.—Central Advocate.

is the name to remember when buying Sarsaparilla. Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been curing people right along for nearly 50 years. That is why it is acknowledged to be the sovereign Sarsaparilla. It is the original and the standard. The record of the remedy is without a rival,—a record that is written in the blood of thousands, purified by its power.

"I nursed a lady who was suffering from blood poisoning and must have contracted the disease from her; for I had four large sores, or ulcers, break out on my person. I doctored for a long time, both by external application and with various blood medicines; but in spite of all that I could do, the sores would not heal. At last I purchased six bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, thinking I would give it a thorough trial. Before the six bottles had been taken, the ulcers were healed, the skin sound and natural, and my health better than it had been for years. I have been well ever since. I had rather have one bottle of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla than three of any other kind."—Mrs. A. F. TAYLOR, Englevale, N. Dak.

Get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

DO, THEN SAY.

It is not wise to boast of what you are going to do. The possibility is that you may never carry your purposes into execution. There is many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip. Not a tithe of the plans which are formed for great undertakings ever get beyond the tentative stage. When you have really accomplished some worthy thing, it will be time for you to congratulate yourself. But it is not likely that you will then be inclined to esteem your performance at a very high rate. The experiences of life develop modesty and sobriety. After a man has brought an important task to a satisfactory issue, he is usually more inclined to address himself to some fresh enterprise than to waste his time in the contemplation of what he has already done. It is characteristic of high and strong souls to forget the things that are behind and to press forward to those that are before.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

VON MOLTKE WAS READY.

When the Franco-Prussian war was declared, it is said that Von Moltke was awakened at midnight and told of the fact. He said coolly to the official who aroused him, "Go to pigeon-hole No. —— in my safe, take a paper from it, and telegraph as there directed to the different troops of the empire." He then turned over and went to sleep, and awoke at his accustomed hour in the morning. Every one else in Berlin was much excited, but Von Moltke took his morning walk as usual, and a friend who met him said: "General, you seem to be taking it very easy. Aren't you afraid of the situation? I should think you would be very busy." "Ah," replied Von Moltke, "all my work for this time has been done long beforehand, and everything that can be done now has been done."—Success.

TOO MUCH DISCIPLINE.

Young mothers, and young fathers, too, are apt to discipline their children too much. In their great anxiety that their little ones should do credit to their training, they observe many things which it would be wise to pass over without apparent notice, and they deal too much in punishment. Our children are imitative beings, and in many cases all that is really necessary is to set before them examples of patience, of fortitude and of gentle manners and good breeding. If the mother is uniformly sincere and self-controlled, her children will thrive in an atmosphere of truth and sweetest courtesy.—Intelligencer.

BEWARE.

There are signs put up at every railroad crossing to warn people of the danger. The signs are in different forms—"Railway Crossing"; "Look out for the Locomotive"; "Stop! Look! Listen!" etc. tendent, "if there is one symptom more prevalent than any other, I should say it is the habit of asking foolish questions."—Exchange.

All the really best things in human life are as accessible to the poor as to the rich.

Hygiene.

HOT OR COLD BATHS AFTER MEALS.

Especial mention should be made of the injury to the digestive organs quite certain to result from taking either a hot or a cold bath soon after eating. Few people are aware of the danger of laying the foundation for years of discomfort in this way. If a bath be a hot one, the stomach will be deprived of the blood necessary to support the rapid secretion of gastric juice for digestion of the food, by its being drawn to the surface of the body by the sudden relaxation of the capillaries and small vessels of the skin. A cold bath, on the other hand, or sudden exposure to cold, may, by causing contraction of the blood-vessels of the surface of the body, cause sudden congestion of the stomach, which is equally fatal to good digestion. Very nearly the same danger exists from bathing just before a meal.

The practice, very common among boys and young men, of going into the water in the Summer-time, regardless of the condition of digestion or other condition of the body, is a bad one.

With many it is a very usual practice two or three times a week, if not oftener, to go into the water immediately after the evening meal, not even allowing time for the work of digestion to become established. No bath involving any considerable portion of the body should be taken within two hours after a meal, except by the advice of a physician.—Good Health.

SPIRITUAL SUNSHINE.

Bear in mind that your happiness or your misery are very much of your own making, says Theodore Cuyler. You can not create spiritual sunshine any more than you can create the morning star, but you can put your soul where Christ is shining. Begin every day with God. Keep a clear conscience and a good stock of Bible promises within reach. Keep a strong, robust faith that can draw honey out of a rock and oil out of the flinty rock.

Never spend a day without trying to do somebody good, and then, keeping step with your Master, march on toward home over any road, however rough, and against any head winds that blow. It will be all sunshine when we get to heaven, and "there is no night there!"

NOTED DUNCES.

Wellington was a very dull scholar at Eton. Sir Walter Scott was declared "a blockhead." Dr. Chalmers was expelled from St. Andrew's for stupidity, Goldsmith was "the laughing-stock of schoolmasters," Gladstone lagged behind his classmates in stupid indifference. And the same was true of many of the world's worthies until their lives culminated in an all-absorbing purpose, which bent everything to its mandate.—Selected.

My character to-day is, for the most part, simply the resultant of all the thoughts I have ever had, of all the feelings I have ever cherished, and all the deeds I have ever performed. It is the entirety of my previous years packed and crystallized into the present moment. So that character is the quintessence of biography; so that anybody who knows my character—and there is no keeping character under cover—knows what for forty or more years I have been doing and been thinking. Character is, for the most part, simply habit become fixed.—The Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst.

The superintendent of one of our insane asylums was once badgered in the witness box by a lawyer who insisted on making the great specialist give one symptom that was present in all cases of insanity. The superintendent showed that there are many symptoms, and that they differ in different persons. The lawyer persisted in demanding one symptom. "Well," said the superintendent, "if there is one symptom more prevalent than any other, I should say it is the habit of asking foolish questions."—Exchange.

EAT APPLES AND BE HEALTHY.

According to Dr. G. R. Searles, the apple is medicinal in a marked degree. He says: "The apple is such common fruit that very few people are familiar with its remarkable efficacious medicinal properties. Everybody ought to know that the very best thing they can do is to eat apples just before retiring for the night. Persons uninitiated in the mysteries of the fruit are liable to throw up their hands in horror at the visions of dyspepsia which such a suggestion may summon up, but no harm can come to even a delicate system by eating of ripe and juicy apples just before going to bed. The apple is an excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digestible shape than any other vegetable known. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep, and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all. The apple agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach, helps the kidney secretions, and prevents calculus growths, while it obviates indigestion and is one of the best preventatives known of diseases of the throat. Everybody should be familiar with such knowledge. In addition, next to the orange and lemon, it is the best antidote for the thirst and craving of the person addicted to the alcohol or the opium habit."—Florida Citizen.

OUR MOTHER.

MR. EDITOR: I simply bring in a brief note, linked indissolubly with our earliest memories blessed thoughts of the dear old mother. That dearest of all earthly friends—our mother—read the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE when we were a baby, and spiritual supplies gathered therein by that noted, saintly ancestor strengthened her for battle of faith. A backward glance upon our own insignificant way, a thought regarding our individual weakness and the temptations to which we have been exposed, more and more, as the years fly by, confirms us in the belief that our life would have been worse than vanity had it not been for the restraining and elevating influences of Christian parentage. We believe that it is far better to have pious and faithful ancestors than to be born a king's son—yea, than to sway the scepter of a universal empire. If human life is other than a myth, Christian growth and development amazingly overtops all others; and as in the natural domain, so also in the spiritual. "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined." That dear mother reels from her years, and the children to whom she read the dear old ADVOCATE are trying to walk in the path that dear mother trod.

There is nothing like having Christian parents to influence a child. How hallowed is the spot where, at morn, noon, and night, my sainted mother knelt in prayer! Often have I dreamed as she prayed that God would bless and make us true and humble Christians. Now her voice is silent, and we are left; but I pray God, in his mercy and goodness, to never leave and forsake us.

Tender, yet sad, farewell
From her quivering lips was heard;
So softly she closed that quiet stream
That 'twas not by a ripple stirred.

She was spared the pain of parting tears,
She was spared all mortal strife;
She was scarcely dying—she only passed
In a moment to endless life.

A CHILD.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

TUCKER—Sister LAURA A. TUCKER was born of pious Christian parents in South Carolina, Oct 22, 1828, and died at the home of her son, Jno. E Tucker, in Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 16, 1898. Her parents moved from South Carolina and settled in Hardin county, Tenn., where she was reared to womanhood. Her father was a Methodist preacher, at whose death, while she was quite young, the mother, true to her God and her children, kept the fire burning on the family altar. In her early girlhood she yielded to the Holy Spirit, and gave her heart to God and her life and influence to the Methodist Church. Her oldest brother, Jno. W. Able, became a Methodist preacher, and was a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and died at her home while in charge of Long Creek circuit, Panola county, Miss.

When seventeen years old she was married to Riley W. Tucker, with whom she lived happily for nearly fifty-three years. By this union were born fourteen children, six of whom were reared to manhood, and all are members of the Methodist Church.

After the war the family moved to Memphis, and she connected herself with the Saffell Street Church, and afterwards transferred her membership to Pennsylvania Avenue Church, of which she was a loved and honored member at her death.

Three of her sons and her two daughters—Mrs Anna Rankin and Florence Furr—live in Memphis. Hezlep, the oldest son, was the beloved ruling elder of Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, until his death a few years since.

The Christian life in her home impressed itself upon her children as to be the means of leading them all to Christ. In the church her life was so beautiful and consistent that all were drawn to her, and she was honored and loved by all. She was a constant reader of the Bible, and read it through many times. She loved the house of God, and never failed to be present when it was possible, even in feeble health. As a wife, a mother, a sister, and a Christian, she was true and loyal. She was sick only a few days, and when she realized the end was approaching she manifested evidence of her sure and full readiness to go to her Lord, and left the testimony that she "pleased God." Her life was one of love, and her death a triumph of faith. M. F. LEAKE, Pastor.

LEWIS—Rev. W. D. LEWIS, a local preacher, was called to labor and to live. After a long and useful life he has gone to his reward, leaving behind him the fruits of his toil to bless the world, and the heritage of a good name to his bereaved family. He was born in Cornoker county, Ala., Oct. 24, 1819, living there until about 1839, when he moved to Mississippi, but in a year returned to his home in Alabama. In the Fall of 1841 he was converted, and soon after joined the Methodist Church. He was married to Miss Elender [illegible] January, last, more than eleven years ago she went to her reward. During the same year he was licensed to preach, and has ever since engaged in this work in some degree. After his marriage he returned to Mississippi, and in 1867 he came to Texas, his home having been mostly in Cherokee county, where he closed his pilgrimage. He was ordained deacon in 1858 by Bishop Paine, and was ordained elder in 1868 by Bishop Doggett. He preached his last sermon on his seventy-eighth birthday, and soon after was confined with the affliction that ended in his death, Feb. 3, 1898. As a supply on works in the East Texas Conference he served faithfully for four years, and as a local preacher was useful in the church. As his pastor I found him helpful to me and to the work. He lived in faith and died in peace. Four children have preceded him to the world beyond, and five survive to scatter seed in the field of the world. Two boys and three girls remain to comfort each other, and may the comforts of grace be theirs! V. A. GODBEY.

BURNEY—WILLIS PEYTON BURNEY was born in Lenn county, Fla., Sept. 21, 1811, and died in Lake Providence, La., Feb. 10, 1898. Until his twenty-fifth year his life was spent in the neighborhood of his nativity, and there, after having served as a soldier in the war of secession, he was married to Mrs. Keziah C. Burney, whose brother, Rev. Robert C. Grace, is at this time a traveling preacher in the Louisiana Conference. From Florida Mr. Burney moved to Thomasville, Ga., and thence in 1873 to East Carroll parish, La.

In his youth Mr. Burney connected himself with the M. E Church, South, and remained loyal and efficient in the discharge of the duties of a Christian until the end. His conversion occurred at the time of, or shortly after, his reception into the church. He held tenaciously to his conviction of the reality of a change of heart, and of the necessity of such a change in order to salvation. Reticent and not gifted in expression, he yet bore his testimony in word when occasion offered, and within a year of his death had ventured upon public prayer in the Epworth League meetings. He had been diligent and efficient as a member of the Board of Stewards in his home church for years, and was at the time of his death an official member of the church in Lake Providence. The Sunday-school was his chosen field of Christian effort, and he succeeded in a remarkable degree in winning the affection of the boys whom he taught. He has left a deeply felt vacancy in the church.

The illness that proved fatal to Mr. Burney was of long duration, and he had ample time to contemplate the end of life. Resignation to the will of God was complete, and hope of life everlasting bright. Evidently alluding to the words of "Stonewall" Jackson, quoted in the hymn beginning, "When our work is ended we shall sweetly rest," he prayed during the last night of his life, "Lord, help me to pass over." Nor was his Helper absent in the trying hour.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER.

SHEPARD—The subject of this memoir, Bro. W. L. SHEPARD, was born Oct 4 1818, in Missouri, and died at his residence near Natchez, Feb 6, 1898

In early youth he wandered extensively over the Western States and Territories. Finally "the destiny that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we will," pointed his footsteps South to Mississippi. Here he met and was married to Miss Frances Rile, Nov. 26, 1871, by Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, and both joined the church on the same eventful day. He was converted at the first protracted meeting held at Locust Grove Church by Rev. Perry Dinkins.

He left a wife and seven children to mourn his loss, and exemplify his teachings and example. He served the church in the several capacities of steward, trustee, Sunday-school superintendent, and president of Epworth League. His heart was always in the work.

His death-bed scene was one of the most triumphant ever witnessed—a powerful testimony to the reality of religion. He had made his peace, calling and election sure, and had no fear of death.

"Let me die the death of the righteous, and let our last end be like his." A. C. Y.

SMITH—Mr. A. G SMITH was born May 12, 1830, and departed this life Feb. 4 1898, at his home near Emory, Miss. He joined the Methodist Church, and lived a Christian life. May the Lord comfort those whom he has so sadly bereaved! God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen best to take him to that beautiful home beyond the skies. We should bear in mind that he is far happier than if with us, and the thought should enable us to say, "Thy will be done." We tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family in this, their sad affliction, and commend them to our heavenly Father's care, and trust they may meet their father in the home beyond the stars. Grieve not as those who have no hope, for your father is not dead. He has only gone before, and do not wish to call him back from his home of rest to this world of pain and sorrow, but be prepared to meet death as he did—with peace. A FRIEND.

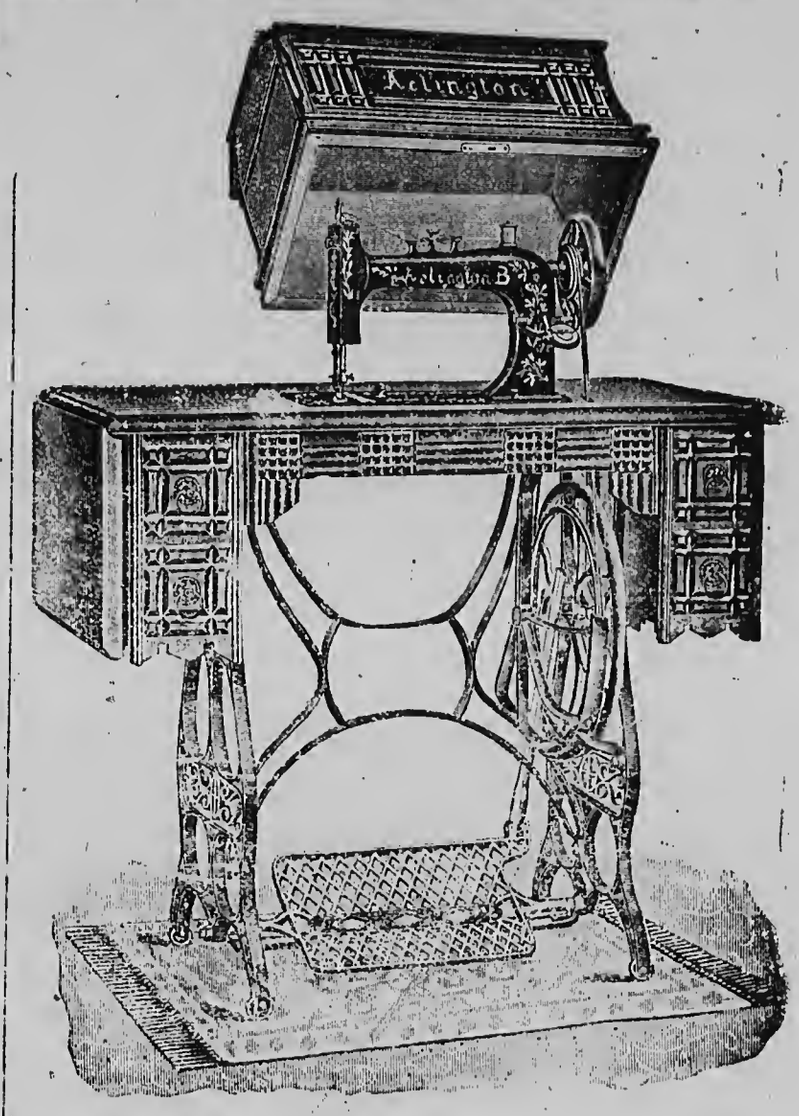
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and frictions points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

These concerns together are furnishing the bureau about 20,000 pounds daily, and within a week or so it is expected the capacity of these two works will be brought up to 40,000 pounds of powder daily. HOW TO GET TEACHERS.

Write to J. M. Dewberry, Manager of "The School Agency," Birmingham, Ala., stating kind of teacher desired and the pay. He recommends efficient teachers to Schools, Colleges and Families, free of charge throughout the South and Southwest. Sells and rents school property.

Efficient teachers desiring information should write for circulars.

THE EASTER SERVICE.

Each auxiliary of the North Mississippi Conference has, doubtless, received ere this the programs for the Easter service. These are prepared at the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, and the proceeds of the occasion will be devoted to the Belle Bennett chair, to which the Easter offerings for several years have been given.

I would urge the use of this exercise wherever it is possible to do so. In the first place, the object to be helped is such a worthy one. Miss Bennett's labors have been so abundant, so devoted and untiring, and to her labors is due to such a great degree the establishment of this splendid institution, that it is a richly deserved honor thus to hold her name, with her loving services, in everlasting remembrance. More than one-half of the amount required for the endowment of this chair is in hand, and if the matter receives the attention it deserves, it will not be long before the full amount is collected and its benefits being realized. Thus will our Easter offering be far-reaching for good.

But we can come nearer home and consider the gain to ourselves from its observance. The program is very fine, replete with information, and interesting and attractive in every way. Much time has been spent on it by those who are intelligently informed on the subject of missions, and whose hearts are on fire with love for the heathen nations. Thus those who study it for this occasion and those who hear it will be greatly benefited and will have poured into their own hearts far more than the amount given toward the fund.

In many places, doubtless, your Missionary Society has not had a public meeting for a year, or even longer, and this exercise will be an attractive and inspiring way in which to present the cause to your community. I would, therefore, urge lady managers and their workers to take diligent hold upon the work and use it to the glory of God and the spread of his kingdom.

Mrs. G. H. Lipscomb.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ROUTE TO BALTIMORE VIA WASHINGTON CITY.

The Chesapeake and Ohio railway with its connections offers by far the most interesting route to the Conference in Baltimore in May. The route from Louisville is through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, passing Frankfort, the State Capital, Lexington, and the home of Henry Clay. At Ashland the line from Cincinnati is joined; the route from Cincinnati being along the banks of the beautiful Ohio river for 165 miles. Shortly after entering West Virginia the banks of the Kanawha river are followed, Kanawha Falls is passed and the canons of New River are penetrated. After skirting the picturesque Greenbrier for 50 miles, the heights of the Alleghenies are reached and next comes the Shenandoah Valley, the Blue Ridge Mountains and Piedmont section, the most beautiful of the Appalachain Valley. After passing through Charlottesville and Gordonsville, the route is through the most memorable battle fields of the Civil War, among them Cedar Mountain, Culpepper, Rappahannock, Warrenton Junction, Manasses and Bull Run.

COLLEGE EDUCATION UNDER CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES FOR OUR GIRLS.

BY REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, D. D.,

Pastor Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss.

This is the need of the church and the ever-increasing demand of the times. It is long since too late to plead for the education of our girls. Everybody concedes this as imperative, but there are two classes among us that need to be persuaded and aroused to the necessity of higher education for them, and that their education must be positively under church direction. To the first of these classes belong a few, extremely conservative, who clamor for "old-style womanhood," with the superficial education that vapored into the so-called accomplishments; to the second class belong a few, extremely radical, who demand "the new woman," trained in a godless State college, "unfettered and unrestrained," and that means unguided. We want neither. Extremes meet, and one extreme begets another. The ultra conservatism of the one class has brought about the extreme radicalism of the other. Most positively we want neither.

In the first place, we want a college education for our girls, and that means that we want them taught the higher mathematics, not merely the "school" algebra and the lower geometries and trigonometries—mere makeshifts with high-sounding titles—but the "college" algebra and analytical trigonometry and calculus, as at the mathematics taught at Millsaps and Centenary; and it means that they should be allowed and encouraged to learn Latin and Greek, and not graduate at the end of Virgil and Homer, but read a full college course; and it means that English should be well taught to them, higher English including Anglo-Saxon and the Old English of Chaucer—not merely a little of Milton and Shakespeare, a smattering of rhetoric and a touch of "English literature;" and it means that physics and chemistry, logic and psychology, should outrank the language of flowers," miscalled botany," and a little composition miscalled "rhetoric." We want these things taught to our girls. We do not want an elaborate course of study like no girl ever pursues printed in our college catalogues as a basis for the claim that the college is very high-grade, and as a lure to capture girls who follow the growing fashion and seek a high-grade college. It is time to stop all of this sham in female education. The education which every parent consults with the conditions wants to find is not, What is the course of study in the catalogue? but it is, What do the girls study in the college? How many girls in our colleges are pursuing a real A. B. course? Alas! too few. The majority of them are pressing for M. E. L. And what is M. E. L.? Merely a sham degree not worth the sham parchment on which its diploma is printed. It is high time that we Methodists should remember that we claim to be Christians, and should drop all of this sham business in female education. We want a real college for our girls, one whose diploma means as much as a diploma from Centenary, or Emory, or Millsaps.

The answer is made that the female colleges, so called, give the girls just what they call for. This is but half true. As a matter of course, not one girl in a hundred entering the Freshman class has wisdom and foresight and bravery enough to demand, against the fashion and the discouragement of the college people, a real A. B. course; and very few of the parents are thoughtful and far-seeing enough to urge it. It is the business of us men and women, who have these educational matters in hand, to create a demand for higher education. It can be done; it has been done. I knew a girl's college, some years ago, with over a hundred pupils, in which seventy-five per cent. of the whole student body studied Latin, and thirty-five per cent. studied Greek. If the same efforts were put forth to induce the girls to press for the A. B. degree as are used to persuade them to take music and art and French, almost every degree conferred would be A. B., or, at least, B. S. I think every man and woman in the State, who has ever taught a year in a college, knows this. When a college has a hundred studying music, and not one seeking an A. B. degree, there is something radically wrong in its management. Such a condition of affairs may be very wholesome to the president's pocket-book, but it must be harrowing somewhat to his conscience.

The question is asked, Do our girls really need higher education? Some think that they do not. A few urge that higher education will make them unwomanly, and a very few declare that a girl can not take a really high education. Ignorance prompts the latter statement, for it is well known that some of the finest scholars in England and America are women, and a superficial observation dictates the first, for it is a fact, beyond all question, that some of the womanliest women of the world are the most learned; and it is also true that ignorant women are generally unwomanly. If womanliness means anything, it involves refinement, and true refinement and ignorance can not exist together. Refinement is a natural and immediate outgrowth of learning.

Let us study this question from a very practical point of view. Do our girls need a college education to fit them for life's common duties? Their sex makes them naturally more helpless than men. "But," you say, "they will get married." Suppose your daughter does marry, and by the time she is the mother of five or six children she is left a widow—then what? Suppose she has something left her, and does not know how to manage it—then what? Go into hundreds of widows' houses in our great cities and see the hard, hard struggle for bread; read in their womanly faces the sad records of motherly agony over poverty-stricken children. Even on the hills and in the valleys of our rural districts they may be found battling against awful odds in the avenues of unwomanly drudgery. One near Woodville, Miss., worked in the cotton field along with the negroes; she had to do it or beg. In this country, where negroes do all of our manual labor, no white woman can compete with them. Who wants to hire a white cook, or house-maid, or nurse? Nobody. Even a white seamstress finds little to do. A white woman thrown on her own resources must find mental work to do, or must get down into a drudgery and a humiliated poverty known nowhere else. A widow came and begged that she might sweep the floors of my college for her bread and shelter. She came and tried; I could not keep her. To-day she is a wretched pauper on the world's cold charity. That woman was reared in the lap of luxury. Her home was a palace; her dress and equipage were royal; her family one of the finest of those baronial ante-bellum days in Mississippi. She married well, but her education was superficial, and this is the result.

I knew two sisters. One without education married while a girl; circumstances favored the higher education of the second. She said to me just before her graduation: "I owe to you and your college all I am or ever will be. I shudder when I think of what I would have been had you not gotten me into your college." The first is a faded wife and mother immersed in poverty and drudgery; the second the happy wife of a gifted and successful young professional man. Were the first left a widow, her lot would be more and more wretched; were the second left a widow, she would be independent, for she easily supported herself before she was married.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES"—NO. 1.

In your issue of March 10 "Layman or Sextus" has an article under the heading quoted above, which, I think, calls for a reply. It seems that "Layman or Sextus" is a lawyer, as he evinces familiarity with the teachings of the law books. I am not at all certain that "the common law is the perfection of human reasoning" in all its parts; but it is not my purpose to discuss this proposition in this paper, or in these papers. I am willing to admit that "Sextus" knows the law books, and that he keeps himself fully abreast of the latest and best information to be had in connection with his profession. This is the right and the wise thing for him to do.

If I am not mistaken, "Sextus" knows more about law, and the correct interpretation thereof, than he does about the Holy Scriptures and the meaning of them. It is to this feature of this subject that I wish now to direct special attention. If I am not greatly mistaken, "Sextus" blunders in his interpretations of the Word of God. This is not to be wondered at; one man can not know everything. A man may be wise in law, and at the same time not be very proficient in the Word and doctrine of God. I am free to confess my ignorance of law, for my talents and my time have been spent in study in another direction. I doubt not but that I would be a better teacher and preacher of the gospel if I knew more about law, and, perhaps, "Sextus" would be a better lawyer if he knew more of the Scriptures.

It seems to me, too, that "Sextus," in some things, has misread "the signs of the times," or else he has read them through colored glasses. I take it, from the style of his writing, that he is yet a young man, but one who has been so absorbed in legal lore that he has fallen behind the procession, and has lost step with the age in which he lives. It may be that he has been as good as asleep for the past twenty years, and has just waked up and finds things all wrong because they are not just as they were twenty years ago.

Some good men who are in favor of progress and improvement in most things are dead set against any advancement in other things. Their prejudices and preconceived opinions on some subjects would forever block the car of progress along some lines. Paul prayed to be "delivered from unreasonable men"—absurd men; men who pretended to be in favor of the progress of the gospel, and yet stood in the way of it. He wanted them to clear the track "that the gospel might have free course and be glorified." Some men do nothing but stand in the way now.

Some of the positions taken by "Sextus," it seems to me, tend to hinder rather than help the cause of God among men. If all were of his way of thinking, the largest and best corps of God's army would be idle and silent on the field during a terrific engagement with the combined powers of darkness and sin.

The object of these papers is to refute these positions so confidently put forth by this young and erudite limb of the law, or such I take him to be. In the department of law, and the legal status of woman as fixed by law, I am free to confess my lack of extensive and accurate information; but such information as I have does not tend to increase my admiration for the common law nor for the statutory provisions of many, if not most, of the civilized nations of the earth.

If I blunder, and am thereby likely to mislead others, "Sextus," and members of the legal fraternity generally, can set me right. Anyway, at present I do not think the legal status of woman, as stated in the common law and in most the statutory provisions, is fair and just.

Again, I think "Sextus" has read the Word of God through his legal glasses, and that he interprets Scripture in the light of law. In this way the Word of God may be made as binding and grinding on woman as the law itself. It would be better to look at law in the light of Scripture than to look at the Scriptures in the light of law. It is certain that God has not cut out one road to heaven for men, and another and different road for women. We all go by the same road and are bound by the same divine law. Whatever is morally right for men is also morally right for women.

Lastly, the principle advocated by "Sextus," if adopted and carried out, would shut Christian women off from several wide fields of usefulness that would be almost wholly uncultivated and but poorly cultivated but for them. I am sure this is not in harmony with the Word of God, the spirit of the gospel, and the needs and condition of a world that lieth in sin.

I am not nearly so anxious to reply to "Sextus" as I am to exhibit truth before the people. So, if I use my unknown legal friend as a text or a pretext for the exhibition of the truth, I hope he will bear with me for the truth's sake. GILDEROY.

OUR GIRLS.

No careful student of the drift of events can be blind to the fact that the education of our girls is one of the most vital quantities to be considered in relation to our future place in the line of civilization. Whether the changed conditions of our womanhood in relation to the public life is for the best may not be clearly apparent to many, but this does not affect the fact that this changed condition is on us, and the demand of the hour is, how best to conserve and direct the force which womanhood is to exert upon the public life. In the home, in the school-room, in the avenues of industry, and in the broad field of foreign evangelism, woman is a quantity to be considered; and in order that harm may not come, a cultivated and thoroughly furnished womanhood is imperatively demanded. Supreme in the home, well-nigh in command of our schools, found in the busy ways of commerce, and in the lead in the movements of the church in relation to aggressive work, the good or evil influence of this vast force must depend upon the character of education furnished. The States, recognizing this, have provided for the young women schools upon the basis of those provided for their young men, and the half education of the State will be their heritage to general damage unless the church provides a full system, and facilities for their thorough education in the full development of the equally forceful quantities found in their mental and moral natures. The State proposes only to educate the mind, and let the soul powers go undeveloped, and thus increase the capacity for evil, with no moral check, and would place young womanhood in the position of having the most dangerous of all weapons, with no knowledge of how rightfully to use it, unless the moral nature be developed equally with the mental. On the church must largely devolve the great work of educating our young womanhood, in order that the conditions which render it the more forceful may, at the same time, render it the more useful, for only Christian culture can do this. In order to this, the church must awake to the fact that she must provide as fully in well-equipped and fully endowed institutions of learning for her girls as for her boys. Female schools unendowed can not compete with the State schools any more than could our male schools under the same conditions, and hence we must make the same provisions for our female schools as we do for our schools for our boys.

The time was when the State made no arrangement for the girls as she did for her boys. Then the church could successfully carry on institutions of learning for her girls without endowment, for there was no competition; but now the State provides for the girls, and the church must compete by endowing schools for the girls, and offering them as cheap education as does the State, or else she must see their education pass out of her hands, and the half education furnished by the State take the place of Christian education, the only safeguard of man or woman along the line of mental development.

Will our people awake to this fact and make the needed provision? If so, well for the future, but if not, then the time must come when a teaching and hurtful force will be felt, ultimately to result in a drifting away of womanhood from the church, and the entrenchment of infidelity in the home, the school, and the social world.

No greater work could be done for the church and our young women of Mississippi than the endowment of the Grenada Female College, the property of the church, and I write this only to call attention to this in the hope of awakening an interest in this work.

Can not the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences endow this school, so that here our girls may go as our boys go to Millsaps College at Jackson, and our girls and boys be brought up under the fostering care of the church? Let us all think seriously and prayerfully as to this matter, and recognize our responsibility to God and our children. What say you, brethren?

MORMON TRAMPS.

MR. EDITOR: I had an experience last week with two of these fellows which I want to tell, so that it can be imitated by all the good people, and especially all the preachers of all the churches in Alabama.

They came to my door, and, supposing they were gentlemen on some proper business, I told the servant to invite them in. At the time rheumatism had me down on a couch, and was exceedingly distressing, so that when they came in I did not rise to meet them, but simply asked them to be seated. Pretty soon the fact came out that they had come to convert me to Mormonism. In all my life, I think, I never felt more keenly the indignity of an insult nor resented one with more vehemence. Without telling who they were and what was their purpose, of course they entered under the guise of gentlemen and strangers on legitimate business. Had their characters and design been made known at the door, they would have been turned away at once, for since the days of pure paganism, when the combined worship of Bacchus and Venus debauched the devotees at their shrine, in my judgment nothing in the way of religion so vilely sensual, so completely debauching to soul and body, so utterly opposed to the spirit of Christianity, so dishonoring to God, and so vile and nasty and hypocritical, has been conceived by man, and put forth as a religion. And this religion, they claim, is superior to that taught by Christ, because based upon more recent revelations made to Joe Smith, Brigham Young and Company—the leaders of the "Latter Day Saints," who had as many wives as they could find silly women to marry, and advised their followers to imitate their example. This example was most religiously followed, too, and polygamy was openly practiced in Utah until Congress passed the Edmund-Tucker law forbidding it; and it is clandestinely practiced now in defiance of the law. And in justification of all this debauchery of womanhood, and neglect of childhood and ruin of the family, they have the blasphemous audacity to teach that God himself is a polygamist, and that if all the acts of Jesus Christ had been reported, they doubt not it would appear that our Savior was married to Mary and her sister Martha and Mary Magdalene.

When I realized that men who hold and teach such miserable stuff had hypocritically sneaked into my house, and had the brazen affrontery to sit down by my couch and try to convert me to Mormonism, my indignation hardly knew the proper bounds. You may be sure that I forgot the rheumatism for a few minutes and poured out hot words on them, and drove them, like dogs, out of the house. And I did exactly right. Every man and woman who is insulted by the coming of these fellows should do likewise. I had much rather a man would dump the garbage and filth of his back yard on my front door steps than to scatter any sort of nasty literature, or plead for any form of blasphemy and devilment before my family in my home. If one is an outrage and an insult, the other is much more so.

I have told this story to call the attention of all decent people to these men. It is said that 1,700, going two together, have been sent out to preach Mormonism, and that they are now making a house-to-house canvass of Alabama, and, indeed, of all the Southern States. The people ought to be warned against them, and not permit them either to enter their homes or to leave their tracts. Their impudence surpasses all bounds, and they are not fools either, for they can talk glibly and lie without any trouble. A great many good people, ignorant of their religious tenets, can be easily misled by their lying sophistries. They claim to have been persecuted; say they are now persecuted when treated as they were by me. They deny the present practice of polygamy (which denial is false); they talk of Jesus Christ as the Son of God, and claim to believe the Bible. And yet they teach that polygamy is essential to their religion, and that Adam is the only heavenly father we have; and that God and Christ are polygamists, and much more of equal filth and blasphemy. But with the misinformed they know how to use the arts of hypocritical and skillful proselytes.—J. W. Rush, in Alabama Christian Advocate.

When God deals with you, he is always definite, and the impression grows stronger every time you pray. But any impression from God's Spirit is always corroborated by two things. First, by the Word. The Spirit of God and the Word of God are parallel lines. And, secondly, by circumstances. If you are truly called of God, circumstances will coincide with the spiritual impulse.

The Lord is never voiceless except to the earless soul.—Exchange.

LOVE

My work is finished. I am strong
In faith and hope and charity.
And the sole thing I hate is hate.
For hate is death and love is life.
A peace, a splendor from above;
And hate a never ending strife
A smoke, a blackness from the abyss
Where unclean serpents coil and hiss.
Love is the Holy Ghost within Hate the unpardonable sin.
Who preaches otherwise than this
Betrays his master with a kiss.

THE HOLY SABBATH—A SIGN BETWEEN GOD AND MAN.

THE SIN OF ITS VIOLATED SANCTITY.

The institution and sanctification of the Sabbath followed close upon the work of creation, and was made a part in time with the preparation of the world for man's occupancy. It was given to man as a memory of God, and was meant to preserve the name and a remembrance of God upon the earth. In forgetting the Sabbath and putting its memory from them for more than two thousand years, men forgot God by almost entire generations of that time. It is well known in physiology that a constant strain on the stoutest physical frame, without any rest, will break it down prematurely. The same is known to be true in psychology; no mind can stand for long a continuous strain. After the fall of man the tax laid on him as a curse was, that he should make his "living by the sweat of his face," with the provision that he should do "all his work in six days." This seventh day was for man to rest from his six days' labor; to observe its sacredness in the sense in which God sanctified it. The obvious sense is that God and man are joined into one on that day. The law was not only written by the finger of God, but was incorporated in man's body and mind, and is essential to the recuperation of his worn and tired faculties. One feature of the day made prominent at the time the Sabbath was renewed in the days of Moses was in declaring it a sign between God and man. We read:

1. "The Lord said to Moses, Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily I say unto you, my Sabbaths shall ye keep for a sign between me and you throughout your generations. . . . Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever, for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh he rested." (Exodus xxxi, 13, 16, 17.)

2. The prophet writes: "Moreover, I gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord. . . . I am the Lord your God; walk in my statutes and keep my judgments, and do them, and hallow my Sabbaths, and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your God." (Ezekiel xx, 12, 19, 20.) Thus the Sabbath is a sign of God set for a memory of God with us. As long as the father and head of a family is loved, and his memory and teachings reverenced, his portrait hangs in the old family hall; but a time comes when the father's precepts are onerous; his likeness on the wall is a chafing to conscience; the picture is removed to some unfrequented place, the attic or cellar, and one who did more for them than they ever did for themselves is forgotten. Its place on the wall is occupied by some tinsel or memory of fashion. A policy adopted by any person or chartered company secularizing the Sabbath, an act of the Legislature, or an act of Congress legalizing mercenary business, removes the sign God has set for himself among men, putting aside the memento of one who has done more for them than they are able to do for themselves.

Any person setting aside the sacredness of the Sabbath for worldly gain or pleasure passes under the curse of God's law. Reverses have visited such characters in such a way as to give the desecration and the reverse an association in the mind of the God-fearing as to make it sure that reverse did follow the other. Any railroad company making a run of trains on the Sabbath passes under the uplifted curse of God. Wrecks of trains and disasters of human life are often intimately associated with Sabbath train-running. Any State Legislature legalizing and protecting any company in the unrestricted violation of the Sabbath, if God be true to himself, judgment will be visited upon that State, as the threatened pestilence in several Southern States in 1897 might suggest. The United States, in the transportation of its mails, and in the requirement of the running of a vast number of mail trains on the holy Sabbath, if the Word of God be true, must be visited by the provoked judgments of High Heaven. Events in the past history of our country may be associated with an outlawed Sabbath, while some recent events, such as the blowing up of the battleship "Maine"—this associated with our foreign relations—at this time suggest war. War, whether victorious or otherwise, is a calamity.

Recently a bill was before the Legislature of a certain State to prohibit the running of freight trains on railroads through the State on Sunday. Certain members resisted the measure with ridicule and sarcasm. Such speech towards a day sanctified and set apart for sacred purpose is nothing short of profanity and blasphemy. There is nothing in all our religious economy more sacred than the holy Sabbath. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper is a solemn and sacred service. It should ever be observed with profound seriousness. If, while this solemn service is going on, one present should ridicule the exercises and speak sarcastically of any person observing such a rite, they would be reprobated by every right-thinking man and woman present as an outrageous blasphemer. But there is a sacredness attaching to the Sabbath not in the same sense associated with the Lord's Supper, for one may go to heaven in the formal neglect of the Lord's Supper, but one can never make the kingdom of God without observing and carefully remembering the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

There are, perhaps, forty thousand railroad employees in the State of Mississippi. Many of these go regularly to work every Sabbath day, while the last one of these scores of thousands are pledged to turn out on duty if called for any special work in their own line. On the company rests the first responsibility of this breaking the Sabbath. Another responsibility assumed is the inducement held out for Sabbath day travel in ready transportation and in reduced fare, offering special excursion rates, with additional cars for pleasure trips on the Lord's day. This carrying of passengers on the holy Sabbath for the money that is in it is a sin for which no palliation can be found in the Sacred Scriptures.

Any commonwealth providing by the special enactment of laws for such a run of business on the Sabbath is a partaker on a large scale of this open and daring sin against the laws of heaven. The United States government goes further in this matter than mere permission and protection. Her laws positively require the transportation of mails, trains to run thousands of miles in every part of the Union on the holy Sabbath, and also postmasters are required to open their offices and distribute the mails on that day.

These business regulations of corporations, these State laws and laws of the United States providing for and requiring persons in their employ to violate the Sabbath, compel no man to enter their service. Everyone engaging in such service does so at his own option—that is, he volunteers his own personal responsibility in the sin of performing this work on the Lord's day, of which he is positively forbidden in the Word of God, and for which he must answer in person in that great day before the Judge eternal.

The going into this business with a distinct view to the prostitution of the holy Sabbath is for nothing less nor more than for the money that is in it, as they have been heard to say: "I can not afford to give up a thousand dollars a year;" "I can not afford to give up my twelve hundred job." Thus the sanctified day of God must go. Nor does the convenience of the Sunday train for a Sabbath day's trip, nor the reduced rates for a Sunday excursion, relieve the traveler, the pleasure seeker, the excursionist, or the use of the train for any other pretext, of a personal sin and accountability to Him "who can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance." Whether the train is taken for business, for pleasure, or to save time; whether by saint or sinner, there is a contract with those who run the train for the money that is in it, as conditional in this bargain they count and pay the money on the Sabbath day for the privilege of riding on that day, thus taking part in all that sustains the company in running their trains on the day that God claims, holds, and sets apart for his own.

The question is asked, What would you do under such and such circumstances? I need not mention the circumstances; all who contend for these desecrations know them well. A sufficient answer to all such questions may be made thus: The law of the Sabbath was made before railroads were built. They were built under the dispensation which consecrated the Sabbath; hence our movements are under the Sabbath law. Under circumstances where a conflict of interests is joined I can act as though there was not a railroad in the world, taking the law in its primitive force. J. D. NEWSOM.

A VISIT TO THE WAIFS' HOME.

An engagement to preach the annual sermon and deliver the annual address before the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children called me to New Orleans on the seventeenth of February. On the eighteenth, in company with Dr. and Mrs. Clay and Mrs. Margaret Hunt Brisbane, I went over to the Waifs' Home at Beauvoir, Miss. The day was spent among the children there. The new chapel, a beautiful structure put up largely by the boys of the Home, was dedicated in the afternoon. On the following Wednesday I spent another day among the children at this beautiful Home on the gulf shore.

Sixty-three children, ranging in ages from 8 weeks to 18 years, are gathered in this Home. They have been snatched by Dr. Clay and his co workers of the La. S. P. C. C. from all sorts of ruin. Some of them came into the Home with life almost crushed out by the cruelty of unnatural parents or of self-appointed guardians of parentless waifhood. Some of them bear yet the scars and brands of the hells from which they have been snatched; but most of them have been lifted so far from their old lives by the judicious and beautiful treatment at the Home that they bear neither mark nor memory of their dark and bitter past. Some of the prettiest children I have ever seen are in that Home. Little Ivy, with her clustering curls of sunny hair and azure eyes, and Electra, and half a dozen more, whose names I can not recall, are not to be excelled anywhere. Then there are some larger girls (and some handsome boys, whose demeanor gives them right to the very front rank of boyhood and girlhood.

I was struck with the healthful appearance of the children. Rosy cheeks and robust forms and sprightliness of movement prevailed, and told of the wholesome fare and superior regimen of the Home. When I looked into the larder and saw the children at dinner, and got acquainted with Sister Rosa, the incomparable cook, with Sister Lilly, the matron, and Sister Tighlman, the nurse, I understood it all. Then I thought of life under such guidance in that well-arranged Home among the oaks and pines on that matchless seashore, and thanked God for his merciful providences all co-operating to help this helpless waifhood.

I was also struck with the affection shown by them to the noble man who founded and directs the Home. Every girl greeted him with a kiss, and the boys were anxious to serve him in some way: one begged to be permitted to carry his grip, another wanted to build a fire in his room, and all of them talked freely with him about the work they were doing, and were delighted with his approbation. This partly accounts for the evident happiness of the children. It was a marvel to me that, although made up of waifs gathered from such unfavorable conditions, and so diverse in natures and tendencies, yet this Home was so nearly a real home of the best type. An orphan asylum and a home are very unlike; but our brother has managed to make the Waifs' Home at Beauvoir a real home.

When I remembered that every one of these sixty-three beautiful children had been rescued by Bro. Clay and his co-workers from some fate a hundredfold worse than death, and when I learned at the anniversary in Carondelet Methodist Church on Sunday night that he and his associates had, within the six years of their work, thus helped more than eleven thousand such little ones, I was thrilled. Here I had found practical Christianity in its truest, highest expression. I remembered the words of our Lord: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Five of the waifs at the Home have gone there from Meridian; and others are there from various parts of Mississippi. The Home is in Mississippi—it is ours. I urged Bro. Clay to visit our principal towns and present the claims of his grand work. No preacher with the spirit of the Christ in him will refuse to Bro. Clay the use of his pulpit, and no real Christian will turn a deaf ear to the appeal which this cause makes.

Two of the brightest days of my life were spent with the waifs at Beauvoir.

"OUR DOMESTIC MISSIONS."

I see an article in the ADVOCATE, of March 3, by Bro. T. W. Lewis, on the important subject of domestic missions, specially as related to the North Mississippi Conference. This is a subject that should enlist the serious attention of both the ministry and laity of our church just at this time. Bro. Lewis has surveyed the field, and showed clearly that a state of things exists in some parts of the country that is truly appalling, and is enough to make a good man sick at heart to contemplate the future of the church in these regions referred to. As to the conditinn of the field I perfectly agree with Bro. Lewis.

But I take issue with him on the "policy" he advocates. In the first place, I am opposed to our present policy of domestic missions, i. e.: keeping up mission circuits; and I am no less opposed to the plan set forth by Bro. Lewis of "doubling our assessment for domestic missions."

I have no complaint to make against our Board of Missions, or of their work. I believe they have faithfully performed their duty, and have done just what has been demanded of them by the existing policy, and I am in perfect sympathy with our brethren who serve these mission works. But I believe the policy of appropriating money annually to these mission circuits positively injurious alike to pastors and churches. As I see it, the system tends to paralyze the energies and self respect of the churches which receive these annual assessments, and they will come, it may be gradually, but certainly, to look for help, and expect it.

On the other hand, the good men who must serve these mission circuits will unavoidably feel that they are discounted by their brethren. Thus their spirit is broken; they feel discouraged, and the way is opened for discontent. So I urge that we abolish our system of appropriating money to weak circuits, thereby making and keeping up mission circuits, and thus we have but one class of work, and that on a self supporting basis, except in opening up new work. I am aware that the objection to this plan is that the weak charges will not support pastors. We answer: Give plenty of territory, and put able-bodied men on these circuits, young men mainly, who are full of faith, zeal and courage—usually young men who have great faith and courage know no failure; thus by giving whole-hearted service they will accomplish great things for the church and humanity, and receive a reward for their labor in proportion to the opportunities to do good and the possibilities of the field they serve. The law of necessity is of great value to us all in every department of life, and to know, as a preacher, that here is my field, and my living is to come out of this charge, is one motive, and a laudable one, to the best possible service.

I am sure no one will claim that any circuit in the North Mississippi Conference is not able to support a pastor. We are not a mission field in the strict sense of the word; our troubles, which are manifold, have grown out of the deadness of our churches, and not for the want of material support. We do not need money for these fields, but life and spirit; and if we will give them Holy Ghost religion, they will give a fair return in religion, which comprises morals, money, and general development. I insist that we need all the money we can raise for the foreign field, where the opposition to Christianity is fierce because of antagonism with heathen religions, and not simply various evils that have been largely the result of deadness in the churches, as at home; for there is no part of our field that is not fully able to support the gospel. We evidently need more consecration among our people, and the only way possible to get it is by more consecration upon the part of the ministry. "Like priests, like people." Again, my observation is that in proportion as we infuse the spirit of foreign missions into the minds and hearts of our people will they support the institutions of the church at home. The spirit of missions is the life-blood of the church, and when that is wanting there can be no life in the church; so let us make our system at home self-supporting throughout; then preachers will always merit what they get, and usually get what they merit.

W. M. YOUNG.

W. P. AND H. M. SOCIETY CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Louisiana Conference was called to order by the president, Mrs. F. A. Lyons, on the third of March, 1898, at 10:30 o'clock, in the Methodist Church at Lafayette. A few of the ladies arrived on the second, and for awhile we were fearful that the meeting would prove a failure, because of the very disagreeable weather. A stiff north wind was blowing, accompanied by rain, and the indications for sleet or snow were very favorable. On Thursday morning, however, prospects were decidedly better, the weather continually growing brighter until noon, and at the same time becoming cooler, so that by Thursday evening the temperature was really bracing.

The ladies in attendance were all in good spirits, and entered upon the business of the convention in a business like manner. I observed, however, quite a difference between this body and that of our Annual Conference with reference to "voting." The "l's" were not as full of enthusiasm as they usually are at Conference. The measures passed, however, and without the lengthy discussions so common in our meetings. Of course, there were some discussions, but they were short and pointed. I think we might learn something along this line by association with our good sisters. I mean we younger brethren, of course. At first I felt a little embarrassed while looking into the faces of so many of the fairer sex, but when they made me—as nearly as they could—one of their number, I was truly glad of the privilege of attending every session, and heartily co-operating with them in the work to which they seem especially called.

It is not my purpose in this article to give a report in detail of this convention—that will be done in the proper manner and by the proper one—but rather to bring to notice this work as it appears from my point of view. I would emphasize the words used a moment ago in speaking of the work to which they seem called. I do not mean by this language to imply doubt with reference to this call, but simply call attention to the work accomplished by this society as sufficient evidence of their call of God into this service. The manner in which God has honored this work is proof that such work is in accordance with the divine will. "A home for every minister." How can we, as servants of God, be indifferent to a society which has for its motto such words as these? The consecrated women, endeavoring to build homes for us, and we not assist them by our prayers, words of encouragement, and in every other way in our power!

As I am now enjoying some of the liberality of this society, I feel constrained to say much more in behalf of the same; but, being a "young writer," modesty forbids. I would say this much, however: May the day soon come when there shall be an auxiliary in every charge in our Conference; when every minister will feel the obligation to "help" these "women who labor with" us "in the gospel."

During the convention several of the ladies paid a visit to the parsonage. One of them, while in our sitting-room, remarked that she had never entered a parsonage which had received assistance from the society until she entered this, and she was delighted to behold some of the material results of her labors. I suppose quite a number of others could say the same. The society has aided several parsonages within the bounds of this district. To mention each one of the good women who were present would be to extend this beyond a reasonable limit. While many deserve mention, yet I shall only mention a few for their office and work's sake: Mrs. F. A. Lyons, president; Mrs. F. E. Russ, Conference corresponding secretary, and Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, recording secretary. These I consider are women possessing the necessary qualifications for the offices they respectively hold, being intelligent and fully consecrated to the work.

It has not been my privilege to meet Sister Montgomery, our treasurer, but doubt not that she is in every way qualified for the duties of her responsible office.

In the election of officers for the ensuing year there were no votes cast against the present occupants, except their own.

In conclusion, would say I am truly glad to have had the privilege of opening the doors of our new church to the women of this society, and would welcome them at any future time. Their presence was to us a real benediction.

On Saturday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, Dr. Black gave us an address on the life of Miss Lucinda B. Helm, and at 11, on Sunday, he preached a very instructive sermon on St. Paul's advice to the Philippians, "Help those women who labored with me in the gospel." Rev. J. M. Henry preached at 7:30 Sunday evening, and then the delightful convention adjourned. I. T. REAMES.

Selections.

Religion is no haggard and stern monitress waving you from enjoyment; she is a strong angel leading you to noble joy. The Bible is not a book of repressions and prohibitions; it is a book of kindling inspiration. God would not have you crouch, like a poor, timid, startled creature, torturing yourself with a terrified watch over your lower desires. He would see you stand erect and manly, like a victor, in heroic confidence, with these enemies beneath your feet.—Canon Farrar.

A man can never become a gentleman in manner until he is a gentleman at heart.—Dickens.

A VISIT TO BROOKHAVEN.

Mr. Editor. It was my pleasure to aid Rev. B. F. Jones, pastor, at Brookhaven in revival services from the seventh to the fifteenth, inclusive, of this month. In that time I preached fifteen sermons to good congregations. The church was well filled on Sunday, the fourteenth. We had a good meeting up to the time I left, and I was happy to learn that much good was accomplished under the preaching of Rev. J. A. B. Jones, who came in on Monday. All for which we praise God, who graciously saved many souls.

The greatest work was accomplished in the college, or among the college girls, many of whom were already working Christians, and who did much towards the salvation of their friends. There were about twenty-five or thirty conversions while I was there, and some of these were as happy in "the Savior's love" as any I ever saw enter the Christian life. The sight of these young ladies realizing the burden of sin, and agonizing for deliverance from its weight, and, in answer to their prayers, knowing the Lord, was inspiring to those who were so much concerned for their salvation. The majority of the teachers did work at the altar, and proved their entire sympathy with the customs of the Methodist Church; also their spiritual life as a reality to themselves. I was much delighted with Prof. Webb's interest in the spiritual welfare of the girls who are under him for intellectual training. During this meeting he assured me of his fitness for a girls' school. Of course, I was prepared to appreciate that this would be the time when Bro. Chambers and Crisler would bend every effort in the direction of the salvation of the girls, and, to their great joy of heart, before the meeting closed, nearly all the girls who were not Christians became so.

From my association with the faculty and students for eight days, I am thoroughly impressed that Bro. Chambers is doing a very fine work for Christian education, and in this he has the co-operation of a corps of teachers who are capable in their different departments, and religious as well. I was surprised and delighted to notice the many improvements that have been made under his presidency, and his intention is to magnify his position in the way of advancing the interests of the college as he has opportunity. He is indomitable in his energy, and surely is he receiving his reward in as fine a set of girls as I ever saw to the number of one hundred and thirteen in the Boarding Department. I dined in the college twice, and the perfect order and system in this department altogether charmed me, and gave me an impression of the college which will not be lost. The fare was good and wholesome, and, by the way, the president has the finest garden to be seen in Brookhaven.

The library is provided with the best magazines that can be secured in the country, and many of the choicest papers, such as The Ladies' Home Journal, Youth's Companion, and others, which afford good reading for all, from the primary to the senior class.

The laboratory is well furnished, and being added to under the supervision of that very delightful and painstaking instructor, Rev. C. W. Crisler. Bro. Crisler is popular with his classes because he is careful to make clear any problem so the girls told me.

Every other department in the school was thorough, and Whitworth is the pride of Brookhaven. No parent need fear placing a daughter under the care of these godly men and women. The fact is, I became so enthusiastic over the college property, work, and the general conduct of the affairs pertaining thereto that it is hard for me to know just where to stop in giving my impressions of what I saw and heard.

God bless abundantly the energy and enterprise of Bro. Chambers, who is giving his entire time to the prosperity of the school. May he realize his fullest expectations, for which he is wisely and prayerfully planning every day!

Robt. Selby.

From the Work.

Rev. J. M. Johnston, Mooringsport, La.: "We think the Mooringsport charge and the preacher are doing well in the way of improvements on the parsonage lot. All the debris on the parsonage lot caused by the cyclone last fall is cleared away, and our yard nicely filled in, and our nice and neat parsonage looks home-like now. Our church at Mooringsport will soon be repaired and given a new coat of paint; and then the beautiful grove in which the church stands just on the bank of the beautiful Caddo Lake, we will have quite a delightful scenery, and surely the preacher will feel at home with this kind people. Besides this, our new church at Blanchard will soon be done, and the voice of the brethren is for a Bishop to come and dedicate our new church. With all these prospects before us, shall we not have a gracious revival of religion? I think this is needed above everything else and now we want to begin to sing and to continue to sing. Lord, we want more religion, for this is the one great need of this portion of the Louisiana Conference. We hope the brethren will pray for us, and come and help us when we invite them."

Rev. G. D. Purcell, Half Way, La., March 21, 1898: "The first Quarterly Conference for Wesley circuit, Shreveport district, Louisiana Conference, was held at Wesley, March 19 and 20. Bro. Sheppard, the presiding elder, was on hand and preached two good sermons, and left a blessing with us all. What a noble Christian gentleman and minister he is! We all thank God for his coming among us. I am resolved to live a better life and try harder to do my whole duty as a young pastor. This is my first year as a pastor. I have the salvation of fallen humanity at heart. Pray for me, dear brethren. We have had a glorious time during the first quarter, and I hope and pray we shall improve every quarter. The circuit made the best financial report it has ever made at any first Quarterly Conference."

Rev. W. L. Anderson, P. C., Chester, Miss., March 18, 1898: "We have just closed a five days' meeting of great power. The very first was a sweet service, characterized by the presence of the Holy Spirit with both pastor and membership. The interest increased to the last service. Rev. R. M. Evans, of Ackerman, came over and did the preaching after the first day (Sunday). This man of God has a deep, real experience in truth and verity. He is truly an able expositor of the distinctive doctrines and experience of 'the people called Methodists.' Why can't men of eminent piety, and especially acute insight into scriptural doctrines, always declare the great and wholesome doctrine of Christian perfection without emphasizing the controverted points? Bro. Evans has the happy tact of preaching a full-orbed gospel without being drawn aside into offensive statement. The results of the meeting were several converted and reclaimed and the church much edified."

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Roxie, Miss., March 21, 1898: "With your permission I will give a brief report from Roxie charge. This charge consists of four small towns on the Y. and M. V. R. R. running from McNair to Knoxville, a distance of just twenty miles. Our membership is about 300. We own a fairly good house of worship at McNair, Hamburg and Roxie. We are now building a real nice house of worship at Knoxville, at which point we have never owned a church-building before. Our building here is near completion, and when finished will be quite an addition to the town. There are a great many good, kind people on this charge, some of whom are very spiritual. I have received many tokens of kindness and friendship since my lot has been cast with this people. On Friday, the eleventh, we had quite a pounding. Ladies came from different parts of the circuit bringing all kinds of dainties and delicacies as well as an abundant supply of substantial groceries. After partaking of a delicious and bountiful dinner prepared by the above-named ladies, we all engaged in song and prayer together, after which we were left all alone to think and praise God for the tokens of love. This reception was given on the arrival of the new mistress of the parsonage. May the blessings of God rest in great abundance on this circuit!"

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant: "Please allow me space in the columns of your most excellent paper to say a few words in reference to my people and work this present Conference year, also to tender my heart-felt thanks to the many friends who ministered to us in the sad hour of affliction. I reached my work on the first day of January, and found a kind and hospitable people, who gave me a hearty welcome to their homes, and found at Strongs one of the most comfortable parsonage homes I've seen at all in the country; well furnished, with everything from a hand towel to a cook stove—the cook stove furnished brand new by the P. and H. M. Society on this work. The Home and Foreign Mission Societies on the work are doing well, and while we have had no special 'storm,' there has been almost a constant income of good things to the preacher and his family, in the way of meat, lard, sugar, coffee, chickens, turkeys, butter and eggs—in fact, a vast variety too tedious to mention. Many thanks to the kind people who have been so careful to look after our comfort. The people on the Prairie circuit are few in number, but large-hearted and kind. I feel sure the collections ordered by the Conference will all come up in full, without some providential interference. May the Lord bless us with a gracious revival this Conference year, send great peace and prosperity to his Zion, and save us from pestilence and war! The sickness of my son-in-law, Mr. R. W. Allen, who died recently at Cockrum, Miss., in DeSoto county, called me from my work two weeks. I have returned with his widow, my daughter, and two little orphans, to raise without the assistance of a companion. May the Lord give her grace to train them for heaven, where they may have a reunion with him who was a kind husband, loving father, a good citizen and faithful to his church. To the many friends of Cockrum and Hernando I tender my heart-felt gratitude, praying God's blessings upon them for their many deeds of kindness and warm words of sympathy and assistance rendered in this sad hour of affliction. Pray for us, and may the Lord bless you in your labors of love for the good of Zion."

RURAL HILL CHARGE.

This work might be properly called the "Preacher Breaker." I mean by this that probably more young preachers have served this charge than any other in our recollection. From Bro. A. J. Foster's beginning to the present year there has been but one or two experienced men on this work. Furthermore, this good people have not heretofore received the good name they deserved. Poverty is no disgrace, and, as a rule, this people are good livers and very kind to their boy preacher. Our first quarterly meeting was held last Friday. Bro. Oakley preached an excellent sermon and presided over my first quarterly meeting. I have long since learned that the boy preacher needs those beautiful lines we learned years ago, "Try, try again." The first or the twenty-first failure should not discourage us in this great work. All ye preachers, pray for us. E. B. Freeman, P. C.

REVIVAL IN BILOXI.

We have just closed what several of the oldest residents of this place term the most remarkable revival ever known in Biloxi.

After my return from Conference there was a noticeable increase of interest in spiritual matters, evidenced by larger congregations and by conversions and accessions at nearly every service.

The preaching for the past ten days has all been done by Dr. Inman W. Cooper. He is deeply spiritual, and his eloquent appeals powerfully affected the congregations, in which were represented all denominations in this place and every class of people. At times the church was packed, and many had to be turned away. On Sunday night children sat around the pulpit and around the altar railing, while crowds stood in the isles and at the door. A similar crowd was present when we closed Tuesday night.

Every day cottage prayer meetings were held by a band of fifteen or sixteen consecrated women.

The singing was conducted by Rev. D. L. Mitchel, who is a "power" in a meeting. Few men can equal him in prayer and in the earnestness with which he devotes himself to the Master's cause. Such local preachers as he have ever been invaluable in the history of Methodism.

Miss Stella Harkness presided at the organ. This young lady as an organist has made a record of which she has just cause to be proud. At all times, whether at preaching or prayer meeting, she is at her post doing faithful work.

There has been very little, if any excitement, during these services, and the work done seems to be genuine and lasting.

There have been forty applications for membership, and the conversions and reclamations have been estimated at about one hundred. C. F. Emery.

The Journey of Womanhood.

When a young girl develops the first evidences of womanhood, it is as if she were starting alone upon a strange journey beset with rough and dangerous places. A wise and loving mother will not allow any false delicacy to prevent her from giving her daughter the plainest information and advice at this critical stage of her existence.

Young girls suffer a vast amount of unnecessary pain and misery for lack of frank and confidential instruction about their own physical selves.

The special weaknesses and diseases incident to woman's organic development are completely and permanently remedied by the "Favorite Prescription" prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

More than 90,000 cases of obstinate female difficulties have been absolutely cured by this wonderful "Prescription." It heals, strengthens and completely rejuvenates the tissues and nerve-centers of the feminine organism. It is the only medicine devised for this special purpose by a regularly graduated experienced physician. It is the one authorized preparation which may be positively relied upon to cure.

Mothers and daughters may consult Dr. Pierce by letter without charge and in the most absolute confidence. Their letters will be answered not by any mere nurse, but by an educated skilled physician. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free if 21 one-cent stamps are inclosed to defray the cost of mailing only.

Miss Edith Cain, of Clinton, Allegheny Co., Pa., writes: "I take pleasure in expressing my faith in your 'Favorite Prescription.' After two years of suffering I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicine and now I am entirely cured. I had been troubled with female weakness for some time and also with a troublesome drain on the system, but now I am happy and well. I will cheerfully recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all invalid ladies."

You can help your fellow men; you must help them; but the only way you can help them is by being the noblest and the best man that is possible for you to be.—Phillips Brooks.

Sweet satisfaction comes to those who try, no matter how humbly, to be earthly providences to the poor and helpless, and gild their mite with the gold of charity, before it is laid up where thieves can not break through and steal.—Louisa M. Alcott.

No proverb is more untrue than the one which says, "A bad beginning makes a good ending." Once in a while such a thing occurs, but ordinarily the good ending has a good beginning. The young man who thinks it well to "sow wild oats" as a preparation for a noble career is listening to one of the devil's biggest lies.

THE WANING OF SECTIONALISM.

Sectional animosity, like prejudice, dies hard, for both are largely nourished by that ignorance which avoids rather than searches for the truth. A contest of the nature and extent of the late Civil War is naturally followed by intense bitterness and hatred between the parties thereto, nor would it be reasonable to expect such feelings of hostility to cease all at once. The history of every such struggle shows plainly that the restoration of confidence and friendliness between the sections once at war with each other is a thing of slow accomplishment, being often retarded by ignorance and demagogueism.

Though difficult of realization in a country like ours, with so many varied and conflicting interests, a spirit of patriotism and national unity is the one thing needful, so far as the stability of our government and the perpetuity of our republican institutions are concerned. There has been in the past, as everyone knows, excess of crimination and vilification of the South and the North by fire eaters on both sides. Far too many on each side of Mason and Dixon's line have done their best to keep the fires of sectional animosity burning; but, in our humble judgment, the majority of people of both sections have for a long time entertained kindly feelings toward each other and have been animated by a common spirit of patriotism.

We are inclined to believe that though worsted in the cause for which they fought so valiantly, the people of the South have, as a rule, been readier to lay aside passion and prejudice than their victors have been. Northern leaders have repeatedly expressed skepticism as to the loyalty of Southerners to the Union, and as to the genuineness of their manifestations of a fraternal spirit. In spite of such utterance it is becoming more and more apparent that there is a closer sympathy existing between the two sections than ever before.

Several recent occurrences have demonstrated that though petty differences may survive, we are a united people, having common interests and common aims. When was there ever a more remarkable outburst of patriotism and expression of national unanimity than we saw displayed in Congress, a few weeks ago, when both Houses without one single dissenting voice promptly passed the military appropriation bill providing for the expenditure of fifty millions of dollars in view of impending war with Spain! In thus looking after the honor of the nation and in making provision for the better protection of her interests, sectionalism was for once forgotten, and party lines went for nought. The politician gave place to the statesman, and every representative proved himself to be a most ardent unionist.

Close upon the heals of this action of Congress have come the offers of numerous Confederate officers and thousands of Confederate soldiers to fight for the Union in the event of war between Spain and the United States. Such offers nearly took away the breath of some partisans in the North, and this unsolicited expression of patriotism has elicited the warmest applause and admiration all over the country. It is now evident that in case of an outbreak with Spain, no section of the Union would support the Union more heartily than the South. Should no war occur, the effect of recent disclosures of Southern sentiments of loyalty and fraternity will be to bring the North and the South closer together.

It is not to be expected that Northern people would pay as high tribute to the genius of our Southern generals as do our own people, but, as sectionalism vanishes, there is larger appreciation on the part of those who once wore the blue of the splendid character and prowess of Lee and Jackson and other Southern heroes. The lofty eulogy bestowed upon Gen. R. E. Lee by President E. Benjamin Andrews, of Brown University, in his recent lecture in this city, is another striking proof of the fact that sectional prejudice has had its day, and that there are in the North men of ability who are ready to render due honor to greatness, no matter in what locality it may appear. Such broadness of view and kindliness of spirit can but exercise a most wholesome influence upon the people of every section. Would that there were more such broad-minded men. We pity the Southerner who can see but little greatness and grandeur in the character of Abraham Lincoln and other Northern leaders.

It is peculiarly fitting and fortunate that just at this time when sectional differences are being forgotten, and a spirit of fraternity pervades the land, Congress should have acted favorably upon the just, but long-delayed claim of our Publishing House, representing the largest Protestant denomination in the South. The assistance and sympathy given us in this matter by the Bishops and leading ministers and laymen of the Northern Methodist Church (with the exception of one or two narrow-minded bigots), should not soon be forgotten, and will do much towards more closely uniting the two great branches of Methodism. The present seems to be "an era of good feeling." God grant that it may continue!

As the lamented Senator L. Q. C. Lamar once said in a public speech regarding the people of the North and the South: 'If we knew each other better, we would love each other more."

". . . Sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.
. . . . . .
"Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts and hopes are all with thee,
Our hearts and hopes, our prayers and tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee, are all with thee."

AT PLAQUEMINE.

By invitation of the enterprising pastor, Rev. J. B. Kent, we lectured on Wednesday, the sixteenth, at Plaquemine. We had a fair audience, who seemed to be quite appreciative of the lecture. The proceeds went into the parsonage improvement fund. Bro. Kent has made important improvements on the parsonage since his pastorate began, less than three months ago. As usual, he is full of plans for the up building of Methodism. In Plaquemine, as in most towns in South Louisiana, Catholicism is the dominant ecclesiastical force, and this being the case, our church finds it impossible to make as rapid progress as in those regions where Protestantism is in the ascendency. Plaquemine is widely known on account of the important work carried on there by the United States government. For the past three years an annual appropriation of $350,000 has been expended there in the construction of locks for the purpose of making Bayou Plaquemine and its connecting streams navigable without making the adjacent lands subject to overflow. It will take a similar appropriation for two or three years more to complete the work. These locks, it is said, will open up to navigation streams aggregating at least fifteen hundred miles in length, all running through a region of almost fabulous fertility.

We had the good fortune to be domiciled with Bro. J. C. Conkling, the government engineer who has charge of the construction of these locks. To him and to his estimable wife we are indebted for many highly appreciated courtesies. We also enjoyed the generous, warm-hearted hospitalities of Bro. Kent and his excellent wife. Bro. Kent is in favor with his people, and is doing whatsoever his hands find to do for the advancement of our cause.

AT SOPHIE NEWCOMB COLLEGE.

By invitation of the Alumnæ Association, we gave a lecture on Monday night last in the spacious auditorium of Sophie Newcomb College. As is known to most of our readers, this is an institution of high order founded in this city a few years since through the munificence of the noble woman whose name it bears. It has magnificent buildings, is admirably equipped, and has a very fine faculty.

We deem it an honor to have been invited by its alumnæ to occupy its rostrum. Although we transcended the conventional time-limits, the entire audience gave the very closest attention from start to finish, and seemed pleased with what they heard.

Bishop Galloway preached a grand sermon on Jeremiah to an immense audience in Central Church, Meridian, on Sunday, March 20. He preached at night in the West End Church. No man can draw a larger audience in Meridian than the gifted and eloquent Bishop Galloway.

NEW BOOKS.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE LAND TO THE BOOK; or, The Evidential Value of Palestine. By Rev. David Gregg, D. D., pastor of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. Author of "The Heaven Life," "Our Best Moods," etc. 52 pages. Boards, 35 cents. New York: E. B. Treat & Co., 5 Cooper Union.

This is a very fascinating and instructive little book, and will do no little to strengthen the faith of those who read it in the divine origin of the Bible. The author brings out some striking facts about Palestine made known by recent archæological explorations, which wonderfully confirm the truth of the Sacred Record. Discoveries in Palestine resulting from excavation and investigation, while much less numerous than those recently made in Egypt and Babylonia, are equally as marvelous, and yet greater wonders are expected in the near future. In presenting the corroboration of the Book by the Land the author treats, first, of "the voices from above ground"—i. e., the land in its physical features; and, secondly, of "the voices from underground." The claim is made, and pretty well substantiated, that as the Bible is a "world book," so Palestine is a "world land," a noted scientist being quoted as saying: "There is not another spot on earth where so much of nature is focused as in this little corner. You have alpine cold and torrid heat. Here are all the animals, birds, insects, plants, shells, rocks, of all zones." Dr. Gregg significantly terms the geography of Palestine a "fifth gospel." There are few Bible readers who would not be interested and profited by a perusal of this volume.

THE CONVERSION OF CHILDREN. By Rev. Edward Payson Hammond, M. A., author of "Little Ones in the Fold," "The Better Life," etc. Paper. Price, five cents, postpaid. James H. Earle, publisher, 178 Bromfield street, Boston.

This little pamphlet discusses in a very earnest and interesting way the importance and desirableness of labor for the early conversion of children, cites numerous instances of such conversion, answers the oft-repeated question, "How early may children be led to Christ?" brings out the fact that, as a rule, children make the most steadfast Christians, and also points out the measures to be employed in this work. Quite a number of thrilling incidents and striking illustrations are given. The pamphlet before us is an abridged edition of a larger work bearing the same title, issued in this small, cheap form in order to be as widely circulated as possible. In the prefatory note it is said that many of the books have gone to missionaries of various societies, and that in return touching letters have been received expressing gratitude for the encouragement and help the book gave them in leading children to Jesus.

THE SUFFRAGE ORDINANCE.

It would be scarcely possible to conceive a Democratic Constitutional Convention lending itself to a more undemocratic plan than that which the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana has just adopted by a large majority.

If there could have been devised a more undemocratic scheme than to create a hereditary class of voters—a class who shall possess the franchise not because of any compliance of their own with the suffrage requirements, but only because they are the sons and grandsons of those who were entitled to vote before 1868—we should like to be informed where and how it could be devised. If there be any one thing more than another on account of which we on this side of the Atlantic have poked fun at our British cousins, if there be one thing more than another on account of which Britishers themselves have been given to finding fault with their government, it is the existence of heredity in legislation, which has been immemorial in their House of Peers, and which we are now about to imbed in our Constitution.

It were bad enough that we, a democratic people, should turn to a monarchy for any principle of self-government, inasmuch as we have prided ourselves for over a century on broader, more liberal and more popular ideas and practices of government than anything known to a monarchy; but that, in turning to take a leaf out of monarchy's book for our self-government, we should adopt the most objectional feature of legislation that exists under a monarchy, is almost incredible.

And that such an anomaly should stand in a democratic country is out of the question. In spite of the fiat of the Convention—that a person may vote and help make the laws in this State because of the fact that he has had a franchised father or grandfather, in utter regardlessness of what the person himself is or has or does—the people of Louisiana will send the undemocratic, hereditary, House of Peers principle sky-high before it shall have got comfortably settled in our organic law.

And the Privileged Foreigner is just as objectionable as the privileged son of his father.

On what conceivable grounds of reason or of justice is it that the naturalized foreigner, without education and without property, should be placed ahead of the native-born, unpropertied illiterate? Is the illiteracy of the Italian, the Hun or the Portuguese a higher qualification than the illiteracy of the Louisianian, that the illiterate Italian or Hun or Portuguese should be admitted to the franchise and to a share in the government of this State, while the illiterate American is excluded from the franchise and a share in the government? What virtue is there in foreign illiteracy that it should be placed on a higher level than native illiteracy, that it should be accorded privileges which native illiteracy is denied?

In drafting an organic or other law, if there are any little favors to be granted, it is generally understood that they shall be granted to the people of the country—to the people who have been born in it, who have grown up with it, who have helped make it what it is, and who take a pride in it. The Constitutional Convention has gone on the very opposite tack. They have decreed that what trifles of favors are to be given, are to be given in preference to the lately come aliens—to men who have been born and reared elsewhere, who have not grown up with the country or in any way helped to advance its interests, but who, on the contrary, the moment they have made their paltry pile in this land of plenty, will turn their backs on this country never to see it more. These are the men whom the Constitutional Convention, in its wisdom, has thought fit to put over the heads of Americans born in the matter of suffrage privilege. And never surely has a more un-American scheme obtained the imprimature of an American body of legislators!

The Times Democrat said yesterday that not only did it object to and protest against the embodiment of such undemocratic and un-American suffrage plans in the organic law of this State, but that it would continue to protest and to agitate against them until they had been repealed. We repeat the same thing to-day. The Convention, letting itself be led by the nose by a clique of politicians, may, contrary to advice and remonstrance from every side, write these absurd and unjust sections in the new Constitution, and may go hence in the belief that in doing so they have "done the State some service." We tell them that it is not so. We tell them that they are missing a grand opportunity of benefiting the State and winning credit for themselves. Instead of compiling and adopting a suffrage plan that would materially help the good government and further the prosperity of Louisiana, they are paltering with the interests of the State for the advantage of scheming politicians.

And scarcely will they have adjourned when their unrighteous work will begin to crumble. The people of Louisiana will not have it; the matter will be attacked, as it should be, in the courts, and as no intelligent person, not blinded by prejudice, can doubt the section's flagrant unconstitutionality, its fate before the Supreme Court is not subject to doubt.—Times Democrat.

Good for the Times Democrat! We hope it will make good its promise to keep up the fight. We hope also that every secular paper in the State will take part in the fray. The agitation ought to be kept up until the infamous work of the present Convention shall be undone. We do not believe there is another State in the Union where it is possible to get together a set of men who would put such provisions in the organic law of the State. Moreover, we do not believe there is another State that would long tolerate such legislation. And we do not believe Louisiana will. The people have spoken in thunder tones already in condemnation of the monstrosity. We believe that within less than five years the people of the State will rise in the might and majesty of a noble manhood and put an end to this contemptible piece of political trickery.

Dr. H. W. Featherstun writes: "Mrs. Mary L. Kearney, the mother-in-law of Dr. Andrews, died at the Doctor's home, Tuesday, March 22, and was buried near Flora, Miss., on the following Thursday. Thus passed from us a beautiful life, radiant with the gentler virtues and full of good works. The broken home circle, of which she had been a part from its very beginning, miss the sacred presence so sorely."

Commenting on her death, the Vicksburg Herald says:

This sad news will be received with genuine and general regret in this city, where this estimable lady is so well known and so much beloved. Mrs. Kearney was the mother of Mrs. C. G. Andrews, and with the family of Doctor Andrews, of the Methodist Church, was a resident of this city for several years. Her character was one of unusual beauty, and in every phase of her long life her sweet Christian character shone like a precious jewel on the dark sky of sorrow, or brightened and purified the light of happiness. In losing her, those who are left, as well as the church and the community, have lost one than whom there can be none better, sweeter or purer; but they can look back over her life and learn many a beautiful lesson, and they can look forward and see her in that brighter, better beyond, safe in the arms of Jesus.

AN APPEAL.

The Nowton and Hickory charge, Rev. D. P. Bradford, pastor, is the first to pay the assessment—$100—for foreign missions for this year in full. Bro. Bradford and his good people are to be congratnlated. Let others emnlate their virtuons example.

The domestic missionary box is sadly in need of funds. Urgent calls have already been made on this fnnd for assistance, bnt the response has been necessarily meager. Two or three hnndred dollars within the next ten days wonld enable me to greatly relieve the pressing needs of onr brethren engaged in onr home mission work. Who will be the first to pay his assessment for domestic missions, for this year, in fnll? I await to make the announcement.

After the ceremonies at the church the procession returned to the Masonic Hall, whore a bonntiful dinner was provided. J. A. B. JONES.

A WORD OF ADVICE

TO THOSE COMING TO ALASKA OR THE KLONDIKE GOLD FIELDS.

One thing shonld be impressed npon every miner, prospector or trador coming to Alaska, to the Klondike, or the Yukon conntry, and that is the necessity for providing an adequate and proper food snpply. Whether procnred in the States, in the Dominion, or at the snpply stores here or fnrther on, this must be his primary concern. Upon the mannor in which the miner has observed or neglected this precaution more than npon any other one thing will his snccess or failnre depend.

These snpplies must be healthfnl and shonld be concentrated, bnt the most careful attention in the selection of foods that will keep nnimpaired indefinitely nnder all the conditions which they will have to enconnter is imperative. For instance, as bread raised with baking powder mnst be relied npon for the chief part of every meal, imagine the helplessness of a miner with a can of spoiled baking powder. Bny only the very best flonr; it is the cheapest in the end. Experience has shown the Royal Baking Powder to be the most reliable and the trading companies now uniformly supply this brand, as others will not keep in this climate. Be snre that the bacon is sweet, sound and thoronghly cured. These are the absolnte necessities npon which all must place a chief reliance, and can under no circumstances be neglected. They may, of conrse, be snpplemented by as many comforts or delicacies as the prospector may be able to pack or desire to pay for.—From the Alaska Mining Jonrnal.

A book of receipts for all kinds of cookery, which is specially valnable for nse npon the trail or in the camp, is pnblished by the Royal Baking Powder Company, of New York. The receipts are thoroughly practical, and the methods are carefnlly explained, so that the inexperienced may, with its aid, readily prepare everything requisite for a good, wholesome meal, or even dainties if he has the necessary materials. The matter is in compact though dnrable form, the whole book weighing but two onnces. Under a special arrangement, this book will be sent free to minors or others who may desire it. We would recommend that everyone going to the Klondike procure a copy. Address the Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

MERIDIAN LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS, TAKE NOTE.

The Transportation Committee of the Mississippi State Epworth Leagne Conference have succeeded in getting a roduced rate of one fare for round trip on the following roads: Mobile and Ohio, K. C., M. and B., N. O. and N. E., Alabama and Vicksbnrg, and A. G. S. The M. and C. will sell tickets at one and one third fare, certificate plan. As yet we have not succeeded in getting a rate from the I. C. System, but think that they will make one fare ronnd trip rate.

Epworth League.

BY H. N. HARRISON.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 3—"THE PRECIOUSNESS OF SALVATION." I. PET. i, 18-21.

1. The redemptive price of man was the blood of Christ. He assumed our place on the cross. When the just Judge demanded satisfaction of hnmanity, our Elder Brother cancelled the debt. Neither angel nor archangel was eqnal to the emorgency. Finite cancellation, as by man, or silver and gold, or angel, could not meet the claim. The law demands, not partial payment, but complete satisfaction. Who, then, was eqnal to these things bnt Christ? (Gal. iii, 10-14.)

2. Our redemption, therefore, having been pnrchased at an infinite price, its preciousness can not be measnred in terms of comparison either in this life or in the life to come. Under this great redemptive scheme life and immortality are bronght to men. There is no death for those who desire life; no darkness for those who desire light; no sin for those who desire holiness. Christ, who made the atonement for ns, has made possible for ns these gracions benefits:

3. Repentance nnto life. This is the gatoway into the Christian life. The sinnor pnrsned by his sins may take refuge through this way of escape. There is no other door through which he may enter into the kingdom of heaven. This is the gate ajar. (Luke xiii, 2 5; Acts iii, 19.)

4. Regoneration—the second birth—follows after gennine repentance. It is a radical work, being a birth. It is wronght by the Holy Ghost himself. It may be instantaneous, or in a measnre gradual. Though it is but the beginning of the heavenly life, it is a distinct and complete work in itself. It forms an epoch in heart history. (John iii, 3 7.)

5 Entire sanctification, or the life more abnndant, called also the "rest of faith," is the Christian's endnement, or eqnipment, for service. Jesus calls it the baptism with the Holy Spirit. (Acts i, 5.) The hundred and twenty Christians in the upper room received this pecnliar power "suddenly," in a moment of time, on Pentecost (Acts ii, 1-4). Peter declares that it is for all (Acts ii, 14-18, 37-39). Paul earnestly prays that the Thessalonian Christians might be sanctified wholly and preserved blameless in this state till the coming of Jesus (I. Thess. v, 23) That he does not mean regeneration by this passage is clear from the fact that he is addressing those already regenerated (I. Thess. i, 1-10).

6. Glorification shall take place at the close of our Christian pilgrimage. If we snffer with him, we shall also be glorified together (Rom. viii, 17). Our glorified bodies will possess resnrrection powers. When Jesus rose from the dead, his body possessed new and extraordinary powers; he appeared and disappeared suddenly and instantly. When the disciples were assembled together in a closed room, every door being shut fast, he startled them by penetrating through the walls and saying, "Peace be unto yon!" In the act of breaking bread with the two disciples at Emmans, he vanishes ont of their sight (Luke xxiv, 30, 31). Having led the disciples out to the Mount of Olives, close to Bethany, he rose from the earth and ascended into heaven, defying the law of gravitation. We shall be like him (I. John iii, 2). "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness" (Ps. xvii, 15). Our vile body shall be fashioned like unto his glorions body (Phil. iii, 20, 21). "We shall hnnger no more, neither thirst any more. We shall rnn and not be weary; and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Rev. xxi, 4). The benefits which will come to all who accept this great redemption, are incalonlable. The possibilities of grace are without limit. Those who limit the power of God with reference to salvation from sin in this life dishonor the promises of God and mistake the power and scope of the gospel (Eph. iii, 20; I. Cor. ii, 9).

A NEW BOOK.

THE HOME OF THE BIBLE: WHAT I SAW AND HEARD IN PALESTINE By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 416 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day: how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

MY BIBLE AND I.

We've travelled together, my Bible and I,
Through all kinds of weather, with smile or with sigh,
In sorrow or sunshine, in tempest or calm,
Thy friendship unchanging, my lamp and my psalm.

We've travelled together, my Bible and I,
When life had grown weary, and death e'en was nigh,
But all through the darkness of mist and of wrong
I found thee a solace, a prayer or a song.

So now, who shall part me, my Bible and I?
Shall Ism, or schism, or new lights who try?
Shall shadow for substance, or stone for good bread,
Supplant its sound wisdom, give folly instead?

Ah, no, my dear Bible, Revealer of Light,
Thou sword of the Spirit, put error to flight,
And still through life's journey, until my last sigh,
We'll travel together, my Bible and I.

PERSECUTION OF CHILDREN.

It seems very strange that children can be persecuted in their own homes. One never associates the sweet name of "mother" with anything that could savor of persecution, and yet there have been, and perhaps there are now, mothers who do not seem to have that love for their children that we associate with the beautiful type of motherhood. Augustus J. C. Hare, in the story of his life, shows us an unknown and most fortunately a rare type of motherhood.

Mr. Hare's contributed reminiscences have a mission of warning to all educators. The very fact that he dwells with exaggerated bitterness upon this dreary period of his life is in itself a lesson against the blue-laws theory of child misery. His mother regarded him from infancy without maternal affection, for she turned the care of him immediately over to others. Esther Maurice, an aunt by marriage, seemed to be his care-taker much of the time during his childhood. She it was who ordered his pet cat to be hanged because she "felt it a duty," and religiously forced the child to do whatever was the most disagreeable thing on every occasion "to mortify the flesh." Surely his mother, knowing these facts, if she had had a mother-love in her heart, would have taken her boy away from such a life. Such a training reminds one of a father who deliberately disappointed his children purposedly, arguing that as their lives would be full of disappointments when they grew up that it was well to have them get used to them while they were children. That our children need discipline of different kinds we all know, but occasions come often enough without our making them for the express purpose.

It is very necessary that our children should early learn to be a law unto themselves. And the teaching of this most essential lesson should be done wisely and with great consideration and kindness. We should show them when disappointments and troubles come how to bear them bravely, and that victories gained at such times show the makings of heroes and heroines. The sympathy of the loving father and mother may thus throw a brighter light over the shades that gather in the child's heart in the hour of disappointment. Nothing should be done to stir up bitterness that will make the way to victory harder and more hedged in for them. What an invaluable blessing to a child is a wise father and a wise mother! Care-takers and guides who have learned to gain the victories over themselves, and know how to help their children.

Children are very quick to know when they are unjustly blamed and dealt with. Children's sorrows are very real and burdensome to their young hearts. Many dear little ones have cried themselves to sleep because of being misunderstood by those who should have shown them the way out of their sorrows, instead of causing bitterness to come into their hearts, making a twofold burden for them to bear. There is nothing of such great importance, mothers, as to know your children's characteristics and how to treat them wisely. It will bring you in better results and more satisfactory ones than leaving the little ones with servants to join Clubs for the study of "Ologies" and "isms."

What a holy, sacred hour of child-life is the bed-time hour! What a blessed privilege that the mother can gather her little ones about her knee to offer the evening prayer!

A dear little child said, "We're so happy when it is bed-time and mamma goes with us to our room, and we all kneel down to tell to God our good-night prayer."

Yes, dear mothers, we know the arms so often ache, that the feet are weary, and the heart oftentimes faint, but be faithful to your sacred trust of motherhood.

Don't let injustice, impatience and unwise judgment in your dealings with them get the mastery over you. Do you ask, "How can we be true, good, wise mothers?"

A dear old mother once said: "When I was a young mother I had a great deal of work to do and my family of little ones was quite large. I wanted to be faithful to the trust God had given me, and every morning before the family were awake, I used to go up to the 'Mount of Vision,' and take counsel of the Great Helper. It was in my little clothes closet, the only place I could ever be alone. None of the family ever knew that it was my 'Mount of Vision.' Years after those children by their Christ-like lives showed to others that the visits of that mother in the early morning, to that 'Mount of Vision,' had been greatly blessed to them."

—Susan Teall Perry, in The Evangelist.

KEEPING YOUR OWN COUNSEL.

It is an old saying among schoolboys and college men that the fellow who keeps his mouth shut is always the big man; that he who deliberately says little quickly wins for himself the name for wisdom. Such statements are quite as true in the outer world to a certain degree as they are in college and school. The pith of the matter is that if in any way you arrive at a position of any importance, the less you talk to everyone the more credit you receive for care, for thoughtfulness, for sound, well-considered opinions. Here is nothing which urges a boy to have no opinions or to never express them; and in fact this "wise silence" at school and college as often, perhaps, covers up an empty mind as it does the wisdom of Solomon. There is, however, a good rule to follow, which may be given briefly, to the effect that it is well to say little until you have thoroughly made up your mind, and then not to hesitate in your statements. The temptation of the average man is to express some opinion at once, but if that is changed later, the full force of the final opinion is lost.

Let others do the wrangling. Your opinion will have all the more influence if you come out strong with it at the close of the discussion, when not only are the others considerably in doubt as to what they do want, but you have also had the advantage of hearing many sides of the case.

That is to say, that in your daily behavior toward the others in school it is well to keep your "talk" in reserve. It is a habit easily acquired, and one that in the end works both ways. It adds both to the value of your advice, because the advice is better considered, and it gives the advice an added value so far as others are concerned, because when you only say a little that little has the more consideration.

—Harper's Round Table.

DON'T GIVE UP.

Sorrow came to you yesterday and emptied your home. Your first impulse now is to give up and sit down in despair amid the wrecks of your hopes. But you dare not do it. You are in the line of battle and the crisis is at hand. To falter a moment would be to imperil some holy interest. Other lives would be harmed by your pausing. Holy interests would suffer should your hands be folded. You must not linger even to indulge your grief. Sorrows are but incidents in life and must not interrupt us. We must leave them behind while we press on to the things that are before.

Then God has so ordered, too, that in pressing on in duty we shall find the truest, richest comfort for ourselves. Sitting down to brood over our sorrows, the darkness deepens about us and creeps into our heart, and our strength changes to weakness. But if we turn away from the gloom and take up the tasks and duties to which God calls us, the light will come again and we shall grow stronger.

When all our hopes are gone,
'Tis well our hands must still keep toiling on for others' sake;
For strength to bear is found in duty done:
And he is blest indeed who learns to make
The joy of others cure his own heartache.

—J. R. Miller, D. D.

PERSISTENCY WINS.

Persistency is characteristic of all men who have accomplished anything great. They may lack in some other particular, may have many weaknesses and eccentricities, but the quality of persistence is never absent in a successful man. No matter what opposition he meets, or what discouragements overtake him, he is always persistent. Drudgery can not disgust him, labor can not weary him. He will persist, no matter what comes or what goes; it is a part of his nature: he could almost as easily stop breathing. It is not so much brilliancy of intellect or fertility of resource as persistency of effort, constancy of purpose, that gives success. Persistency always inspires confidence. Everybody believes in the man who persists. He may meet misfortunes, sorrows and reverses, but everybody believes that he will ultimately triumph, because they know there is no keeping him down. "Does he keep at it—is he persistent?" This is the question which the world asks about a man. Even a man with small ability will often succeed if he has the quality of persistence, where a genius without it would fail.—Selected.

A California paper is responsible for the following: The lecturer inquired dramatically: "Can anyone in this room tell me of a perfect man?" There was a dead silence. "Has anyone," he continued, "heard of a perfect woman?" Then a patient little woman in a black dress rose up at the back of the auditorium and answered: "There was one. I've often heard of her, but she's dead now. She was my husband's first wife."

THE LAWS OF HEALTH.

We wish that our pastors could take a "course" of medical instruction when preparing for the ministry. A preacher acquainted with the healing art can do good to men's bodies and win their hearts. There is dense ignorance even among the intelligent classes concerning the laws of health, not to say anatomy, physiology, and the pharmacopea. The pastor would protect himself and his people from many an ill. We knew a scientific person of highest position, who was grievously injured in the war, yet kept himself in fair condition by knowledge of medicine. He was verging on seventy, with use of only one lung, nevertheless he held death at bay while very energetic in his calling. Keeping in touch with remedies and diseases has helped this writer to abort many a grave menace, and to escape more than once death itself.

The people need instruction as to maladies, medicines and the structure and functions of the human body. In a word, a series of lectures on the laws of health delivered from our pulpits would serve a wise and merciful purpose.

Let us illustrate. It is known that bad drinking water contains the germs of certain fevers, particularly that plague of the rural sections—typhoid fever.

Water may be "cold as ice" out of a deep well, clear as crystal, sweet as dew, yet deadly. The "well in the yard" costs lives. The ground around a dwelling becomes in a few years very "rich" and poisonous. The refuse mixes with the soil and charges it with active malignant germs. In time these viewless and venomous microbes get into the water supply—the "well," or the "spring at the bottom of the hill." Remember that human beings will infect the soil around their dwelling. We know doctors who will never touch a drop of water while visiting certain families. A well "at the kitchen door" is convenient, saves labor. It means sickness—death.

We consulted a scientific physician of New York as to the location of a residence. He gave opinions. Let your house sit on a hill, a gravelly soil, "poor place," with water running off from it. Locate in regard to water—a spring. The spring ought to be a quarter of a mile away, far from any habitation. Pipe the water to your house. Get abundant supply. Let your sewer pipes run down the hill in the opposite direction from the spring. Carry your sewerage far away where it can be utilized in garden or crops. Flush out your drainage track. Use copperas (very cheap) in the closets. Let your stables be below your dwelling and as far as you can from it—one to two hundred yards. If you must have a "well," dig it a good distance. Have no dwelling, stable, farm yard near it. Use a windmill to draw the water. Let it flow in a pipe to the dwelling. Death is in the well by the kitchen.

We have known a town noted for fevers turned into a sanitarium, winter resort, by sinking artesian wells which get the supply from currents too deep for local contamination. Such wells have improved the health at West Point, in this State, and the regions around about.

"It costs too much." Put the cost by the side of the doctor's bill, the suffering of a long illness, the corpse of child, wife, mother. Better live in a log hut than drink polluted water. The prime question is pure water. Mark you, the tongue or nose can not judge the character of the water. It may taste and smell "all right," yet a poison. These are settled facts.

It costs to be ignorant or stingy in matters of health. Let the pulpit and press inculcate these laws of hygiene.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

NUGENT—DENNIS OLIVER NUGENT WAS born Sept. 19, 1849, in the parish of Rapides, State of Louisiana, of Matthew and Julia Ann Nugent; was married Oct 24, 1876, to Miss Virginia Taliaferro, of Evergreen, La., and died Dec. 3, 1897, at his home near Milburn, Avoyelles parish, La. He joined the M. E. Church, South, during a protracted meeting held by Bro. John F. Wynn at Liberty Chapel, Grant parish, in July, 1871. His conversion was so bright that it appeared that his countenance and whole being was changed, and to the day of his death he maintained the integrity of his character and purity of his life. He served the church almost twenty-two years as steward and Sunday-school superintendent. Reared in a pious home, his father being a class leader, his life of usefulness is not a surprise. His death was tragic, he being caught in a cotton gin. He was cut in a great many places, but just before he died he recognized the writer, and, in answer to a question, he signified his trust in the Savior. Truly, in the midst of life we are in death!

Bro. Nugent leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his loss. He was buried at White Chapel Church, Sunday, Dec 5, 1897, a large concourse of friends being present.

May God comfort the bereaved ones, and raise up one to carry forward his work in the church! H. S. JOHNS, Pastor.

MCREE—Mrs. BETTIE A. MCRAE died March 7, 1898, at her home near Peelsville, Copiah county, Miss. She was the daughter of Mr. Wm. and Mrs. Susan Beacham. Her father died when she was eight years old; her three brothers, two of whom are living, were younger. In 1860 she joined the Methodist Church at what we now call old Sweet Water Church during a protracted meeting, Rev. R. A. Sibley being pastor. She was married to Mr. F. M McRee, Oct. 4, 1866. Her two sons—one a physician, the other a lawyer—with her husband and aged mother, were the inmates of her home. She was a model woman, and kept a model home.

Probably her last formal visit was to look after the sick at the parsonage. Her pastor did not have a truer or better friend. Hers was an intelligent and consistent piety. In her last illness she suffered much, but was patient, and died in bright expectation of the future.

We buried her in the cemetery at Bethel Church, where her membership was held, and her near kindred were at the funeral except one son, who was too unwell to be present. We commend the bereaved to the grace of God. We are confident there will be a happy reunion in heaven. C. MCDONALD.
Caseyville, Miss.

BLACKWELL—Bro. J. W. BLACKWELL, son of B. M. and H. S. Blackwell, was born near Mill Hill, Miss., Nov. 6, 1872, and died in Memphis, Tenn., March 6, 1898.

Bro. Walter joined the Southern Methodist Church at Mill Hill in August, 1893; Bro. J. A. Huggin, pastor; Bro. A. J. Jones, assistant, doing the preaching.

He had just secured business in Memphis; had been from home only about three weeks. He died suddenly; was sick but a short time, I suppose, of congestion. He was brought home, and Tuesday, the eighth instant, was laid his remains in the silent tomb to wait the resurrection, "when all that are in their graves shall come forth."

Bro. Walter is the first of a large family to pass over the river and rest under the shade;" but while the cloud of sorrow is over the home, and fond hearts are aching, sadly bereft, the clouds are rent and the star of hope is lighting the gloom with the happy expectation of a glorious meeting beyond this vale of tears.

May this affliction help to work for all the saved a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory! J. H. SMITH.

MCCOY—Sister McCoy (nee Smith) was born in Monroe county, Tenn., in 1838, and died in Yazoo county, Miss., on March 1, 1898. She was brought to Mississippi by her parents when quite young, so she was a Mississippian the most of her life. She was happily married to Mr. D. L. McCoy in 1858. Her husband died during the Civil War. She joined the Methodist Church when about sixteen years of age, and lived a consistent member until death. She was sick fourteen months, during all of her afflictions she was never heard to murmur, but was always submissive to the will of God. She was ready for the summons, and could say, "Lord, thy will be done." She was a useful nurse, and was always ready to go where duty called her. The door of her was always a welcome visitor to her home. All who knew her loved her, and those who knew her best loved her best.

May God help loved ones to endeavor to imitate the example that she set before them, and remember that their loss is heaven's gain! Her pastor, W. A. TAMRY.
Free Run, Miss.

HANCOCK—Died at the old home near Chunkshoma, Marshall county, Miss., Bro. A. W. HANCOCK, in the fifty-sixth year of his age.

Bro. Hancock was living alone at the old home where he was raised, having never married. He was a Confederate soldier, and a more valiant son the South did not have to defend her warm hearts and sunny land of fruits and flowers and happy homes. He was a good citizen, a consistent member of the Southern Methodist Church. But all the warfares of earth are ended with him now, and he has gone to the church triumphant.

One brother and many other relatives and friends will miss him here. May they all meet in the happy home of the blessed!
J. H. SMITH.

WHITE—The following resolutions were adopted by the Quarterly Conference of the Abbeville charge, Feb. 26, 1898:

Whereas, Our all-wise and loving heavenly Father has seen fit, in his wise providence, to call from labor to rest our deceased brother, Dr. W. DEE WHITE, who was one of the first members of the Abbeville Church in its organization, and from that time has acceptably filled prominent official positions, and was a most consistent and active member and liberal supporter of all its institutions; And, Whereas, The community has lost a most excellent physician and liberal, public-spirited man, the family its stay and support, the widow a kind and loving husband, the children a thoughtful and indulgent father, and all a warm-hearted Christian friend; therefore, be it Resolved, By the first Quarterly Conference of the Abbeville charge, Opelousas district, Louisiana Conference, M. E Church, South, Feb. 26, 1898, that, by the death of Dr. White, the M. E. Church, South, and especially the Abbeville charge and community, sustain a great loss.

Resolved, That, as a church, we bow in humble submission to the divine will, and will revere the memory and emulate the virtues and Christian character of our deceased brother.

Resolved, That we tender the sorrowing family and loved ones our heartfelt sympathies, and pray the abiding presence of the Comforter with them in this, their great bereavement. JNO. A. MILLER, for Com.

Jesus Christ takes a world of pains in the making of a first-class Christian. Sometimes he applies his pruning-knife so that every branch of his vine may bring forth more fruit. Knives are made to cut, and sometimes our loving Master's knife cuts deep. So does the sculptor's chisel. Before the sculptor's eye there rises a certain ideal form which he desires to bring out of the marble, and he does not ask the marble's permission to apply either chisel or hammer. Before our Master's eye there is an ideal of what you and I ought to be, and if he can correct our faults, and develop our graces, and increase our influence for good, and make us better Christians, he does not hesitate to use sharp instruments. "Whom I love I chasten," and the literal meaning of that word is to cause suffering. The Master has a great many places for his gold where he refines it. May you not be in just one of those places now? If so, then it is the best place for you.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D D.

Now that so many of our readers are entering on a new Conference year, it seems in place to say, by way of gentle reminder, that ministerial success can not be altogether gauged by the size of the congregation, or the salary, or even by the number of converts reported, or the amount of benevolent money raised. For all these things may be affected by influences quite beyond the control of the toiler. He who seems to human eyes to fail may really succeed, according to the heavenly estimate. To do one's best with utmost conscientiousness, severely faithful, not sparing labor, lavish of self, loyal to all one's light, dead in earnest for the glory of God and the good of men—is not this success, no matter what comes of it? It is something open to all, whether in large stations or small.—Zion's Herald.

Oftentimes the little things you do don't seem of much account. But they are. One Spring morning a little boy planted a single seed in a bank of earth. It grew, budded, and blossomed into sweet blue violets unseen by the child planter. It also seeded, and the seed fell out upon the bank of earth, and the next Spring more violets grew; and so for years, increasing every season. The boy, grown a man in a foreign land, desired to visit his childhood's home. When he saw the bank of violets he remembered how, years before, he had planted there a single seed. "Can it be," he said, "that all these have sprung from the single seed I planted? I will never waste a single seed"—English Exchange.

Let the peace of God rule in your hearts.—Col. iii, 15.

There is a peace that will enter there if you do not thwart it; there is a Spirit that will take possession of your soul, provided that you do not quench it. In this world we are recipients, not creators. In obedience and in gratefulness, and the infinite peace of God in the soul of man, is alone deep rest and repose.—F. W. Robertson.

It seems wonderful that God should make his work to be dependent upon human co-operation, but it is true. Jesus could do no mighty work in his own country because of the unbelief of the people. How often have we made his power to help us ineffectual by our failure to co-operate with him.

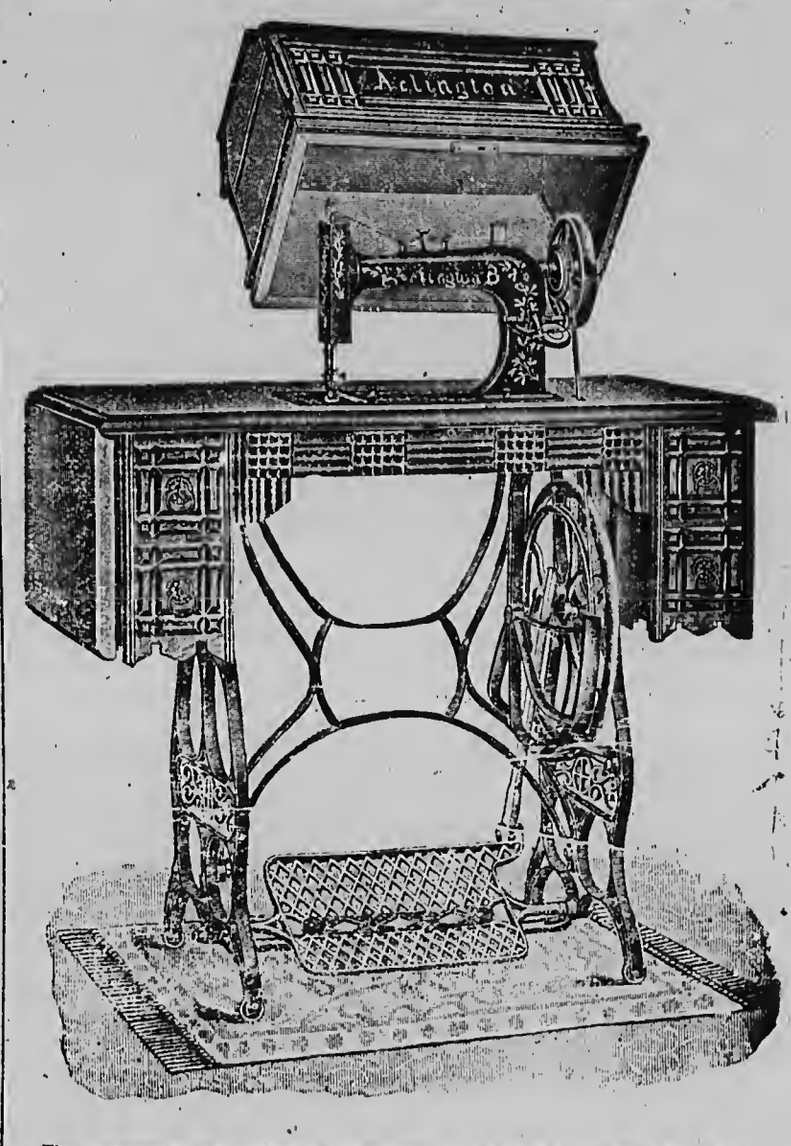
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm, "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '99, and send $17 additional, and we will send you the machine. This price does not include freight.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Orders were issued on Friday to have all warships painted black, a color that is better adapted to hostilities because the vessels will not afford as good a target.

An attempt is being made in Boston to raise $50,000 for a dormitory for the girl students at Radcliffe College, Harvard University's annex. President Eliot favors it.

The damages in Ohio from the heavy rains and overflowing rivers will amount to millions of dollars. At Zanesville and Hamilton some lives were lost. In other towns many homes were swept away.

In a message sent to Congress by the President, he says that the "Maine" was destroyed by the explosion of a submarine mine. He asks that Spain be given a chance to make proper reparation voluntarily.

Women are to the fore in educational matters in Colorado. Out of the 59 counties in the State 27 have women superintendents of schools, and every School Board has one or two women members.

The governors of Massachusetts and New York are requested to direct their naval militia to assume charge of the monitors assigned for the protection of the harbors of Boston and New York in conjunction with land forces.

Rabbis in Baltimore, in order to encourage attendance at the synagogues on the part of young people, have decided to decline to officiate at the weddings of couples who had not previously attended synagogue with some degree of regularity.

Baltimore is macadamizing her suburban roads by labor of the inmates of the House of Correction. Last year she paid $9000 per mile for macadamizing suburban roads. With convict labor she does it as well at a cost of $1000 per mile.

Last week the twin battle-ships, "Kearsarge" and "Kentucky," were launched from the ways at Newport News, Va., where the gigantic hulls have been in course of construction for more than a year past. Owing to the war fever which prevails, there was an unusually large and enthusiastic crowd in attendance, and the greatest interest was manifested in the ceremony.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union took an emphatic way of indorsing the water christening of the warship "Kentucky" and to congratulate Miss Bradley upon her strength in resisting Kentucky blandishments to follow tradition. When the young sponsor left Washington for Newport News she was met at the depot by committees from the district, national and world's Unions, who presented her with flowers, and in a warm eulogy thanked her for her stand for white ribbon principles.

All of the Southern senators and members who are called in consultation by the President remark upon the calmness and conservatism he has displayed in dealing with the Spanish question. He invoked their aid in carrying out the purpose of the administration, of which he gave an intimation. Mr. McKinley particularly laid stress on the necessity for deliberate action by Congress after the "Maine" report was submitted in order that the plans of the administration might be put into effect before any decisive action was taken by Congress. He expresses a desire to prevent war, but wants it understood that the country would be ready for that event and wished to put the United States in such a position before the world that their course would be justified on priacicples of right and humanity.

The court of inquiry, appointed to investigate the cause of the "Maine" disaster, has reported that the loss of the battle-ship was due to an outside explosion. The State Department, by direction of the President, has cabled United States Minister Woodford, at Madrid, to notify the Spanish government of this conclusion. Members of the Cabinet stated, after a meeting, that the discussion was of a grave character, and that never since the wrecking of the "Maine" has the situation seemed so critical. The Spanish government has cabled officially to Washington that the Spanish naval commission holds the disaster to the "Maine" to be of internal origin. The government of Spain, it can be stated positively, is not disposed to turn back the flotilla now proceeding from the Canaries, and would be disinclined to consider a suggestion from this government tending to interfere with the disposition by Spain of her own naval forces. War preparations on an unprecedented scale are being hurried to completion by War and Navy Departments, and the country is practically on a war footing.

FOREIGN.

The Mormons are pushing their propaganda very actively in Belgium. At Liege they have opened a large hall, and have five missionaries working on the simple-minded peasants of that province.

The failure of the sugar bounty system in Europe to stimulate the production of beet sugar at paying prices, has forced the growers to look about for other means of improving the condition of their industry.

On Sunday there occurred in Spain the general elections for members of the Cortes. As this was the first election since the advent to power of the Liberals under Sagasta, the result was looked forward to with considerable anxiety. The triumph of Senor Sagasta will make the chances of peace between Spain and this country much better. Assured of a supporting Cortes the Spanish Premier will feel freer to negotiate on broad lines and will not hesitate to make concessions he would not have dared to entertain for a moment a week ago.

The old reliable remedy for cough, cold, croup and sore throat, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, should be kept in every home.

A WARNING TO MEN AND BOYS!

DYING FROM CIGARETTE SMOKING!

A doctor writes to the editor of the Banner and Herald that a sixteen-year-old boy in Michigan City, Ind., is dying at his parents' home from excessive cigarette smoking.

His eyes are congorged and face bloated, with the tremors of death and suffering depicted upon his every expression, and is constantly kept under the influence of chloroform to appease his great agony and distress, and can last only a few days longer at the best. This sad spectacle of human suffering and ultimate death from tobacco poisoning is causing intense excitement in all circles here.

It is only another warning crying out against the use of tobacco and rum, poison that destroys soul and body.

Note—A paper recently stated that the Kentucky Assembly has passed a bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes throughout the State.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ROUTE TO BALTIMORE VIA WASHINGTON CITY.

The Chesapeake and Ohio railway with its connections offers by far the most interesting route to the Conference in Baltimore in May. The route from Louisville is through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, passing Frankfort, the State Capital Lexington, and the home of Henry Clay. At Ashland the line from Cincinnati is joined; the route from Cincinnati being along the banks of the beautiful Ohio river for 165 miles. Shortly after entering West Virginia the banks of the Kanawha river are followed, Kanawha Falls is passed and the canons of New River are penetrated. After skirting the picturesque Greenbrier for 50 miles, the heights of the Alleghenies are reached, and next comes the Shenandoah Valley, the Blue Ridge Mountains and Piedmont section, the most beautiful of the Appalachain Valley. After passing through Charlottsville and Gordonsville, the route is through the most memorable battle fields of the Civil War, among them Cedar Mountain, Culpepper, Rappahannock, Warrenton Junction, Manasses and Bull Run.

ARE YOU DRIFTING?

BY W. C. MARTIN.

Are you drifting with the current
As it gently flows along?
Or resisting all allurements
To a line of conduct wrong?
Spread your sails to catch the breezes,
Setting toward the Beulah land,
And direct your bark according
To the Master's right command.

Are you drifting with the current Setting from the golden strand?
Or exerting every power
Evil forces to withstand?
Seek and catch the precious breathings
Of the Spirit of the Lord,
And for pilot take the Master
Of the stormy seas aboard.

Are you drifting with the current
Flowing gently, but away,
From the harbor of salvation
To the breakers of dismay?
Lift a cry for help to Jesus,
Stronger than the swiftest tide;
And into the peaceful harbor
You will surely, safely glide.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION UNDER CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES FOR OUR GIRLS.

BY REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, D. D.,
Pastor Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss.

(Concluded.)

The notion of too many parents, which expresses itself in their ideals of female education, that the only duty a parent owes to a daughter is to get her married to some man, is heathenish and most degrading to womanhood. When I see a parent reckless of a daughter's education, but anxious to get her "rigged up" and ushered into that misnamed abomination called "society"—I think of the Turk or the Chinaman with his daughter in the market anxious to sell her to any man able to buy—I feel like crying out: "A fair young American girl born of so-called Christian parents, who are very anxious to get rid of her, is for sale—what man with more money than morals will bid?"

I knew a woman with two diplomas from a so-called college begging her bread in the streets of Meridian less than a year ago. She had diplomas, but she had very little education. The superficial education that prides itself on its music, art and French will not avail in the practical struggle of common life to-day. All of our girls can not get music classes; there is very little money in picture-painting, and none at all in jabbering poor French.

This is the very lowest view to take of this matter. There are higher considerations which argue more strongly still for collegiate training for our girls. An educated mother will never consent for her children to grow up in ignorance. The superficially educated mothers of the generation before this gave to the South a generation of uneducated men. The hope we have for a better educated population is the hope for a generation of educated mothers. We owe it to ourselves, our children, our country and our God to foster and encourage the higher education of our girls.

My theme leads me to say that this education must be Christian as well as collegiate, and that means that it must be under the immediate control and direction of the church. The notion prevails in some quarters that it is the business of the church to educate in religion only—to do the work of the Sunday-school and the pulpit, and leave all other educating to be done by the State. This is not God's notion. In the only state he ever organized—the old Jewish theocracy—the church did all of the educating. Her prophets were the presidents of her colleges and the teachers of her lower schools. The very name given in her language to pupils indicates this; they were called "the sons of the prophets." In later times, when there were but few prophets, the rabbis took their place as teachers; hence the learned Saul of Tarsus "sat at the feet of Gamaliel"—i. e., went to a college of which Rabbi Gamaliel was president and principal teacher.

The Christian Church for nearly nineteen centuries has followed her mother's example, making the work of educating part of her glorious mission. Can we of to-day suggest a better plan? After four thousand years of successful experience shall we lightly abandon a policy ordained of God, and take to some wild scheme of a latter-day philosophy?

Two hundred years ago New England adopted a system of public schools which were placed out of the reach of the church, and were fostered by compulsory laws. The result is that her public schools have almost crowded out all church education, for 90 per cent. of her children attend them, while only 10 per cent. attend private or church schools, or do not go to any school. What is the result of this plan tried for two centuries in New England? Prof. Samuel Boyce, in a book published in Boston, confesses: "There is hardly a state or county in the civilized world where atrocious and flagrant crimes are so common as in educated Massachusetts." There is, according to the statistics, six times more crime in proportion to population in New England than there is in the South. This awful demoralization is evidenced by the filthy divorce plague which has devastated so many New England homes in the last fifty years. In Massachusetts there was in 1878 one divorce to every 21.4 marriages; in Vermont, one to every 14; in Connecticut, one to every 10.6; in Rhode Island, one to every 11.8. Romanists allow no divorces. If we count them out of the population, the proportion of divorces to marriages is as follows: Massachusetts, 1 to 14; Vermont, 1 to 12; Connecticut, 1 to 8; Rhode Island, 1 to 8.

In the city and county of Sacramento, Cal., for the year ending June 1, 1883—the year I lived there—there was more than one divorce for every five marriages. California is largely settled from New England, and the same educational system prevails there.

Other and kindred vices follow in the train of this horrible divorce plague. Looseness in the marriage relation brings luxness in chastity. This is an invariable law. In Massachusetts, for the period of eighteen years from 1860 to 1878, divorces increased 250 per cent., and marriages less than 4 per cent.; convictions for crime increased 20 per cent., but convictions for crimes against chastity increased 300 per cent. In California, where I spent over seven years in the pastorate, I was frequently brought face to face with the fact that a lapse in chastity did not exclude a woman from society, but that the mistresses of many of the lordliest mansions had either become mothers before they were wives, or had served a term in the slums.

The question may be asked: Is this awful demoralization in New England and California to be attributed to the educational system prevailing in those sections? New England has given type to California society by giving so many of her people and by being considered a sort of model for younger sections to copy. New England's two centuries of public education out of the reach of the church, where ninety per cent. of all the children are thus trained, bear most positive evidence of the danger of such a system. It is but natural that such results should follow such a system. The child's earliest impressions are its strongest and most lasting. In these days of kindergartens and other infant schools the New England child gets many of these earliest impressions from his teacher. A child's teacher is generally his bean ideal. If that teacher—the child's ideal of man or woman—is irreligious, the child is more than inclined to be so, too, thinking it the more sensible way. If that teacher is an infidel, the child will think infidelity an indication of mental vigor or large learning. The rampant infidelity of New England is fostered by her godless teachers in her churchless public schools. In California I frequently met public school teachers who were positive and outspoken infidels. Some would sneer in their teaching at the selections of Scripture found in the readers.

State education must be unsectarian. It would not do for any denomination to use everybody's money to teach its own sectarian dogmas; hence it must be unsectarian. In striving to be this, it often becomes anti-sectarian, and easily going further, it becomes first unreligious, then irreligious, and finally anti-religious. The Jew says, "I pay my taxes to this school fund, and the New Testament must not be taught;" another says, "I am a New Testament Christian, and do not wish the Old Testament taught my children." There are such. Then another comes in and says, "I am a Freethinker (?), and do not believe in either Testament, so let neither be taught;" and the State accepts this solution of the quarrel between the Jew and the New Testament man, and a like discussion between the Protestant and the Roman Catholic, and the Bible is banished from the public school, and prayer in the school is forbidden.

I do not wish to be misunderstood. The State has been driven to educate because the church has failed to do it. Nothing is more dangerous to the welfare of a State than ignorant voters; hence, to avoid the calamity of ignorant voters, the State is compelled to establish and maintain our public schools, the church having failed to do the work. I am glad the public schools are here, for many are getting some education in them who would get none at all without them. The Methodist Church can not afford to relegate the education of her daughters to the State, nor even to colleges run by any other than herself.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES"—NO. 2.

"Sextus" tells us that "the common law, the perfection of human reason, regulates our social relations; that the common law has its foundation and original in the Holy Bible, and that nowhere is this more clearly exemplified than in the establishment of the legal status of the sexes." In other words, the legal status, or standing, of the sexes is one and the same both in the Bible and in the common law. I may expose myself to ridicule when I say that I do not believe that the common law, as it relates to the legal status of the sexes, is the perfection of human reason; nor is it an exact transcript of the Holy Scriptures on this subject. More: I do not believe that all of the best-trained lawyers hold this view.

Mr. Story says: "In respect to the powers and rights of married women the law is by no means abreast of the spirit of the age. Here are seen the old fossil footprints of feudalism. The law relating to woman tends to make every family a barony, or a monarchy, or a despotism, of which the husband is the baron, king, or despot, and the wife the dependent, serf, or slave. That this is not always the fact is due not to the law, but to the large humanity which spurns the narrow limits of its rules. The progress of civilization has changed the family from a barony to a republic, but the law has not kept pace with the advance of ideas, manners, and customs."

It would seem that Mr. Story was a better reader of the signs of the times than my younger friend, "Sextus." Anyway, they differ very materially about the source of inspiration and information in fixing the legal status of the sexes. Mr. Story thinks many of these laws are the remains of feudalism, as no doubt they are, and "Sextus" would have us believe they were transcribed from the Word of God.

Again: "It is a maxim of the English common law that 'the legal existence of the wife is merged in that of her husband.' This implies that, as against her husband, a woman has no legal rights. This was the law in glorious, enlightened, liberty-loving England until 1870."

"Sextus" evidently thinks that this ought to be the law yet in all enlightened Christian lands, for he grows eloquent in depicting the shame and the disgrace and the real danger that has come in this country because some of the States have adopted statutes whereby the wife can go into court and recover from her husband money honestly due her. "Sextus" reads the signs of the times through feudal glasses fully one thousand years old, and through the same glasses he reads the Word of God. The wife, as a human being, has no legal rights that her husband is bound to regard.

I suppose that "Sextus" knows that within the past forty or fifty years all of the States of this Union have passed laws that are a wonderful improvement upon this maxim of the old English common law. "Sextus" thinks this advancement in recognition of the personal existence and rights of women would grieve the "spirits of the departed sages of the law" who worship at the shrine of "this common law of Baron and Feme."

In regard to the legal status of woman "Sextus" will find some interesting and profitable reading in "Christian Womanhood," by Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., pages 173-183.

God hath ordained "that they twain shall be one flesh," but in too many instances they are no longer twain, but one, and that one the husband alone. The wife has no personality and no rights that the husband is bound to regard. The signs of the times indicate, if I do not misinterpret the signs, that this old feudal and degrading view of the wife's relation to her husband is rapidly passing away in all Christian lands. The women may well take comfort and be of good courage, for the day of their salvation draweth nigh. If the law of love were supreme in the hearts of men, then wives would need no legal enactments to protect them against the wrongs perpetrated upon them by their husbands. The lack of love makes law necessary. "Husbands ought to love their wives as Christ loved the church," and then they would be ready and willing to provide for them, to deny themselves for them, and, if need be, to die for them. Where this is the case it is a small matter and a real pleasure for the "wife to be in subjection to her own husband in everything."

There is no law and no need of law where love is supreme. Principle, high and holy in its nature, takes the place and precedence of law, and men and women do right because they love to do it. This is God's law in relation to the marriage relation, and, indeed, the law that should govern men and women in all the social and business relations of this life.

I am sure no high-minded, great-souled, noble woman wants to be so merged into her husband that, in fact and in form, she would lose her identity, her individuality, and her personality, and yet just such a woman would be proud to be one with her husband in everything if loved and respectfully treated by him as she ought to be.

To my way of thinking the hardest requirement laid on wives in God's Word is, "And the wife see that she reverence her husband." How some good women manage to reverence the husbands they have is more than I can understand. They are too bestial, besotted and brutal to be reverenced by anybody. And yet the common law merges this noble woman into this brutal husband, and counts him everything and the woman nothing. "This is the perfection of human reason." Fie on human reason. I do not believe one word of it.

GILDEROY.

ARIZONA.

BY A. C. G.

The Territory of Arizona is 113 000 square miles in area. It now has a population of 88 000, though it was refused Statehood recently on the ground of its illiterate Indian and Mexican inhabitants. It is estimated that 3,000 will cover these, leaving 85,000 who are educated and progressive. Our soil lying along the Salt, Gila and Verde rivers is very productive, and devoted to agriculture. Much of the Territory is fertile, and only needs facilities for irrigation in order to make many waste places to blossom and yield fruitful harvests. Water is near the surface, and artesian wells, windmills, ditches and dams, capital and increased population would materially change the face of the country, reclaiming much that is now bare and uninviting. Land is cheap, and is sometimes bought or sold in immense tracts. A man bought here last week a grant amounting to 1 509,444 acres for $6,500. Think of paying four cents per acre! This entire tract will probably be utilized as a sheep or cattle ranch.

As a mining country Arizona ranks fifth in its yield of precious metals. It is claimed that the largest stamp and output of copper in the world comes from Jerome, thirty miles above Prescott. The wickedness of the place, the light from the great furnaces, the river of blazing slag, make a gruesome scene, and has caused it to be likened to the infernal regions. Besides copper and precious metals, mica, galena asbestos and borax are found, and some precious stones, as ruby, chalcedony and turquoise. The Arizona ruby is very beautiful and is found in the ant-hills. Onyx is shipped from here to the East to be manufactured into ornamental furniture. Quantities of beautiful sandstone, marble and granite, capable of taking fine polish, of exquisite tints and colors, go from Arizona to the East for ornamental building purposes. These are some of the natural sources of wealth.

The Grand Canon of the Colorado, the Natural Bridge, are some of the wonders. A crater of an old and long extinct volcano can be easily recognized and distinctly seen by travelers from the car window, just west of Ash Fork and south of the railroad. There are more railroads being constructed here now than in any other part of the Union, two of which will run through Prescott.

The locality of this city, once the hiding-place and sure defense of the Indian, abounds in hills, rocks, and chasms in such variety that they could easily conceal themselves, or their escape from an enemy. Here, it is said, not a dozen years ago, Indians lurked behind rocks or trees for exterminating the white settlers. Not a block away from where I now write is the old and original state house, built of logs, and in a fair state of preservation. In another part of the city may be seen Fort Misery, another block-house, where the early settlers were at one time besieged by natives, and where they underwent much suffering and privation until military relief was brought to them. Most of the Indians are now kept on the reservations. The principal of these are the Navajo,* Moqui and Zuni in the north, and the Gila, Salt and White river reservations in the south. The Moqui are distinguished for their superior excellence in blanket-weaving and the finest Indian pottery. They buy their wool, color with diamond dyes, and then charge you as much for weaving as the wool cost—that is, if the wool in the blanket cost ten dollars, you pay an additional ten for weaving. I have seen some that were very beautiful, costing from forty to one hundred dollars. Their pottery is fired, then painted in fanciful designs in white, black, venetian red or yellow ochre; then it is fired again. After that they glaze it and fire again. They all believe in many gods, as the god of rain, of the new moon, of the harvest. The Moqui god of rain is Ormuzd-cachuca, the cachuca being the term for god. The Presbyterians and some other religious denominations have missions among the Arizona Indians.

The whole Territory abounds in archæological treasures. The remains of aqueducts for irrigation in the south, and the cliff dwellings and old forts in this part of the Territory, attest the former existence of a people here superior to the present Indians. Whence they came, or their fate, is as yet undetermined. Two old forts near Prescott are very distinct still, though declared to be hundreds of years old by antiquarians. The cliff dwellings, four or five stories in height, are sometimes marked with finger-prints in the mortar, as plainly discernible as if done only a short while, and yet the accumulation of deposits of dirt and trash on the floors would indicate extreme antiquity. This dry, rare atmosphere has, perhaps, been a potent factor in preserving these marks through so many ages. Bodies that have been buried in the ordinary way have been found here completely mummified. I am told that the Indian and Mexican flesh is so thoroughly permeated with chili (or red pepper) that no living animal would eat their flesh. Many consider this fact and the dry, rare atmosphere the only process of embalming that the mummies have undergone. I saw a child's mummy in the territorial collection here in almost perfect preservation. I was shown also a bowl said to be 1400 years old, of very superior pottery, but not so pretty as that more recently made. Nearly every Indian grave has been rifled by curio fiends, and pottery, mummies, needles, corn, arrows, dolls, cups, and even the bones, have been sold to relic hunters. In the large burying-ground near here every grave is empty, and only the rude circle of rocks is left to mark the spot. Near these graves are hieroglyphics carved on immense boulders that are supposed to record some battle. These would hardly be here but for the fact that the boulders are too large to be handled. Alas! the poor Indian!

*A good and interesting book for boys and girls on Indian lore is "Howling Wolf, or the Trick Pony," by Elizabeth W. Champney.

Selections.

Some one has said that an honest man is the noblest work of God; and taking it in its broadest sense, this is true. There is nothing more worthy of our admiration than a sincere man, who is true to his convictions, who despises duplicity and trickery, and really is what he appears to be. How different from the man whose heart is full of trickery and deceit, who is fair to your face, but ready to betray you behind your back. While we naturally esteem and admire the former, we can not but disapprove and despise the latter. No man can be a good man who is not true, who is not honest, who is not sincere, who is not what he professes to be.—Recorder.

The man who refuses to advance a step toward making friends with his neighbor may imagine that he is as immaculate as his shirt bosom; but anybody can see that he has been handling the old boy's smutty tongs.—Bible Reader.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door, let in the air,
The winds are sweet and the flowers are fair.
Joy is abroad in the world to day.
If our door is wide open, it may come this way—
Open the door.

Open the door, let in the sun:
He hath a smile for everyone.
He hath made of the raindrops gold and gems.
He may change our tears to diadems—
Open the door.

Open the door of the soul, let in Strong pure thoughts which shall banish sin;
They will grow and bloom with a grace divine,
And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the vine—
Open the door.

Open the door of the heart, let in Sympathy sweet for stranger and kin;
It will make the halls of the heart so fair
That angels may enter unaware—
Open the door.

REV. REUBEN ELLIS.

BY REV. W. S. HARRISON.

In 1858 I was in charge of the Middleton circuit, Memphis Conference. This circuit was partly in Tippah county, Miss. Next to my presiding elder, Rev. Hudson D. Howell, the Methodist preacher who came oftenest in my view, and made the most lasting impression on my mind, was Rev. Reuben Ellis. He was then about sixty-eight years old, and, I believe, on the supernumerary list.

Mr. Ellis lived near Rienzi, Miss., and all the work of his later life was done in "striking distance" of that place. He was born in North Carolina in 1790; was converted in 1810, and admitted into Virginia Conference in 1814. After traveling some years in Virginia he located and came to Tennessee, where he joined the Tennessee Conference. In a few years he was transferred to the Memphis Conference. Here he labored faithfully, as health and advancing years would permit, till his death. This occurred at his home near Rienzi, April 5, 1868. He was for fifty-four years a preacher of the gospel. Three of his sons, following his example, became preachers.

I remember Father Ellis as an old man, somewhat stooped, of small stature, but active and quick in his movements. In his prime he must have been capable of great labor.

His educational attainments were very meagre. This was constantly manifest by his pronunciation and the structure of his language. But he was endowed with great natural ability. He understood men. His keen insight into human character made him a master of assemblies. He was richly endowed with honest convictions of the truths he preached for the conviction of others. Thoroughly in earnest, voice good, emotions aglow, his ministry was wonderfully successful. It is not surprising that he won a high place in the affections of the people, and that he held it until the day of his death.

Mr. Ellis belonged to a class of preachers who, in the early days of Methodism in this country, with very small furnishing by the schools, did immense service for mankind. They made the wilderness blossom as the rose. Had the pioneers been compelled to wait till the more staid ministries of older ecclesiasticisms had brought to them the shorter catechism or the prayer book, the moral and mental darkness would indeed have become dense. The early Methodist preachers saved the South and West from a season—perhaps, a long season—of semi-barbarism. Those preachers were men of faith. They believed in the Bible; that it was really and truly inspired. They depended on its words to carry conviction to the minds of the most hardened and daring sinners. The texts they used were pulsating with authority. They were glowing missiles thrown out with the strength of conviction, which sent conviction home to other minds. They thundered the anathemas of the law against all offenders. Their denunciation of sin was terrific. The livid eloquence sometimes fairly hissed with the blazes of impending wrath. Then their tones became as tender as a mother's lullaby, and winning as a lover's pleading, as they dwelt on the love which became tragic on Calvary. Such preaching was mental and moral pabulum. It built a church in the wilderness "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and mighty as an army with banners." They preached Christ, the living Christ, the Savior of sinners. They emphasized the cross. As they were accustomed to say, they "hid themselves behind the cross," and from this retreat, as from a masked battery, they hurled gigantic truths blazing with the energies of life into the very hearts and souls of their hearers. They believed in the living presence of the Holy Spirit. They expected the Spirit to carry the inspired words into the minds of sinners as the beginning of a new life. They looked for convictions, expected men and women to cry out for mercy, believed that souls would be born from above, and they were not disappointed.

These men, many of them working on small capital as to mental training, but with large endowments of faith and religious experience, did a noble work for God and humanity. Keeping abreast with the adventurous pioneers, they established churches in log cabins, mapped out large circuits and immense districts, made their rounds regardless of weather, roads, or bridges. They traveled hundreds of miles and preached from two to six sermons a week, examined classes, catechised the children, and instructed the slaves. In this manner they laid broad and strong the foundations of Methodism. They made possible all her later triumphs. The goodly heritage of to-day is the result of their sacrificing labors. They have left rich materials which should be woven into history to feed the piety and direct the enterprise of the present generation.

RECOLLECTIONS OF WOODVILLE.

Looking at the list of delegates to the General Conference, my attention was arrested by the name of H. B. McGehee, Woodville, Miss. Notwithstanding the presumption in differing from the immortal Shakespeare, "What's in a name?" this name awakened a pleasant train of thought, which here finds utterance.

Howard McGehee, grandson of the noble old Southern gentleman, Judge Edward McGehee! Who does not remember him—genial, yet courtly in manner, so gallant a gentleman of the old South, that the smallest girl could not enter without his rising to offer a seat, and yet so unswerving in devotion to the true and the right, that a mighty host could not shake his integrity or weaken his steadfastness. Needless it seems to portray his Christian character, for is not his memory embalmed in the whole of Southern Methodism? His life, written in Centenary Cameos, is known to all, and he being dead yet speaketh, as well to the church at large, as to the hearts of his loving friends. The Methodist Church in New Orleans and the McGehee Institute in Woodville are lasting monuments of his Christian munificence, and in deeds he will live forever in the memory of recipients of his bounty.

H. B. McGehee is of noble ancestry, great and good, for "He is but half great who is not good." As an attractive little black-eyed boy, he lived in his father's house, a lovely home about six miles from Woodville. In this home, beautified by external surroundings, still more by the genial and hospitable inmates, many were the strangers welcomed within its gates, who found rest and refreshment from this hospitable and cordial host, Mr. C. B. McGehee. He married into the McNair family, a name prominent in the South, one of whom, Capt. McNair, sealed his devotion with his life's blood, and fell at Shiloh, lamented as a knightly hero and deeply mourned by his loving family. This family was known and honored in literary and religious circles in New Orleans. Mrs. M. M. McNair, grandmother of H. B. McGehee, was a noble specimen of Southern womanhood. Cultivated, elegant, and intellectual, she was attractive to old and young—above all, she was a devoted follower of Jesus Christ, and none could be with her without feeling instructed and benefited by her companionship. Her daughter, Mrs. C. B. McGehee, was also a lady of rare endowments and remarkable Christian graces. Under such influences H. B. McGehee passed his boyhood, and well could he say with Cowper, with the exception that he is still blessed with his father,

"My boast is not that I deduce my birth
From loins enthroned, or rulers of the earth,
But higher far my proud pretensions rise,
The son of parents passed into the skies."

There were many other families at Woodville at this time whose memory is to me a pleasure. Connected with the McGehees were the Burrus family, children of the noble Christian worker, Mr. John W. Burrus, then recently called up higher. They were gifted and lovely girls, all since passed away, but one, now married, and living in New Orleans. There were many other prominent families in the vicinity of Woodville. Here lived the relatives of our sainted here, Jefferson Davis. His sister, Mrs. Stamps, a lovely and kindly old lady, likewise welcoming the wayfarer and stranger. Her two sons were residents there; one, the gallant Capt. Isaac Stamps, fell in battle, leaving a lovely, elegant widow, and two little girls, all survive him. The daughters married; one living in New Orleans, the other in St. Louis. Mr. Hugh Davis, half brother of Capt. Stamps, was there often, though his home was in the country, and a truer and kinder friend never lived. Many were the needy he assisted during war's destitution; probably never known, for his right hand knew not what his left hand did. He will have his reward from him who said, "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these, ye did it unto me." He had a pleasant and interesting family, some of whom live—one daughter, an agreeable and intelligent lady, now teaching in New Orleans. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wailes were residents at that time, and are gratefully to be remembered by many who were entertained at their hospitable home. Mr. Wailes was an elegant and cultured Southern gentleman, simple and unassuming, who, with his amiable and lovely wife, lived in a simple, but pleasant home, with a lovely family of daughters, who beautified the place with their kindly manners and unaffected welcome to guests, and many happy hours were spent there by visiting strangers. Such homes are ideal, but, alas! can not last long here below. The host and hostess have been called up higher; the daughters acceptably filling their different vocations worthily. It may not be out of place to mention that the youngest daughter, then at school at the excellent institution known now as McGehee Institute, is now Mrs. J. P. Drake, living in a pleasant home at the beautiful semi-tropical coast town, Bay St. Louis, nobly fulfilling her place as a fitting helpmeet for Rev. J. P. Drake, so highly estoomed in the Mississippi Conference. On the coast, too, resides another sister, Mrs. B. Jones, widow of the well known minister of the same Conference. At the time I mention Miss Clara Wailes was at school under the admirable training of the scholarly and able president, Dr. Wm. T. J. Sullivan. It was a rare privilege to be under his teaching; untiring in zeal and labor. Not as many presidents do, leaving the work to the teachers, and acting as a figure head to receive the funds earned by those in his employ, he was diligent in his work, the friend and adviser of teachers and pupils, patient with dullness, and sympathetic and enthusiastic in leading the more gifted. Dr. Sullivan was connected by marriage with a prominent and cultured family, the Magruders, some of them residents of Woodville vicinity and others often there. Many pleasant remembrances are connected with them. There were others from whom I recollect great kindness and hospitality—Mrs. Barton, her family; the Walkers, the Holts, Sticketts, and others.

Indeed, I do not know a town of its size that could boast of so many intelligent people, or were more kind and hospitable to all who were in their circle of acquaintance. "There were giants in those days," but they have gone. Many of these precious friends have "crossed the river," but their memory is enshrined forever in the hearts of those who knew them. Memory, did I say? No, rather, hope—a reunion in a home, eternal in the heavens, where death's dark river can part friends no more, and though sometimes weary of living what passes away,

"We long for that land, whose blest promise alone
Is changeless and sure, as eternity's throne."

THE UNIFORM LESSON SYSTEM NOT SUITED TO THE PRIMARY CLASSES.

MR EDITOR: The Uniform Lesson Series has been used round the world now for twenty-five years. It has done much to speed the success of Sunday-school efforts in all lands, and I suppose that to ages yet unborn it will be "practical and desirable to unite all the schools of our whole country upon one and the same series," as Mr. B. F. Jacobs, of the Superintendents' Committee, reported to the National Convention in 1869.

But for several reasons I have come to believe that the Uniform Lesson System does not present an ideal plan for the infant and primary classes.

1. The child mind in all other educational work needs a different lesson from that of the adult mind. Oftentimes, when the worker considers the current Sunday's lesson, it becomes evident that the committee would never have chosen such an one if they had been selecting specially for little children. They can be brought to comprehend a speck of it, but because a little child can be made to understand what is a hypothenuse is no good reason for putting him into geometry.

2. Children, in learning, need to repeat, going over again and again, day after day, and week after week, the same thing. The literature furnished under the Uniform Lesson System is not as well adapted to this repetition as is the catechism or simple story book, because the leaflets used are so transitory. Known to be for only one week or month, they are oftentimes not kept until Sunday, much less preserved for future use in repetition and review. And, furthermore,

3. Oftentimes the questions and answers and other matter contained in the leaflets are not comprehended by the pupils, and the teacher considers it a waste of time to repeat, and the advantage that comes from reviews is lost.

4. It need hardly be said that literature, to be placed in permanent book form, will be more carefully prepared and adapted to the purpose intended than that which is known to be transient. This will apply with more force to the child's literature, because under the Uniform System this is the most transient of all; and it sometimes happens that, while the magazines prepared for the advanced classes are simply fine, the lesson papers prepared for the little people are only ordinary—it may be, sorry.

It is easier to tear down than it is to build; it is easier to criticise another's sermon than to make a good one of our own; it is not well to destroy faith in existing institutions unless better can be offered. We must hold to our present Uniform Lesson literature for the little folks until some one makes and proposes a more practical literature. An attractive graded course of study, in which lessons go on step by step, is a crying need of the hour in our Sunday-schools, second only to the need of earnest teachers who will instruct in an eloquent manner with proper literature or no literature. Who will make the books? Who will move forward to their adoption if they be made? Already there are some catechisms and a very few other books which might well be used as the beginnings of a graded curriculum.

For some reasons Sunday-school work is not keeping pace with the advances made in the day-schools. Let us begin to think.

ITEMS FROM CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

FOR FOURTH AND LAST QUARTER OF THE FISCAL YEAR, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Miss Kennard, of Port Gibson Auxiliary, reports: "Mrs. E. S. Drake, president, and other officers re-elected. We recognize that the success of our society is due to the untiring zeal and interest of our president. Appropriate memorial services were held in honor of Miss Lucinda B. Helm. A box of clothing sent a minister in Indian Territory, valued at $41.20. Money for local work, $3.50. Collected for L. B. Helm Loan Fund, $7.25."

Mrs. Galloway, East End, Meridian: "We held our last meeting for the year and quarter; full attendance and enthusiastic meeting. While we have grown slowly so far, I do expect better results this year. The members are taking more interest, and others becoming interested. We have started a 'Baby Roll.'"

Mrs. Ford, Magnolia: "Twelve members on Baby Roll, and twenty subscribers to Our Homes. Five boxes of supplies sent during the year."

Mrs. Joyner, Bay St. Louis: "Week of Prayer observed second week in January; collected ninety-five cents. Held our anniversary meeting. Motto for the year, 'Serve the Lord with gladness.' I pray that we may do more this year than ever before."

Mrs. Grant, Oak Ridge: "I am sorry to report that we have not done as good work this last year as the year before; yet, by the help of God, we are going to do our utmost to bring up a better report this year. Our minister, Bro. G. A Gnice, was moved; consequently, we had to give up our president, Mrs. Gnice, a devoted Christian and tireless worker in the vineyard of the Master, and we were grieved to give her up. The children are doing nicely; have twenty members."

Miss Fitzpatrick, Natchez: "The work of visiting sick and strangers, relieving needy, holding cottage prayer meetings, is done by our League, and the same members belong to the P. and H. M. Society; so we can not report on those items."

Mrs. R. L. Evans, Jackson: "Mrs. J. S. Parker was made a life member. One member to Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund. Special parsonage fund, $4.30; dues, $20."

Mrs. Ellis, Fannin: "We are few and weak, but, with God's help, intend to make this the best year's work we have ever done for his cause. Dues, $5.30; local work, $3.15; for parsonage, $4.25."

Mrs. Howell, Canton: "Our auxiliary seems to be doing good work. We have fifteen connectional members. Number of Homes taken, five."

Mrs. Harmon, Lauderdale: "Though I have so recently joined the society, I feel sure no auxiliary has begun the year's work under more favorable and encouraging conditions. The last meeting was well attended, and each one seemed to come with an earnestness of purpose, and I feel sure all were brightened and refreshed. Our consecrated president, Mrs. K. Kennedy, to whose untiring efforts the success of the society is greatly due, realizes her responsibilities. Assisted by faithful officers, it can not fail to inspire the members with renewed hope and zeal. There is a great work before us for 1898, and the society will lose no opportunity to advance along all lines."

Mrs. Dunn, Bradley Chapel: "Our membership is very small; have secured but one subscriber to Our Homes. Local work done to the amount of $4.50."

CHARACTER BUILDING.

Let me remind these Christians who desire to grow in godliness that they may commit the serious mistake of trying to "grow by wholesale." A vague desire to be better, stronger, holier, will come to nothing. Character is built, like the walls of an edifice, by laying one stone upon another.

Lay hold of some single fault, and mend it. Put the knife, with God's help, to some ugly, besetting sin. Stop that one leak that has let so much into your ship. Put into practice some long-neglected duty. The first step to improvement with one person was to banish his decanters; with another, to discontinue his secular paper on Sunday morning; with another, to ask the pardon of an injured friend; with another, to go after some street arabs and take them to a mission school. He can never be rich toward God who despises a pennyworth of true piety. Holiness is just the living to the Lord in the least things as well as the greatest; for graces can only be gathered one by one.

I count this thing to be grandly true,
That a righteous deed is a step toward God,
Lifting the soul from its common clod
To a purer air and a clearer view.

Heaven is not reached by a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round.

MR. GLADSTONE ON THE BIBLE.

What crisis, what trouble, what perplexity of life has failed or can fail to draw from this inexhaustible treasure house its proper supply? What profession, what position is not daily and hourly enriched by these words, which repetition never weakens, which carry with them now, as in the days of their first utterance, the freshness of youth and immortality? When the solitary student opens all his heart to drink them in, they will reward his toil. And in forms yet more hidden and withdrawn, in the retirement of the chamber, in the stillness of the night season, upon the bed of sickness, and in the face of death, the Bible will be there, its several words how often winged with their several and special messages, to heal and to soothe, to uplift and to uphold, to invigorate and to stir.

Nay more, perhaps, than this; amid the crowds of the court, or the forum, or the street, or the market-place, when every thought of every soul seems to be set upon the excitements of ambition, or of business, or of pleasure, there, too, even there, the still small voice of the Holy Bible will be heard, and the soul, aided by some blessed word, may find wings like a dove, may flee away and be at rest.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF GIVING.

The giver is the possessor of a fullness which makes him akin to God. The eternal in his essence is so abundant in his fullness that the cup of divine nature runs over. God's nature "must out," and because of its unsearchable riches must express itself in the glad creation of beauty. This he has done, and continues doing, and all the universe is brimming over with the mighty expression of the boundless heart.

The blessedness of giving is the blessedness of the Eternal Giver, and in a measure to enter into the joy of our God is the portion of those who catch and reflect his Spirit.

Giving bears fruit in the divine life within as well as filling the lives of those who receive. The use of the brain conduces to its strength and alertness. The expenditure of strength creates strength, and giving awakens and cultivates the good and latent energies within, so that to scatter is to increase, and to withhold is to make poor. The consciousness of increasing power, the rapture of quickened and more comprehensive insight, the tuning of the strings of sensibility to the pitch celestial—these are the blessedness of giving.—Episcopal Recorder.

King Henry IV. of France, on the field of Ivry, seeing his advance-guard hesitating and some even preparing to fly, exclaimed, "Turn your heads, and if you will not fight, at least see me die!" They turned and saw the snow-white plume, which ever appeared in the forefront of the fight, and nerved by their leader's unflinching bravery, they gained a complete victory. Christians can not settle down on earth in undisturbed rest; but though we may not be called upon to take the sword, we have to do battle valiantly against evil within and without.—Exchange.

Pitt was once asked what quality was most needful in a Prime Minister. One of the party suggested "eloquence;" another, "knowledge;" and another, "toil." "No," said Pitt, "it is patience." Almost as much as a Prime Minister does a Christian worker require patience. Often he can see no result of his work, and he has to try experiment after experiment, and must give each experiment considerable testing time. Without faith and charity no work deserves to be called Christian, and the more of these there are the more patience there will be.—The Quiver.

ARCADIA DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

Pursuant to a call of our presiding elder, Rev. B. T. Crews, the Preachers' and Laymen's Meeting met in the church at Arcadia, March 15, at 8:30, and adjourned on the seventeenth at 10:45.

All the preachers of the district, with the exception of four, were present. There were very few laymen present, owing, doubtless, to the busy period of the year.

The following subjects were discussed with thoroughness and to the elevation of all present: Revivals, Pastoral Work, Relation of Pastor to Sunday-schools, Pastoral Instruction to Children, How to Develop Church Workers, Ministerial Courtesy, Missions, Best Methods to Raise Church Finances, Need of the Holy Spirit in Preparation and Delivery of Sermons, and Epworth Leagues. The address of Rev. A. J. Notestine, on "How to Develop Church Workers," and the paper by Rev. Elton Wilson, on "Need of the Holy Spirit in Preparation and Delivery of Sermons," were of very high order.

We adjourned feeling abundantly repaid for the time spent in this meeting. After the social and spiritual intercourse, the interchange of thoughts and opinions on things pertaining to the success of Zion in our district, and listening to five most excellent sermons, the preachers go to their respective charges feeling better equipped for the battle. The preachers are all in high spirits, and confidently looking forward for the best record of the Arcadia district in its past history.

Resolutions were passed ordering a district rally meeting of Epworth Leagues, the programme to be arranged, the time and place to be appointed by a committee consisting of the presidents of the Leagues now in existence. Miss Ione Smith, president of the League at Arcadia, was made chairman of said committee. It is hoped by this means to arouse an interest among our young people in the League.

The presence of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, presiding elder of Shreveport district, was a source of pleasure and profit to all present. His words of wisdom and godly counsel, springing from long experience, will long be "treasured up" in our hearts.

Resolutions of thanks to the Arcadia people for their unbounded hospitality and to Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard for his serviceable presence with us were unanimously adopted. Bro. Sheppard extended an urgent invitation to attend the preachers' meeting of the Shreveport district, the time and place to be announced.

PIOUS PROFANITY.

The flippant repetition of hallelujah, bless the Lord, praise the Lord, which we hear these days in religious speeches, common conversation, and see in letters, is in many cases mere cant. It is a fad or fashion of a certain class of people, and such expressions are frequently used without a particle of feeling. This machine religion is of a very inferior sort. Such expressions, when prompted by emotion or spiritual impulse, are all right in their place; but when they are a mere habit or an attempt to produce an impression of superior sanctity, they are calculated to bring religion into contempt. We have a right to speak of God, but we should always do it in terms of reverence. The flippant manner in which the name of God is often used in sermons, exhortations, prayers and private conversations, amounts to profanity. Common swearing and cursing are not the only ways in which God's name is taken in vain.—Exchange.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. C. Lester, Black Hawk, Miss., writes: "We are moving along very nicely; have painted the parsonage and nearly near enough in hand to build a body. Fine Sunday-school at each church. Every interest of the church is in fine shape."

Rev. B. P. Fullilove, Corinth circuit: "Yesterday there came a nice, gentle breeze from the West, and it blew for some time. It blew corn, hams, butter, eggs, fruit, both canned and dried, sweet bread and cake. I tell you those fellow women know how to make the preacher and his family happy. May the Lord abundantly bless them this year in basket and store!"

Rev. W. T. Woodward, Simesport, La., March 25, 1898: "This is the fourth year on this circuit. We are commencing well. We have received by profession since Conference five by certificate. Our Sunday-schools are doing an excellent work indeed. We expect to observe Children's Day at all points. Congregations upon regular preaching services better than ever before at this time of the year. Our assessments for all purposes this year have been raised. We are going to try to meet the obligation. We have the Alexandria District Conference with us, beginning May 26, 1898. We would be delighted to have the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE editor with us on that grand occasion. We are expecting great and good times then. The presiding elder and all his co-laborers are cordially invited and expected to be here. Gardens, pigs and chickens are very promising in this vicinity this Spring. Bro. A. C. Flowers has things his way over in Point Coupee parish this year, doing a very good work; has organized two Sunday-schools. Has collected about 20 or 22 members already."

Rev. G. M. Hull, P. C., Washington circuit, Mississippi Conference: "We have been on this circuit about two months. We are very well pleased so far. This is one of the oldest circuits in the Conference. About one hundred yards from the parsonage steps is a pile of brick-bats which marks the place where the first Methodist Church in the State stood. It was organized by Tobias Gibson shortly after his arrival in the Mississippi Territory, as the first missionary of our church. Across the street from the parsonage lot is the campus of Jefferson College—the oldest college in the State. Being endowed with forty-five thousand dollars, and being presided over by Prof. Raymond, a most excellent Christian gentleman, it can offer the youth of our country many inducements. Surrounded by so many places—too numerous to mention—of interest to any Mississippian, and especially to a Mississippi Methodist, we are to labor this year. This is a very intelligent Christian people, and, perhaps, this is as liberal as can be found anywhere in the Conference. The fruits of such pastors as Watkins, Winans and Drake do follow them. For several years after the war Methodism did not flourish, but we are now on a firm footing again. Everything bespeaks a good year's work in all departments. Pastor and people are aiming at a full financial report, and a general spirit of revival."

LEXINGTON, MISS.

There are no happier people in all the country than Rev. W. W. Mitchell, his wife and all his flock in Lexington. Methodism there no longer stands at the "foot of the class;" indeed, they have made a great big "head mark." The church for which they have struggled for several years has been completed, and on Sunday, March 6, was dedicated by Bishop Galloway. It is a beautiful brick building with lovely stained glass windows, nineteen in number, and all memorial and tribute windows. Ah! what a history in each one; most of them for those who have gone before, and others for those yet in the rank and file of life. One down in the west near the chancel for the pastor and his wife—a token of love and appreciation which speaks volumes, for had they not worked together, Building Committee, Ladies' Aid Society, for months and years? The "crowning day" dawned bright and cloudless, the great congregation went up to the temple to worship. The Bishop preached as he only can one of those eloquent heart-sermons; then in his inimitable way, with his personal magnetism, drew out of the pockets of the people nearly four hundred dollars, clearing the church of all indebtedness—pews, carpet, chandeliers, chairs, everything complete. They can sing, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." There was one cloud to mar the day—one vacant chair, for many in that large audience missed the form and voice of Miss Bettie Ford Watson, whose place was rarely vacant in the choir till last Christmas morning; her young life was a "gift to heaven." What a treasure above; but, oh! how much poorer is earth. It was her great desire to live to see the new church dedicated to God and sing his praise in her accustomed place, but with that magnificent voice she now swells the volume of song in the "angel choir," and by her pure life while on earth draws many loved ones and friends heavenward.

The dedication was followed by protracted services; Rev. J. S. Oakley, the presiding elder, preaching the first sermon. He is known to so many as a strong and forcible preacher; presiding elders, though, belong to others, and he could not stay. He was followed by Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Hernando Street Church, Memphis, Tenn. Bro. Ramsey needs no introduction to North Mississippians: he only came "home," preaching more than a week a gospel pure and strong, drawing the people closer together in Christian love. Indeed, it was a remarkable meeting in many respects: there seemed to be no denominational lines. Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodists "laboring together with God" for the salvation of souls. He did much good; and the hearts and homes of Lexington will always have a welcome for him.

Bro. Mitchell is filling his fourth year in Lexington, and they have been years of hard work. He says his has been a "money administration." Somebody has to raise money and build churches and homes for the preachers, though not an enviable position, as every pastor knows. But from the expressions of his people and "others not of his fold," there will be a vote at the General Conference in May for an extension of the pastorate—at least, in Lexington.

A METHODIST.

NESHOBA CIRCUIT.

We were kindly received for our third year's work on the Neshoba circuit. Five days after Conference adjourned we found ourselves in the parsonage here, and in a day or so were ready for work. We have been hard at it ever since, and, tho Lord being our helper, we expect to keep at it all the year. We had not been on this work long before we felt quite at home among these good people. The longer we stay here the more we feel that way. Since our return the people have given us many expressions of their kindly feeling for their pastor. They have given him to understand that he need not be uneasy about a support, and a great many have assured him of their prayers and hearty co-operation in his work. May the Lord help us to so labor together this year that we may greatly advance his cause, and lead many souls to Christ!

Our first Quarterly Conference for this year embraced last Saturday and Sunday. Rev. W. W. Simmons, our presiding elder, was on hand. His preaching was to the great delight and edification of everybody. His sermon on prayer, Saturday, was very much enjoyed; but Sunday, at eleven o'clock in the morning, he completely captured the whole congregation. His theme was the love of God, and his text was, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us." Bro. Simmons is a model presiding officer as well as a strong preacher. We feel confident that, under his wise leadership, the Lord's cause will prosper in our hands this year. We hated very much to give up Dr. Andrews, for he was greatly loved by our people; but as the change was made, we were fortunate in falling into the hands of such a man as Bro. Simmons. A good presiding elder, a strong preacher, and, above all, a man of God, we may expect his visits to be a blessing to us all. He was the one who, in the hands of God, led this scribe to Christ. He was then on the China Grove circuit, and was assisting Bro. Charley Smith, of the Columbia circuit, in a meeting at Hopewell Church. His sermon, Sunday morning, was powerful, and I was mightily convicted. When the opportunity was given I went to the altar and was there gloriously converted to God. I rose from my knees rejoicing, as did many others. In the afternoon Bro. Smith opened the door of the church and I joined. Since that time my pathway has not always been strown with flowers, for I have had some hard struggles along the road, but, thank God, I have kept my face heavenward and have tried to keep in the "strait and narrow way." I am now trying to do for other young men what Bro. Simmons did for me. May God help me to lead scores of them to the blessed Savior!

Mr. Editor, we are doing all we can for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I find that from those homes where it is a weekly visitor come our most intelligent and appreciative hearers. I have also learned that those who read it are our most loyal members. I am glad to tell you that Methodism is moving forward here. We have purchased an organ during the quarter for one of our churches (Cook's Chapel), and are making material progress at other places. Our congregations are good, and a deeper interest in the cause is developing. An interest in your prayers is solicited. D. SCARBOROUGH.

NEW ORLEANS.

The well known poem, "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night," In which a young woman by hanging to the curfew bell saves the life of her lover condemned to be executed at the ringing of the curfew, is only one of a thousand striking instances of how a woman will dare everything for love.

Women are readier to make heroic sacrifices than they are to take the commonplace, everyday precautions which insure their greatest happiness. Most women are careless about their health. They forget that physical weakness and disease will wreck the fairest chance in life and shut them out completely from happy womanhood and wifehood.

Weak, bilious, dyspeptic women are robbed of their natural attractiveness and capacity. They lose healthy color and energy and ambition. The blood becomes poor and thin and laden with disease-germs.

The true antidote for this condition is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts directly upon the digestive powers and the liver, creating pure, red, healthy blood free from bilious impurities; it renovates every organ and tissue of the body, building up hard, elastic flesh and muscular strength and imparting nerve power and permanent vitality, which malt extracts do not give.

Mrs. Ella Howell, of Derby, Perry Co., Ind., writes: "In the year of 1894 I was taken with stomach trouble—nervous dyspepsia. There was a coldness in my stomach, and a weight which seemed like a rock. Everything that I ate gave me great pain; I had a bearing down sensation; was swelled across my stomach; had a ridge around my right side, and in a short time I was bloated. I was treated by three of our best physicians but got no relief. I was so weak I could not walk across the room without assistance. Then Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended to me and I got it, and commenced the use of it. I began to improve very fast after the use of a few bottles. The physicians said my disease was leading into pulmonary consumption, and gave me up to die. I thank God that my cure is permanent."

I am not glad till I have known
Life that can lift me from my own,
A loftier level must be won,
A mightier strength to lean upon.
—Lucy Larcom.

Others see our faults as plainly as we see theirs.—Selected.

Originality is simply a fresh pair of eyes.—T. W. Higginson.

The great man is he who does not lose his child's heart.—Mencius.

The rarest opportunities are worthless to the man who is unprepared for them.

He who loses his conscience has nothing left that is worth keeping.—Isaac Walton.

Ostentation in alms-giving is a vice which robs charity of its virtue.—W. Boyd Carpenter.

Think of the errors of the past only long enough to get incentives to do better in the future.

True greatness is achieved not by one great act, but by the faithful performance of little duties from day to day.—Selected.

Find out the weak point in your character and concentrate your forces there, for it is there that the devil will make his most vigorous attack.

Candor is the seal of a noble mind, the ornament of man, the sweetest charm of woman, the scorn of rascals, and the rarest virtue of sociability. —Selected.

Truth is quite beyond the reach of satire. There is so brave a simplicity in her that she can no more be made ridiculous than an oak or a pine.—J. R. Lowell.

One thing which the world sadly needs to learn is, that its idea of success is erroneous. A man may accumulate millions of money and still be an ignominious failure. Selah.

All affectation proceeds from the supposition of possessing something better than the rest of the world possesses. Nobody is vain of possessing two legs and two arms.—Sydney Smith.

Do not let ten thousand failures cause you to lower your ideal of a religious life. The best that is still beautiful and attractive in your thought is possible in your experience. —O. P. Fitzgerald.

I believe that great holiness sets us free from the love of this world and makes us ready to depart. By great holiness I mean great horror of sin and great longing after perfect purity.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Manners form at least a rich varnish, with which the routine of life is washed and its details adorned. If they are superficial, so are the dewdrops which give such a depth to the morning meads.—R. W. Emerson.

The shortness of life is bound up with its fullness. It is to him who is most active, always thinking, feeling, working, caring for people and for things, that life seems short. Strip a life empty, and it will seem long enough.—Phillips Brooks.

GUARDING THE LIPS.

Not many people think of praying, as did the Psalmist, that their words may be acceptable in the sight of God. Hence their mouths often utter foolish and hurtful things. The importance of right speaking is sadly underestimated by a large proportion of the human race. It is not enough to be guarded in conduct, if at the same time we are unguarded in speech. Great is the inconsistency of those professors of religion who pride themselves upon their honesty, lihorality and respectability, but who make little effort to control their tongues. The man who does not honor God in word as well as in deed lacks a good deal of being a high-grade Christian. The Scripture exhortation is, "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." The faithful disciple takes care to avoid every form and source of evil, whether it be of tongue, of desire, or of association.

No offenses, perhaps, are more easily or more commonly committed than those of the tongue. What a multitude of people are afflicted with unruly tongues! Instead of setting a watch upon their lips they pour forth their thoughts and impulses in an unchecked stream, to the nauseation and consternation of both friend and foe. "If any man offendeth not in word," says James, in his Epistle, "the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." Well does the sacred writer add that "the tongue can no man tame." But the grace of God, if diligently sought, is sufficient to enable every man to bridle this unruly member, and thus perform through divine aid what before was an impossible task. Let no man, then, who is hasty of speech continue to excuse his fault and imagine himself blameless. Prayer and vigilance will in due time result in the mastery of the "unruly member." Von Moltke, the great German strategist, had, it is said, as a foundation for his other gifts the ability to hold his tongue in seven languages. Conversation is in large measure an index to character. The shallow-pated talk empty nothings; the sensual breathe forth obscenity; the malicious circulate slanders, and so on through every class of society, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

In guarding our lips we ought to see to it that no untruth or hurtful exaggeration escapes them. What a shame it is that so few people always speak the exact truth! The Greek writer, Menander, in saying that "a lie is better than a hurtful truth," expressed a sentiment that unfortunately is accepted and put into practice by many people in modern times. The temptation frequently comes in business and in society to compromise the truth, or to tell convenient falsehoods, because the opposite course seems inexpedient. And for the sake of expediency or worldly gain, numbers of people form habits of lying and deception that follow them all through life. "Let your communication be, yea, yea; nay, nay," says the Master, "for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."

How few men there are who when brought before a grand jury are willing to tell what they know about gambling, crap-shooting, illicit whisky-selling, etc., in the community in which they live! Strangely silent or strangely ignorant are they, although the public weal demands that they should speak the whole truth. Then, too, how quickly property drops in value when the tax assessor comes around! What deception and falsehood many are guilty of when assessing their goods and chattles, who, in other matters, have an excellent reputation for veracity!

One of the commonest as well as the most detestable sins is that of tale-bearing and scandal-mongering. In most communities there are people who delight to report sensational news respecting churches, families and individuals, giving a touch here and there to what they hear, until a mountain is soon made out of a mole-hill. Such people seldom trouble themselves to find out the truth of their gossip, and seem to take pleasure in believing and circulating what is injurious to the reputation of others. Well does the Scripture say, "An ungodly man stirreth up strife," and "a whisperer separateth chief friends."

No man can be a true Christian who backbites with his tongue, or takes up a reproach against his neighbor, without taking the utmost pains to ascertain its truth. There is no place where the Golden Rule should be more rigidly applied than here. A slander is easily started, but catching up with it is a good deal like chasing one's shadow. No one should give credence to an evil report until he has fully investigated the matter, nor should he assist in spreading such a report unless the failure to do so is likely to result in harm to others. Peter the Great of Russia once wisely remarked of evil speaking, "It is easy to splash mud, but I would rather help a man keep his coat clean."

Exaggeration is one of the sins of a large class. So great is this propensity with some that everything they say has to be taken "cum grano salis." Such a habit is not only wrong and despicable, but, sooner or later, it will bring those addicted to it into trouble. Let us say what we mean, and mean what we say.

Christians should take care also that their words be pure, having no taint of coarseness or baseness. Contemptible indeed is the man who delights to treasure up and tell vulgarities and improper anecdotes. Sir Isaac Newton cut the acquaintance of a man who on one occasion told an obscene story in his presence. Many a boy has been ruined by being regaled with coarse jests and impure anecdotes narrated by loungers and gossips, some of them church members. "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but over that which is good to the use of edifying."

Profitableness ought to be another characteristic of the speech of Christians. The tongues of many are like a flutter-mill, continually clacking, yet seldom giving forth valuable results of any kind. It is very frequently the case that the more people talk the less they have to say. Solomon spoke a great truth when he said, "The mouth of fools poureth out foolishness." Ofttimes people who do not mean any harm unthoughtedly say things that wound and work great injury. Far too few are they who think before they speak. Many a holy influence and deep impression has been dissipated, perhaps forever, by the flippant and untimely remarks of some giddy, undevout person.

Our words should also be kind. Not all who speak wisely and truly speak kindly. There are many whose words are as swords, so sharp and cutting are they. Lack of grace accounts for many a harsh utterance. Gentle, sympathetic words cost but little, yet they are potent for good, and can never die. "Pleasant words are as an honey-comb, sweet to the soul and health to the bones." It is often hard to speak kindly of those or to those who have done us an injury, but we must "overcome evil with good." "Let your speech be always with grace seasoned with salt."

AN EASTER MEDITATION.

BY REV. E. H. MOUNGER, D. D.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead is the supreme fact in human history. It is the deep foundation of the whole Christian scheme, with its marvelous civilizations and triumphs outrolled for eighteen hundred years. It is the light which has shone upon these successive generations until to-day, and will shine unto the end. Let the resurrection of Christ be accounted fiction, and hope fades away from the earth just as the day-light fades from off the sky when the night comes on. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." But Christ is risen; he could not be holden of death. He was free among the dead. Death had no more power over him than the passing cloud has over the inextinguishable sun. "Ye are risen with Christ," risen from the grave of darkness, of doubt, of despair, and now ye walk in the light. When he speaks all the devils of doubt and fear fall on their faces, as the grim Roman soldiers fell when they saw him standing by the rifled sepulcher in the gray dawn of the morning. He is the only one who has come back to tell us what there is beyond, or to tell us if there is anything beyond for us who are to die. Immortality is the blessed, the glorious discovery of Christ—nay, more, it is his creation, for he declares, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." His resurrection is the conquering proof, the triumphant assertion of immortality.

There is no greater thought than this, that Christ is risen. The one wide-wasting power of the world has been broken. Death has been conquered, and then laid aside like the cup which the Son of man would not drink upon the cross! One, at least, of all the billows of earth's history has not gone down forever, but has risen a victor. As he comes up from the grave we hear the mighty challenge upon his lips, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and, behold, I am alive forevermore." This stupendous thought of living again, and living on beyond the region and power of death, is interpreted to us by means of the resurrection of our Lord. Any other revelation of that life would be a strange and far-off thing. But he has made it simple and natural to us. It has been beautifully said by the poetic soul of Phillips Brooks: "Just as the flowers have taken the infinite and mysterious forces of nature, and put them into clear shapes of visible beauty, so Easter, the flower of the year, takes the immeasurable truths of life and immortality and holds them to us in a beauty that we can all see and love."

Easter comes to us in the pomp and fragrance of the Spring-time, when all nature wakes from the death of Winter. A wave of verdure rolls up from the equator to the pole, and everything tells of renewed life. Easter is the consummate flower of all the ages, the golden clasp that binds the centuries together, and makes them each significant.

In Christ's resurrection are the pledge and potency of our own. "Because I live, ye shall live also." It demonstrates that death is an incident, a passing experience of life, and not the end. It is indeed a most momentous and mysterious experience, a solemn and shuddering passage in the lifetime of a spirit made in the image of God; but it is not the end, for life is shown to be triumphant through it all, and forevermore.

But what is the resurrection of Christ to them who wait, and look beyond, who wait and think tenderly and lovingly of those who have gone away? We go and stand by the gentle billows of earth that swell in some quiet burying-ground, those impressive regiments that have been marshalled to the music of death, and no wonder at it all.

"Love is and was my lord and king,
And in his presence I attend,
To hear the tidings of my friend."

We lift our hands with earnest longings for those who have sailed for the farther shore. To all the mystery and sorrow faith answers: "When Thou didst overcome the sharpness of death, Thou didst open the kingdom of heaven to all believers." "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." By every filled-up grave and sealed sepulcher he stands and says, "I have the keys of hell and death." Seemingly he delays, but really he is on his way to Bethany to speak the word of power for the resurrection of the dead, and to make his triumph the more complete. With everlasting love in his heart, with the memory of his mortal passion, and with the voice of mercy on his lips, he is leading his beloved through death to the land where there is no dying any more. The more we live in him and by him, the surer we will feel that the dead are in Christ, and that he has them unharmed of death in his sacred keeping.

NEW BOOKS.

C. L. S. C. REQUIRED LITERATURE FOR THE GERMAN-ROMAN YEAR, 1897-98. Flood and Vincent, publishers, Meadville, Penn.

The five books described below, which, together with the Chautauquan, comprise the required literature of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle for the new German-Roman year, have been prepared by five of the most competent authorities in their special fields in the world, and the publishers have undertaken to produce the new set to the end that it may meet with favor both in point of artistic excellence and substantial quality and workmanship. The five books are printed in large, clear type, upon smooth paper of a very superior grade, embellished with several hundred finely executed illustrations, diagrams, and maps, in attractive colors of maroon cloth stamped in black and gold. Following is the complete list:

IMPERIAL GERMANY. By Sidney Whitman. 12 mo. Cloth. 330 pages. Profusely illustrated. Price, $1.

This volume describes in a most attractive way the formation of the present empire. The author is a well known London writer and newspaper correspondent, the personal friend of Bismarck, Von Moltke, and other leaders of modern Germany. Count Von Moltke thus praises the book under consideration: "I have read this study on Germany with great interest." "I consider the different chapters of the book masterly," is the significant comment of Prince Bismarck.

THE SOCIAL SPIRIT IN AMERICA. By Prof. Charles R. Henderson, of the University of Chicago. 12 mo. Cloth. 350 pages. $1.

The aim of this work is to inspire social sentiment, to describe the best methods, to direct practical efforts, to exhibit religion in action, and to suggest in every-day language the teachings of social science in respect to the causes and tendencies at work in the human life of our age and land.

ROMAN LIFE IN PLINY'S TIME. By Maurice Pellison. 12 mo. Cloth. 340 pages. Profusely Illustrated. $1.

This book gives an account of the family and social life of the ancient Romans. It tells how the children were educated, gives us information in regard to the marriage customs, and depicts the condition of slaves. We learn from it how people so long ago occupied their time, how business was conducted, and how people traveled. It is an intensely interesting and instructive book.

A SHORT HISTORY OF MEDIÆVAL EUROPE. By Prof. Oliver J. Thatcher, of the University of Chicago. 12 mo. Cloth. 309 pages, with lining maps printed in colors. $1.

Professor Thatcher has aimed to give a connected account of the history of Europe during the period from about 350 to 1500 A. D. The Dark Age, the Renaissance, the beginnings of the national spirit, are described in the light of the latest historical research.

ROMAN AND MEDIÆVAL ART. By Prof. William H. Goodyear, of the Brooklyn Institute. 12 mo. Cloth. 307 pages. Nearly 200 Illustrations.

This is a new and enlarged edition of a work which was profitably used in the C. L. S. C. course four years ago. The book has been revised and fifty pages of new matter and illustrations added. Professor Goodyear has proved a good guide to the study of art, and he makes the history of the manner in which the Romans adopted and modified the art of the Greeks very clear and interesting.

THE CHAUTAUQUAN. Theodore L. Flood, editor and proprietor, Meadville, Pa. A monthly illustrated magazine. $2 per year. In clubs of five or more to one post-office, $1.80 each.

The fact that this magazine is the official organ of the C. L. S. C. is a sufficient guarantee of its excellence. For $7 the publishers will send the literature for the full year's course prepaid by post or express.

The beauty of work, wrote the happy worker, Lucy Larcom, depends upon the way we meet it—whether we arm ourselves each morning to attack it as an enemy that must be vanquished before night comes, or whether we open our eyes with the sunrise, to welcome it as an approaching friend who will keep us delightful company all day, and who will make us feel, at evening, that the day was well worth its fatigues.

REV. J. C. KROUT.

Rev. J. C. Krout, L. P., of Whitestown circuit, Mississippi Conference, died Sunday at 12:15 A. M. A good man is gone. We shall miss him.

April 4, 1898.

NOTES.

During his stay in the city Dr. Young J. Allen will be the guest of Bro. and Sister F. A. Dicks.

Dr. J. A. Parker is in the midst of a prosperous pastorate at Boyce. Sister Parker has organized a P. and H. M. Society and also a juvenile P. and H. M. Society, both of which are in good working order.

We had the pleasure recently of a call from our friend, Rev. F. N. Parker, of Baton Rouge. He was in good health and spirits, and reports that the lines have fallen unto him in pleasant places in the State capital.

Lumberton and Purvis, under the wise leadership of Dr. W. H. Huntley, are steadily moving forward. The financial report this year will be the best in the history of the charge. There is also progress along spiritual lines.

The New Orleans District Conference will meet in the Rayne Memorial Church on Thursday, April 7, 1898, at 10 o'clock A. M. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside. Rev. R. H. Wynn will preach the opening sermon at 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

Under the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Shipman, Holly Springs station is in a prosperous condition. Congregations are good. The foreign mission assessment is paid in full. Finances are in fairly good shape, and indications point to a prosperous year on all lines.

We are pleased to learn that Rev. C. A. Powell, presiding elder of the Seashore district, is much improved in health. He has been for some time unable to fill his appointments. He hopes ere long, however, to be able to make full proof of his ministry.

Rev. R. H. Wynn has been carrying on quite a successful meeting at Algiers for some days past. Bro. Wynn did most of the preaching himself. He was assisted part of the time by Bros. Foster, S. S. Keener, and G. D. Parker. The church received a spiritual uplift.

Cards are out for the marriage of Rev. John Alexander Moore, of the Mississippi Conference, to Miss Zula Elizabeth Weems, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Weems. The ceremony will take place Wednesday, April 13, in the Methodist Church at Brookhaven, Miss. We extend our heartiest congratulations, and wish them unalloyed felicity through life.

We are always busy, but during the last quarter we have been rather more so than usual. Besides fulfilling the duties of our double position as editor and publisher, we have filled a vacant pulpit, supervised a job printing office, and given a lecture or address on an average once a week. If any man has done more work in the same length of time, he is the man who has learned how to do without sleep—an art which we have no desire to learn this side the grave.

Dr. Knickerbocker's meeting at Louisiana Avenue, which closed on Sunday night, was quite a success. The attendance was large from the beginning, and the interest increased to the last. There were ten accessions to the church, and the number of conversions is reported as about forty. Dr. Knickerbocker's brother, Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, did most of the preaching. He left behind him an enviable reputation as an earnest, able, and forceful minister of the gospel of Christ.

Several of our prominent women left Tuesday to attend the General Convention of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society at Asheville, N. C., viz.: Mrs. F. A. Lyons, Mrs. F. R. Ruse, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, and Miss Mary Werlein. Mrs. F. A. Lyons will not return until after the meeting of the Central Committee at Louisville, during the Annual Meeting of the Church Extension Board, about the last of April. She will spend the interim visiting Mrs. Bishop Hargrove and other friends.

Rev. Young J. Allen, the oldest missionary we have in the field, with the single exception of Sister Lambuth, will spend Sunday, April 17, in this city. An announcement as to the places at which he will speak in the city will appear in our next week's issue. We congratulate our people upon the opportunity afforded them of hearing this veteran. He is a man of ability, and of extensive culture. He is the editor of two periodicals and the author of many books. We doubt if there is any man living who is better prepared to instruct and edify our people on the all-important subject of missions. Do not fail to hear him.

AST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

The friends of the E. M. F. College ill doubtless be glad to have some formation abont our work this year. 'e have, up to date, enrolled 302 ndents—113 of these being boarde in the college. Quite a nnmber e boarding with relatives in town. do not know the exact nnmber of nsic stndents enrolled, bnt it is mewhore near 150. Six mnsic achers are kept quite bnsy in that partment. The conservatory has en a snccess beyond onr expecta on. We have ladies stndying here ho have stndied a year or more in oston and Cincinnati Conservato es, and they tell me they are got ng better resnlts and doing better ork than they did in these North n Conservatories. They tell me ey did not have any better talent ere than we have here, and yet eir expenses here are not half so eat.

I have closed a contract with my rector for five more years, and also ve contracts with my violinist and sistant piano teachers. This puts e conservatory on a firm basis, and cnres a continnation of the same ethods of instrnction throngh a rm of years. Onr director is a nice hristian gentleman, a member of e Lntheran Chnrch, and is a good an. His wife is a Methodist, a lendid woman and a fine musi an.

We have been solicited by many have a Summer session of the nservatory for the benefit of mnsic achers and those who could not at nd the regular session. We have ally decided to give an eight eks' conrse beginning July 1 If y want to make it a twelve weeks rse, they can enter June 1.

We have raised the conrse of stndy the literary department this year, d intend to raise it again next year. is onr aim to make as high a rse for women as is made for men onr male colleges. We have as e stndent body as I ever saw in a llege, male or female, and I feel e in saying that onr young women ll take their stand alongside of onr n from onr male colleges. Our gnage department is qnite strong s year. We have a larger number stndents in Latin than any lan ge besides English, there being r 80 per cent. in the college de rtment stndying this language. xt comes French, then German. e modern langnages are taught by se who speak the langnages, either natives or by those who have stud in those countries and learned speak it. We have a strong course Greek, bnt it is hard to get young ies to stndy it. We allow two dern langnages to be snbstituted its equal.

Our work in mathematics is thor gh, and the conrse is high. After a year each student mnst finish lyties and conic sections as re red work. Onr teacher of mathe tics studied at the I. I. and C., d afterwards gradnated from the body Normal. She is hard to ex in her line of work. We are ning ont some mathematicians o can hold their own with the ng men of eqnal age and advance t, and I believe can excel most them.

The religious tone of the college year is very fine. It has often n remarked by yonng ladies and hers who have been in other rding-schools that they have er seen snch a good set of girls. t of them were Christians when y came, bnt we have had over nty conversions in the college e Conference, without any pro ted meeting. The work has been e in a qniet way by the girls nselves in their association meet . They meet every Sunday night ead of going ont to chnrch. We e found it impracticable to take girls ont at night on acconnt of annoyance of bad boys who al s hang around college girls. The onsibility is too great. Every ge president who has had many to control knows what it is to rtake to escort girls ont at night larly. So, in order to avoid this, t them have a meeting of their conducted by themselves, and the results show that it is no mistake. I have tried faithfnlly the plan of taking them to church Snnday night, and I gave it up before I ever came to Meridian, as unsatisfactory and impractical.

As to the health of onr girls, I could not ask for any better record, barring the little roseola and grippe that was among ns. We have the healthiest set of girls I ever saw. Nearly all of them have gained from five to forty pounds. Quite a nnmber have gained twenty-five to thirty-five ponnds since coming here. Many have had to procure new clothing altogether, being too large for any brought with them. This health record is dne largely to onr fine water, systematic life, plenty of systematic exercise, and a careful matron who is a trained nurse, and is very vigilant in taking care of the health of the girls.

This has been a very prosperons session of the college in every respect. We have added eight new npright pianos and one grand since September, and made many improvements in the gronnds, buildings, fnrnitnre, etc. We have added a fine new range, an excellent bake oven, and are now well equipped in the culinary department, as the girls can attest.

We have a happy set of girls. Our work is delightful. Truly God is good to ns. Praise be to his name!

J. W. Beeson, President.

P. S.—We are preparing a concert to be given in honor of the Epworth League on Friday afternoon, April 15, during the State Conference. Those who attend can see something of the work we are doing.

NOTICE.

I wish to recommend Dr. Strong's Concordance to brethren who, like myself, have not the advantage of a classical education. To illustrate its nsefulness let us take the word "preacher" (Eccles. i, 1). We find it in the Concordance in the quotation named, and opposite the quotation the number 6953, which refers to the original word in the Hebrew and Chaldee Dictionary. We find the nnmber in the dictionary, and, although I do not know a character in the Hebrew, I get the pronnnciation and literal meaning of the original word. Take the same word nsed in I. Tim. ii, 7. Opposite I find the nnmber 2783, referring to the Greek Dictionary. Here I get the pronnnciation and meaning of the original Greek word. In the same volnme we have a complete concordance Hebrew-Chaldee, and Greek Dictionaries arranged, so that without knowing a single character in either language, the stndent can get a fair knowledge of the meaning in the original. A knowledge eqnally as satisfactory as he would get otherwise unless he had made a very thorough study of the original languages. I have also fonnd Farrar's Messages of the Books very helpful in Bible study. J. A. Randolph.

A Slight Cold, if Neglected, often Attacks the Lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give immediate and effectnal relief.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.

I have just made my first ronnd on the Shreveport district. Preachers all at their posts, and onr machinery working smoothly. We hope to excel all former years in visible resnlts of faithfnl work done. Several chnrches will be bnilt this year and one parsonage now nearing completion. J. L. P. Sheppard.

A PREACHER'S DISCOVERY.

Dr. Blosser, who has for many years made a specialty of catarrhal diseases, has discovered a remedy that cnres the worst cases of Catarrh, Bronchitis, etc. It is a penetrating, healing smoke vapor that goes directly to every affected spot, destroys the germs, and heals the mucous membrane. Any sufferer mentioning New Orleans Christian Advocate, who will address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga., will receive, post-paid, a three days' trial treatment free.

Epworth League

By H. N. Harrison.

Topic for April 10—"Easter Thanksgiving, and the Reasons for It." I. Pet. i, 3, 4.

1. Christ's life, death, and resnrrection were miracles of love and power. If his resurrection be marvelons and inexplicable in the eyes of the world, his life is eqnally so. What is trne of these is trno also of his death. There is no more difficulty to us in believing in his resurrection than in believing in the snblimity of his life, or in the unspeakable grandeur of his closing hours. If we accept one, we can, with eqnal facility of faith, accept all. (Jer. xxxii, 27.)

2. The new life which is in ns—the divine germ implanted in onr hearts by the Holy Ghost—is the gnarantee of onr resurrection and the basis of our hope beyond the grave. As Jesns lived the divine life on earth, suffered death, and overcame the grave by his resnrrection, so we, who have been created anew in his image by the Holy Ghost, shall overcome death by the divino power which worketh in us might ily.

3 In the light of the resnrrection of Jesus we onght to regard death as a means to an end in the process of development. It is not only necessary that the carnal shall die in order that the spiritnal may be born, but that onr mortal bodies may perish in order that we may assume immortal and glorified bodies. We may regard death as a gateway to higher things, and the resurrection as prophetic of grander existences.

4. We must be careful to remember that there are, as far as we are concerned, two resnrrections—one to everlasting life, and the other to shame and everlasting contempt (Dan. xii, 2). These are a thousand years apart. We may have onr choice of either. The first resurrection occurs when Jesus comes and meets his people, his chnrch, in the air. They are canght np from the earth into the air (read carefully I. Thess. iv, 13-18). Note carefully the closing clause of verse 16 and the verse following. We will find in Rev. xx, 6, a parallel passage which warns us that only the pnre in heart will have part in this resnrrection. The millenninm of a thonsand years now intervenes. At its close the second resurrection (Rev. xx, 5) will take place. The innnmerable wicked of all ages will rise up from sea and land, death and hell, and stand before God in the terrors of the last judgment. There will not be a solitary absentee. The second resnrrection, with the last judgment, winds up earthly affairs. Then the present earth and heavens shall pass away as a scroll forever and ever. (Rev. xxi, 1; II. Peter iii, 7-14.) In which resnrrection shall we have a part? Seeing, then, that these things are trne, ought we not to be holy in all manner of conversation? Ought we not to watch and pray always, that we may be accounted worthy to take part in the first resurrection? (See Acts xxiv, 14-16; John v, 28, 29.)

Don't forget that the next monthly meeting of the Union Epworth League will meet at Dryades Church, on next Tuesday, April 12, at 7:30 P. M.

OUR GENERAL CONFERENCE DAILY.

A "Daily Christian Advocate" will be published at Baltimore during the session of the approaching General Conference, of which Drs. Hoss and Boswell will be Editors. The proceedings of the Conference will be reported for the "Daily Advocate" by Dr. J. J. Lafferty, assisted by a corps of expert stenographers. It is needless to say that the work will be well done. Diligent effort will be made to give the Chnrch a satisfactory paper.

Subscriptions are now solicited. We hope our brethren of the clergy will give the laymen a chance to snbscribe for the "Daily." We respectfully request our pastors to call the attention of their congregations to the paper at an early day. All snbscriptions must be sent to Nashville, that the mailing lists may be made up here before the Conference meets. This is important. The subscription price of the paper is $1.

A NEW BOOK.

The Home of the Bible: What I Saw and Heard in Palestine. By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 416 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day; how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

PUBLISHER'S PRICE, $2.25.

We were so much delighted with the book that we resolved, if possible, to offer it to our subscribers at a reduced price. We are glad to be able to state that we have made arrangements whereby we can offer it at a price within the reach of all.

We do not sell the book at all to those unprogressive people who do not take and pay for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. But to our subscribers we sell it at the low price of $1.25, postpaid. The only condition attached is that one's subscription must be paid up one full year in advance—viz., to April, '99—at the regular rate of $2 a year.

EVERY YEAR.

[Supposed to have been written by Gen. Albert Pike.]

You are growing old, they tell us
Every year;
You are more aloue, they tell us
Every year;
You can win no new affection,
You have only recollection,
Deeper sorrow and dejection,
Every year.

There come new cares and sorrows
Every year;
Darker days and darker sorrows
Every year;
The ghosts of dead loves haunt us,
The ghosts of changed friends taunt us,
And disappointments daunt us
Every year.

Too true! Life's shores are shifting
Every year;
And we are seaward drifting
Every year;
Old places, changing, fret us,
The living more forget us,
There are fewer to regret us
Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher
Every year;
And its Morning Star climbs higher
Every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burthen lighter,
And the Dawn Immorial brighter,
Every year.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

Let love rule. Love is never stubborn. Love never stands up and quarrels for its rights. Love will make each blame self, and not the other, when anything goes wrong. It transforms blemishes into imaginary virtues.

I know "it's hardly in a body's power to keep at times from looking sour," but avoid as much as possible disputes.

Never be ashamed to apologize when you have made a fool of yourself. The most dangerous infernal machine in a home is "the last word." One man asked another why he and his wife were always disagreeing. "Because," replied the other, "we are both of one mind—she wants to be boss, and so do I."

Every dispute between husband and wife forces good humor out of its channel, undermines affection, and insidiously, though perhaps insensibly, wears out and at last utterly destroys that cordiality which is the life and soul of matrimonial harmony. Never get angry both at the same time—take turn about. Learn to keep quiet when you can say only impatient words. One grievous word at such a time has stirred up a cyclone.

Politeness is not to be used only in our intercourse with the outside world. Incivility is nowhere so unpardonable as toward our best loved. Carry over the wedded life the same refinement of manner and warmth of affection that characterized your wooing days. Don't imagine that because you have now won each other you need no longer be affectionate. Husband, tell your wife how much you love her. She has a sacred right to some expression of appreciation of her unselfish devotion to your interests. You may all the while be full of loyal devotion to her, yet for want of comprehension of a nature more sensitive and more dependent than your own, never give her any assurance of your appreciation. Many a husband boasts to others of the treasure he finds in his wife—he is really proud of her—but he does not care to spoil her by telling her so. Dr. Hoge tells of a husband who said: "I always take my wife's advice, but I never tell her so. She is a treasure. She is like a fine day, which grows as it advances. I never knew her equal, but I never tell her so."

Wives, praise your husbands. If you let your husband feel that you think him a good husband, it will be a strong stimulus to his being so. As long as he thinks he possesses the character, he will take some pains to deserve it, but when he has lost the name, he may abandon the reality. Keats tells us that he has met with women who would like to be married to a poem, and given away by a novel; but wives must not cease honoring their husbands on discovering that instead of being poetical and romantic they are very ordinary, imperfect beings.

A GREAT REMEDY.

Greatly Tested.

Greatly Recommended.

The loss of the hair is one of the most serious losses a woman can undergo. Beautiful hair gives many a woman a claim to beauty which would be utterly wanting if the locks were short and scanty. It is almost as serious a loss when the natural hue of the hair begins to fade, and the shining tresses of chestnut and auburn are changed to gray or to a faded shadow of their former brightness. Such a loss is no longer a necessity. There is one remedy which may well be called a great remedy by reason of its great success in stopping the falling of the hair, cleansing the scalp of dandruff, and restoring the lost color to gray or faded tresses. Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor is a standard and reliable preparation, in use in thousands of homes, and recommended by everyone who has tested it and experienced the remarkable results that follow its use. It makes hair grow. It restores the original color to hair that has turned gray or faded out. It stops hair from falling, cleanses the scalp of dandruff, and gives the hair a thickness and gloss that no other preparation can produce.

Mrs. Herzmann, of 356 East 68th St., New York City, writes:

"A little more than a year ago, my hair began turning gray and falling out, and although I tried ever so many things to prevent a continuance of these conditions, I obtained no satisfaction until I tried Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor. After using one bottle my hair was restored to its natural color, and ceased falling out."—Mrs. HERZMANN, 356 East 68th St., New York City.

"I have sold Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor for fifteen years, and I do not know of a case where it did not give entire satisfaction. I have been, and am now using it myself to prevent dandruff and gray hair, and am thoroughly convinced that it is the best on the market. Nothing that I ever tried can touch it. It affords me great pleasure to recommend it to the public."—FRANK M. GROVE, Faunsdale, Ala.

There's more on this subject in Dr. Ayer's Curebook. A story of cures told by the cured. This book of 100 pages is sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Never speak to anyone outside of one another's faults. Any woman with ordinary eyes can see things in her husband she does not like. Never whisper to others your husband's or wife's shortcomings.

Pay attention to little things. Estrangements are rarely the work of one day, or caused by one offense. They are growths.

The sunbeam is composed of millions of minute rays. So the home life must be constituted of little tendernesses, kind looks, sweet laughter, gentle words, loving counsels; and soon it will be found that kindliness will spring up on every side, displacing incompatibility of temper and spirit, want of mutual knowledge, even as we have seen sweet violets and primroses dispelling the gloom of the gray sea rocks.

If you would be happy when married, make home everything. Men running day by day against this lightning-footed nineteenth century, harassed by its cares and perplexed by its inquietudes, yearn for the repose of home, where the mind can be at rest, the heart's turmoil become quiet, and the spirits bask in the peaceful delights of domestic love. Busy men become weary of the dull prose of life, and thirst for poetry. Happy is the man who can find that poetry at home. Think of this, ye wives and daughters of business and professional men. Think of the toils, the anxieties which husbands and fathers undergo to secure for you comfortable homes, and compensate them for their sacrifices by making them happy at their own firesides. There let warm greetings come from appreciative hearts, fond glances from bright eyes, the little arrangements for our comfort which silently tell us of thoughtful love, and force us into an easy chair to spend the evening at home before we are aware of it. Home!—Christian Intelligencer.

RESERVE POWER GIVES CONFIDENCE.

Few things can be more humiliating than the consciousness of possessing a college diploma which means nothing in practical life; of having passed one's examinations in a parrot-like way; of being looked upon as an educated man, and yet as having no ability. Nobody has confidence in the man without reserve, and he can not, of course, believe in himself. A single speech exhausts him; the slightest emergency pumps him dry; he is in constant fear lest the slightest mistake may uncover his shallowness and expose his emptiness.

Not least among our forces in reserve are those which come from that "facility and inclination, acquired by repetition," which we call habit. Any occupation is easiest to him who has familiarized himself with its processes by repeated practice, and he who has become familiar with those processes is most likely to succeed therein. As men acquire greater and greater skill in the various trades or professions, it becomes more and more difficult for one to do many kinds of work in a satisfactory manner, in competition with others.

Jacks-of-all-trades are gradually becoming scarcer as we advance in civilization. We must concentrate our energies to definite purposes in proportion as we wish to excel. "I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided," said Patrick Henry, "and that is the lamp of experience."—Selected.

LOVE FOR PARENTS.

"In all my travels I have never seen a man succeed in life who treated his parents with contempt. I don't know of any evil to-day that this country is more guilty of than the way sons and daughters are treating their parents. If we are untrue to God, we shall find that our children will be untrue to us."

"I believe many a man that is out of work would find work if he would follow God's way. Let a man turn from his sins and call on God, honestly, you know, and I believe God will open a way."

"Love will give, but never will steal. Love will not slander or lie. If I love a man, there is no danger of my starting a false report about him, and instead of publishing a slander I will do all that I can to keep it from the public. Love's eye is not covetous. If the heart is filled with love, there is no room in it for covetousness."—D. L. Moody.

HOME.

A prize, which was offered by a London paper for the best definition of a home, brought about five thousand answers. Some of the best were the following:

A world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in. Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.

The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.

The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.

Where you are treated best and grumble most.

A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world, where we can be shielded from its cares and annoyances.—The Presbyterian.

Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster writes in the Christian Intelligencer as follows: "From very early years a boy should have a little money of his own, and learn how to save, and how to spend, and how to give away. The latter is the most important of the three, though everybody does not know this. When a child goes to Sunday-school, it ought not to be his mother's or his father's penny or 5 cents which he drops into the missionary envelope, but his own money, appropriated by his own act. Unless a boy has a little money, he can neither save, spend, nor give it away. From the small weekly amount given the very little boy, to the large sum bestowed on the student at college, the steps may be slow, but the lesson all along will be the same—responsibility for the right use of means."

Hygiene.

MEDICINAL FOODS.

"A dish of apples," says a German scientist, "is often worth a dozen doctor's prescriptions." Not in cases of acute illness, of course, but where one suffers from sleeplessness, indigestion and wearisome lassitude. Persons who suffer from nervous, wakeful nights, or who are weak-throated, should make it a rule to eat one or more apples just before going to bed. Eat them raw, of course, and peeled, with all the bruised spots most carefully cut out.

An apple eaten early in the morning purifies and disinfects the mouth, where one suffers from acidity of the stomach. Another virtue of the apple is that it exerts a most excellent influence on the liver and kidneys.

Next, perhaps, in value to this fruit is the fig; whether it be eaten fresh or dry. Happily the fig grows in warm climates where the heat renders the liver most unhealthily sluggish, and to counteract this weakness figs should be and are eaten freely. In northern climates dried or pressed figs may be had and are eaten with exactly the same results. In fact, so beneficial is their effect that, with prunes, they are now recommended by physicians to those who endure much from the inactivity of this particular organ and wish to have treatment.

One way of helping the victims of the alcohol or opium habit is to serve at every meal and many times in the day, oranges when in season, and lemons and limes the twelve months round. The juice of these fruits counteracts the fearful thirst and craving which liquor inspires, while a few drops of pure lemon juice will support the thirsty bicycler many miles until cool and wholesome water can be had.

The very staff of life to men or women who write, or must labor over figures many hours a day, is not bread, but the baked banana. Raw, this fruit is often painfully indigestible, but baked it acts as a stimulant on the nerves, being at once received and rapidly assimilated by the stomach.

Nervous women will find remarkable relief in eating celery. They may take it raw; or stewed and served with butter or white sauce, it is a delicious dish; while in the hot season celery salt and flavoring should be liberally used on meats, salads, in soups, etc.

But a list of medicinal foods would not be complete did one fail to mention the virtues of cracked wheat for weak-livered folk. Dry wheat merely cracked, but not ground fine, boiled with a little salt and eaten with butter is a cure all of itself. A coarse bread, made at home, baked like cornmeal pone and eaten in place of baker's bread also has a salutary influence on a liver that can not accept starch in any other form. It is the rough husk that does the good work, and will often aid a poor misanthropic invalid back to vigor and cheerfulness.—American Queen.

All our possessions are as nothing compared to health, strength, and a clear conscience.—Hosea Ballou.

KETON—It is with deep sorrow that we a record of the death of Louis McLE-KETON, son of J. P. and Mrs. M. E. on.
ttle did any of us think last year that it ld be our sad lot to commit his body to grave so soon. If his death had been that yone of those of a more advanced age, we ld not have been so startled at its an-cement, but would have felt more likely their proper time of departure had come still, when we remember that it was his e to die, and, too, that this desire was ssed by him prior to and also in the being of his sickness, we can somewhat un-and why he was taken in the very th of his youthhood, for it is plainly d to the Scriptures of the Lord that, "He give thee the desires of thine heart."
, xxxvii, 4.) How unusual is such a defor a healthy youth with flattering pros-to encourage him to prefer to live long his world even to a good old age! But be-he was swayed into such a choice by the tiest charms of this life the Lord num-him among the departed in response to wn expressed desire not to live longer.
was born July 23, 1881, and died March 8 being nearly seventeen years old. In mber, 1895, he joined the Methodist ch, having passed his twelfth year more one month. As to his moral character, the united testimony of all who knew ing of him from whom we have had an asion, that he was exceptionally good.
Currie, a Presbyterian minister to whom s going to school about two weeks bes was taken sick, speaks of him in every ct in the most complimentary terms.
writer of this never had the pleasure of associated with him, owing to our acquaintance with each other, and also fact that we lived the distance of five apart. The sickness that ended his ly career was a violent type of pneu-a, and although it was of a short durayet his sufferings were quite intense.
God comfort his sorrowing father and er and all his surviving loved ones!

LLADAY—JOHN H. HOLLADAY, son of iana Conference, was born Nov. 12, 1882, eparted this life Jan. 22, 1898, aged fif-years two months and ten days n was accidentally shot and instantly by a friend while out hunting. In 1894, the influence of godly parents, and honest convictions, he joined the Meth-Church. Not being satisfied with mere h membership, he followed on to know rd, and during a meeting held last er by his father, assisted by Rev. J. B. ms, he was happily converted. He was of promise, and having begun life in the way, his parents were full of hope and tation. But it is written, "In the midst we are in death." So death so often s the object of our hopes, and our ex-ions prove vain. We can not under-God's providences. We can well ex-with the apostle, "How unsearchable

Let us not for a moment question his ess and wisdom. When the fogs and

NE—Mrs. GEORGIANA BOONE, wife of e Dr. Philip S. Boone, was born in Co-
, S. C., sixty-five years ago, and died at e of her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Bord, in e county, Miss., March 1, 1898.
mbraced religion and joined the Lu-
Church in the old Palmetto State in s of her girlhood. After her removal
Mississippi she joined the M. E. Church, in which she lived a faithful and con-member until death. She was the of four children, two of whom survive son and a daughter; the son a local r in the Mississippi Conference.
Boone was well connected in life. Her Jessa Bates, was a prominent local r in Mississippi for many years; a affairs and of considerable means. Her
's brother, Bishop William Thomas of the Episcopal Church, went out as ary Bishop to China, and finally died foreign field to which he devoted the energies of his life. Mrs. Boone's husband was a surgeon in the Confederate Army, and died at the close of the war at Corinth, Miss. Thus she was left alone to fight the battles of life and to rear her children, which she did with great fidelity. She lived respected and died regretted. She was not afraid to die. We laid her mortal remains away to rest beneath the sighing pines four miles west of Shuqualak, Miss., to await the archangel's tramp. M. E. TUMLIN.

KENT—ROBERT THURMAN KENT was born Nov. 20, 1892 and died Nov. 5, 1897.

For nearly five years he was with us, filling our lives with sunshine, and then his pure spirit winged its way back to the God who gave it. Our hearts are filled with despair, our joy turned to bitter grief, and we must live on with a longing in our hearts which will only cease when we are gathered together in our Father's house, where death never comes and sorrow is unknown.

A more obedient, affectionate and thoughtful child never blest a home, and when he was rudely snatched from us with hardly a moment's warning, it seemed as if our burden was too heavy, and our punishment more than we could bear; but, thank God! we can now say, "Thy will be done," and bow submissively to his way, which we know is best. With his little playmates Thurman was a great favorite, and to visit him was their delight.

May God keep us in his loving remembrance and care, so that, when the final tramp has sounded, all who have loved our darling here may meet him there where there is only joy and peace and love, and where we shall never be parted, but shall forever sing praises to our loving and merciful Father!
MAMA.

JOURDAN—CHAS. HICKS JOURDAN was born July 27, 1877, and departed this life Feb. 28, 1898.

Charley was the son of Rev. John Jourdan, of Tishomingo county, Miss. Charley was a noble young man. He made friends wherever he went. No one spoke of him but to praise; no one knew him but to love. Charley professed religion last year in Texas under the ministry of Rev. Luke McCowen. He came home last Fall, and was stricken with fever, and then pneumonia. He was sick eighty-four days. He was a great sufferer, yet in the midst of all his suffering he was never heard to murmur or complain at his lot. He told them he would never get well; he did not want to get well. He said he wanted to go home to his Savior; he said there was nothing but suffering and trouble in this world. His daily prayer was, "Lord, call me home." Just a short time before he died he said, "I am almost gone; Jesus is come at last."

Life's duty done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies;
While heaven and earth combined to say,
"How blest the righteous when he dies!"

ALLEN—We, the undersigned committee appointed by the superintendent of Cockrum Sabbath-school to draft resolutions on the death of Bro. R. W. ALLEN, a member of said school, and who departed this life on the twenty-second day of February, 1898, submit the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, It has pleased our divine Father, ruler of earth and heaven, to remove from our midst our beloved friend and brother; and, whereas, We can only bow submissively to his will, recognizing that he doeth all things for our good, our hearts are sorely stricken by this dispensation of his providence; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Allen the Sabbath-school of Cockrum has lost one of its most zealous members, one always prompt in attendance, and who was ever ready to assist in the exercises of the school, and worked earnestly for its advancement; that we will miss his kind and genial face in our coming together, and feel that his place can not be filled.

Resolved, That every member of this school sympathize with his family in this, their great bereavement, and would mingle our tears with theirs could that allay their grief, but know that time, the great healer of all wounds, is the only remedy for such sorrow.

In reaction from monasticism, have we not gone to the opposite extreme? A habit of the current religious life is its failure to observe seasons of retirement for meditation. It tells to heed Jesus' injunction, "Go into thy closet, and shut to the door." Our noblest ideals will come to us in the place of secret devotion. In meditation and communion, in devout reading of the ever-blessed Word, in earnest, believing, and well-considered prayer, we shall gain that strength and skill which will enable us to put our ideals into living, permanent, and beautiful deeds. He who sees in secret will thus reward us openly.

In this hustling age, crammed with organizations, committees, functions, and what not—this hurly-burly of business, politics, and society—need is imperative of a revival of the meditative spirit. George Herbert, the gentle poet of seclusion, says, quaintly:

By all means, use some time to be alone.
Salute thyself! See what thy soul doth wear.
Dare to look in thy chest: for 'tis thine own;
And tumble up and down what thou findest there.

isn't pleasant to think of. It's slovenly and unclean. But how are you going to be sure that your soap is used only by yourself? Particular people use Pyle's Pearline. That solves the problem. They fill a salt shaker or sifter with Pearline. Then they use that instead of soap, for the toilet or the bath, with no fear of using it after anybody else. A Pearline bath is like a Turkish bath in freshening you and bracing you up. 653

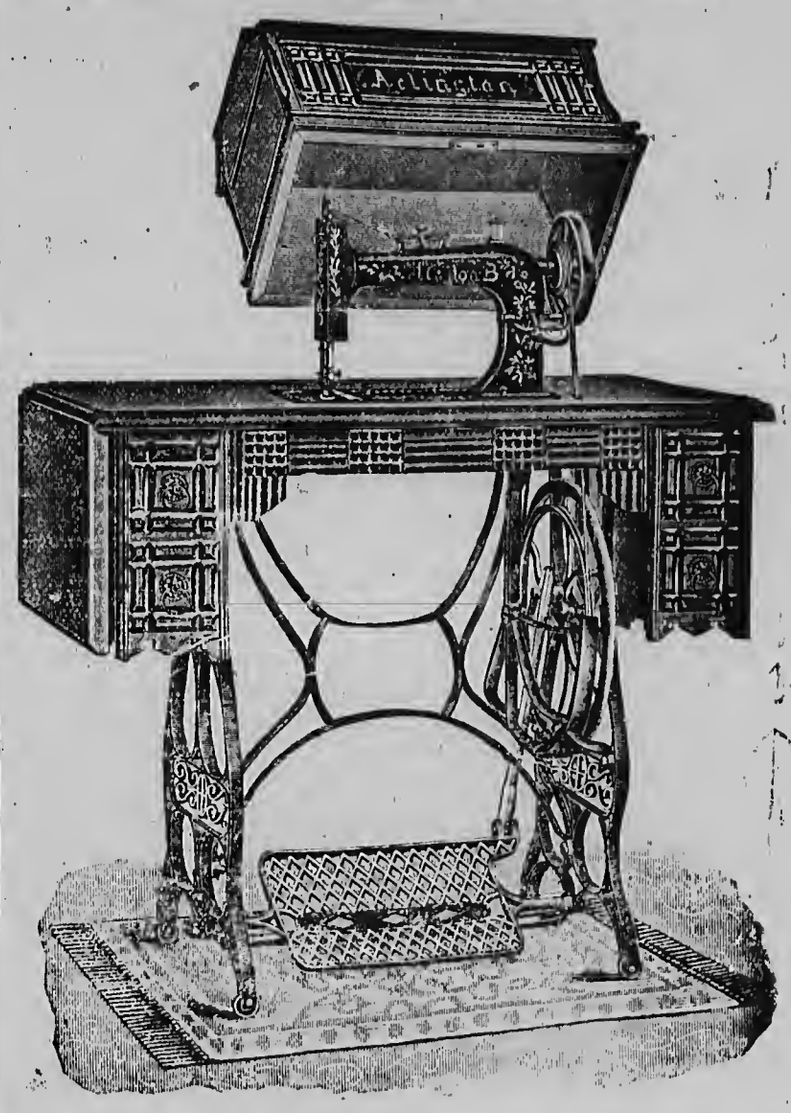
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instructive book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The New York Methodist Conference has voted in favor of equal lay and ministerial representation in the quadrennial General Conference.

Two of the public schools of Brooklyn have had to be closed on account of diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles having broken out amongst the pupils.

The General Assembly of the State of New York has appropriated one million dollars for the war fund of the United States with which to fight Spain.

The levee at Shawneetown, Ill., broke in on April 3, and a great part of the town has been destroyed. A large number of citizens have been drowned.

Evidences of false registration in Chicago have multiplied so during the last two weeks that the Boards of Revision, it is estimated, have erased fully 90,000 names, leaving the city's total registration about 360,000.

It is said that William K. Vanderbilt has decided, in the event of war with Spain, to present to the United States goverament a warship to cost $5,000,000. His grandfather, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, during the Civil War, presented to the federal government the steamship "Vanderbilt," which was valued at $1,000,000.

The present war scare has demonstrated very forcibly the necessity for a larger supply of efficient coast-defense vessels. The large number of important ports scattered along our extensive coast line which must be defended in time of war make it necessary that this country should be more than ordinarily provided with coast-defense vessels. At the present time we have only six such ships of the double-turreted monitor type.

The opinion almost universally held in Washington by leading public men and diplomats is that the crisis will reach its climax this week, and that the question of war or peace will be determined within the next seven days. At the outset Spain was most earnest for mediation, and to this end addressed a note to the powers about ten days ago. Now, however, as the prospects for mediation appear to be growing, the Spanish authorities seem to be less inclined toward this course. This may be due to the fact that Spain had looked on mediation as an indirect form of intervention of the European powers in favor of one of their own number. The Spanish note developed, however, that the powers were not ready for any such radical step. France made the first declaration, through Premier Hanotaux, in the French chamber, that France would treat both parties alike as friends.

The two foremost branches of the Cuban question in Washington on Tuesday were the President's message and European mediation which now has taken form in the courts of Europe according to a dispatch received at foreign embassies, though no proffer has been made to the United States. Regarding the first, it can be stated it is fully expected by the administration that the message will be sent to Congress on Wednesday, in all probability, and certainly by Thursday. Members of Mr. McKinley's Cabinet and his friends in conference stated definitely to-day that it will deal vigorously with the Cuban question, will include the "Maine" incident, and will make definite recommendations to Congress, one of which will be the recognition of Cuban independence. As to the mediation of Europe or the Pope they declare that these material and moral powers must exercise their suasion on Spain, as this government will insist on the independence of Cuba.

FOREIGN.

Spain has now a population of about 19,000,000 people, and of these, according to a recent government report, nearly 8,000,000 profess no occupation.

Prince Otto Von Bismarck on April 1 celebrated the 83d anniversary of his birth, giving a banquet to twenty-two guests. The Prince was in excellent spirits. At dinner he called for cheers for the Emperor.

Although the reported probable retirement of Lord Salisbury has been denied, it is becoming daily more evident that, for some reason or other, the British Premier has ceased to hold his own in the diplomatic contest going on among the chancelleries of Europe.

France and England are making one mighty effort to induce Spain to cede the independence of Cuba. If war between the United States and Spain can be averted at all through medium of diplomacy, the first steps in that direction will have to be taken from Madrid.

Pope Leo was able to show deference to an older man than himself at the celebration of his coronation. Cardinal Mertel, who is 92 years of age and the senior cardinal in length of service, had himself carried to the Vatican, but was unable, after the Pope's address, to join in the defile past the throne. The Pope, noticing this, stepped down from his throne, and, walking to Cardinal Mertel, wished him many more years of life.

THE EVIDENCE in the case proves Hood's Sarsaparilla cures rheumatism, dyspepsia, catarrh, that tired feeling, scrofula, salt rheum, boils, humors and all blood diseases.

HOOD'S PILLS are prompt, efficient, always reliable, easy to take, easy to operate. 25 cents.

TAKE NOTICE.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Children's Day Programmes, with an adequate supply of Supplements, have been sent to the pastors, as ordered by the Sunday-school Board. The pro rata to each pastoral charge is based on the number of Sunday-school scholars reported in the Conference Minutes. The programme prepared by those authorized by the church is excellent in matter and order. It would be very difficult to improve upon it if there should be any minded to try to do so.

Let all concerned begin in due time and prepare to have the best Children's Day we have ever had.

Should any pastor fail to receive his package soon, let him report to me.

G. W. BACHMAN,

Kosciusko, Miss., April 1, 1898.

A CORRECTION.

I dislike correcting Minutes after they are published; but there is such a discrepancy between the facts and the figures as to the membership on the Pineville circuit, I mention it, intending no reflection on our worthy secretary in the matter.

The figures give us 443 members. We actually have 249. The work having been divided last year—after Conference—doubtless caused the mistake to be made in the figures.

EASTER THOUGHTS.

What a joyful surprise awaited those sorrowing women who nearly 1898 years ago went in the early dawn of the first Easter morning to embalm (as they thought) the dead body of the Lord, to be met with this greeting, "He is not here, he is risen." It is beyond human conception to imagine first the surprise and then the heavenly gladness which broke upon their minds as they realized the glorious truth of the resurrection of their Lord and Savior. Every follower of the lowly Nazarene may just as truly have that joy to-day as the glad Easter sun seen in the beauty of his majesty breaks in glory o'er the earth, brightening all the dark corners, as did those humble women of so many centuries gone. The grave is only one of the many stations at which we stop to rest on our way through this world, to the terminus of our journey in the next. It has been made a calm and peaceful resting-place since Jesus has lain there.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ROUTE TO BALTIMORE VIA WASHINGTON CITY.

The Chesapeake and Ohio railway with its connections offers by far the most interesting route to the Conference in Baltimore in May. The route from Louisville is through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, passing Frankfort, the State Capital Lexington, and the home of Henry Clay. At Ashland the line from Cincinnati is joined; the route from Cincinnati being along the banks of the beautiful Ohio river for 165 miles. Shortly after entering West Virginia the banks of the Kanawha river are followed, Kanawha Falls is passed and the canons of New River are penetrated. After skirting the picturesque Greenbrier for 50 miles, the heights of the Alleghenies are reached, and next comes the Shenandoah Valley, the Blue Ridge Mountains and Piedmont section, the most beautiful of the Appalachain Valley. After passing through Charlottesville and Gordonsville, the route is through the most memorable battle fields of the Civil War, among them Cedar Mountain, Culpepper, Rappahannock, Warrenton Junction, Manasses and Bull Run.

For complete description of the C. & O. Route address C. B. Ryan, A. G. P. A., Cincinnati, Ohio.

TEACH ME TO LIVE.

Teach me to live; 'tis easier far to die,
Sadly and silently to pass away
On earth; to close the heavy, dark'ning eye,
And waken in the realms of endless day.

Teach me that harder lesson how to live—
To serve thee in the darkest paths of life;
Arm me for conflict now, free vi-or give,
And make me more than conqueror in the strife.

Teach me to live, my daily cross to bear,
Nor murmur though I bend beneath its load;
Only be with me, let me feel thee near—
Closer round thee my heart's affections twine.

Teach me to live; no idler let me be,
But in thy service heart and hand employ;
Prepared to do thy bidding cheerfully,
Be this my highest and my holiest joy.

Teach me to live, with kindly words to all,
Wearing no cold, reproachful brow or gloom;
Waiting, with cheerful patience, for the call
That summons me unto my heavenly home.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES"—NO. 3.

"Sextus" declares his disapproval, his severest condemnation, of the efforts of those advanced thinkers who would revolutionize the relation of the sexes and take from the Word of God the Pauline doctrine in reference to women. This will never be done by advanced thinkers, nor by thinkers of any other kind. Women will always be women and men men as long as the world stands. "Male and female created he them, and called their name Adam." This relation will stand. Women will be the wives and mothers of men throughout all the generations of the human race. "Sextus," however, has reference specially to the relations of husbands and wives, and his views, no doubt, have been formed more by the study of the common law than by the study of the Word of God. The common law merges the legal existence of the wife into that of her husband, so that the wife ceases to be, only as the husband chooses to speak and act for her. The Bible makes the wife one with her husband, his other self, his partner, his helper. She has a right to a voice and to her part in all that concerns the home and family life. She saves what her husband makes, and she is worth a hundredfold more than she costs.

"Sextus," like many others, thinks Paul prohibited women from speaking in public, particularly in the church. This is not true. Paul did nothing of the kind. If "Sextus" will consult Dr. Adam Clark's comment on this passage, he will see what the apostle did prohibit. The apostle was talking about answering back, wrangling, in the church services, perhaps in the business meetings of the church. This brought about confusion, sharp contentions, strifes, and many heart-burnings. This course of conduct would lead to the same results now. It would pay "Sextus," or anyone else who is interested, to read "Christian Womanhood," by the editor of the ADVOCATE. With what the editor knew on this subject, and in view of what he has written, the wonder is that he did not take "Sextus" to task on this subject. He has left this duty to one not so well informed and wielding a far feebler pen.

"Sextus" says one true thing. Here it is: "Paul particularly and pointedly declared woman's relation to the public dispensation of the Word of God."

That is true, and he particularly and pointedly gave specific directions about having her head covered when she came before the public to dispense the Word of God—to read the Scriptures, to pray, to teach, and to prophesy, or preach. By all which I suppose the apostle meant that she was not to unsex herself, but to dress in female attire when she performed the functions of a public teacher. It might be well for "Sextus" and others to read this passage and the context. Special attention should be given to the word "prophesy," and to the fact that it was a public miniskation of the Word.

For fifty-five years past—the period covered by my memory of things—I have been accustomed to hear women teach, exhort, comfort, speak and pray in public, and I have never yet heard one of them say, or seen one of them do, a silly, foolish, or unwomanly thing. They have conducted themselves with the utmost Christian propriety on all public occasions and in all public places.

I would like for "Sextus" to know that my observations have been limited entirely to the Southern States, and, in the main, to our Southern women. I do not believe that women are nearly so apt to do and to say silly and foolish things in public as some men.

It is worth while to consider the fact that Christ and the Christian religion have been the emancipators of women in every land where the gospel has gone. Christ comes to set the race free from the bondage of sin, and to open up a door of hope and of the largest usefulness to every redeemed son and daughter of Adam's fallen race. This is in accord with the promise of God by the mouth of his prophet Joel, which promise was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, and will continue to be fulfilled more abundantly down to the end of time.

If "Sextus" would take time to consider, one by one, the long line of good women who have "dispensed the Word of God in public" from the earliest ages down to the present time—specially since Christ—I think all his fears about women misbehaving before the congregation, and all of his solemn protests against "women dispensing the Word of God in public," will vanish into thin air. There is no solid reason why everything should be now just as it was twenty years ago. The facts are not what "Sextus" assumes them to be. Among our Methodist people twenty, and even fifty, years ago ten women spoke and prayed in the congregation to where one speaks or prays now. So the evil "Sextus" so deeply deplores is not nearly so imminent as he seems to think it is. Twenty and forty years ago I have heard as many as forty and fifty women speak prudently and profitably—speak to edification—in one love-feast or class meeting. Where has "Sextus" been that he has not heard these things or heard of them? If I have not blundered as to whom "Sextus" is, nor as to where he lives, I think he can hear good women "dispense the Word of God" with prudence and propriety in his home church almost any week of his life; and, if I am right in the man and the place, this has been going on steadily for more than forty years. And now, at this late day, when all the Lord's people ought to be prophets and teachers of the truth, "Sextus" wakes up as if dreaming, and plants down his solemn protest. My, my, man; you are too late, for this thing has been going on for nineteen hundred years. You are behind and don't know where you are at, that's all. Fact is, you have been so occupied with ancient law that you have not kept step with our progressive Christianity, nor are you well posted in the many and noble enterprises our Christian women have on hand for the betterment and salvation of men. GILDEROY.

"CORRELATION FOR OUR FEMALE COLLEGES."

At the last session of our Conference the following action was had:

"On motion of H. M. Ellis it was resolved that a committee of five be appointed to form some plan of correlation for our female colleges, whereby a uniform standard of work may be done, and expense and effort saved.

"Whereupon said committee was appointed as follows, viz.: T. B. Holloman, J. M. Weems, C. W. Crisler, H. W. Featherstun, I. W. Cooper."

This committee, in response to a call from the first-named thereon, Rev. T. B. Holloman, met in First Church, Jackson, Miss., on Tuesday, April 5, and after religious service organized by electing T. B. Holloman permanent chairman, and H. Walter Featherstun, secretary. One member, Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., was absent.

The matter committed to them for consideration was very carefully considered, and it was finally resolved, by unanimous vote, that the following be recommended to the ensuing session of the Annual Conference for adoption, viz:

1. No college for girls shall confer any degrees other than such as are conferred by Millsaps College, and such degrees must be conferred upon the same conditions required in Millsaps College; and no institution that fails to graduate pupils in conformity to this requirement shall be known as a college.

2. The Annual Conference claims the right to pass upon the selection of all trustees of our colleges, and no trustee shall act as such until his election shall have been ratified by the Conference.

3. The Conference shall appoint at its earliest convenience a committee of three of its members, who shall prepare a form of charter for our colleges for girls conformable to the foregoing provisions; and when such form shall have been approved by the Annual Conference, our colleges for girls shall be required to annul their present charters, and adopt the uniform charter thus provided.

4. The Conference deprecates deeply the custom sometimes followed of underbidding each other, and considers it highly censurable for any college president or other officer to underbid other colleges belonging to our Conference with a view of securing patronage.

The committee instructed the secretary to publish in the ADVOCATE these recommendations to be presented to our next Conference, in order that the brethren might have ample time for full and careful consideration and free discussion. The committee invites the fullest and freest discussion, and would be glad to receive any suggestion of amendment. Another session of the committee will be held just before the meeting of the Annual Conference, when all such suggestions will be carefully considered. This is done because comparatively little time for the discussion of such matters is allowed at the sessions of the Conference.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, Sec.

MR. EDITOR: Submitting the above officially, I beg leave, on my own account, to subjoin a few observations.

We found a widespread and growing demand that the standard of education for girls be very much raised. One intelligent lady said to a member of the committee: "I do sincerely hope that you may do something to bring about a higher standard for female education." Another very cultivated lady said to another member of the committee: "The first thing your committee ought to do, if it could, would be to compel our girls' schools to take the word 'college' out of their names and write 'high school' instead." This writer, without inquiry, and not moving in educational circles, has met with a number of girls recently who are asking about such colleges as Randolph-Macon and the Woman's College at Baltimore. There is a growing demand for a higher standard. We must meet that demand. I know that many will choose the shoddy because it costs less; but I also know that many of these—aye, most of them—will patronize the high-grade college whenever higher education for girls is made fashionable. We, as a Conference, can make it fashionable. Let us do it.

The first item of our recommendation contemplates that such institutions as will put a required course of study, such as Millsaps has, will be recognized as colleges, and that those which do not will be classed as academies or high schools; and, as a matter of course, it contemplates that only colleges shall confer degrees. This item met the heartiest endorsement of every member of the committee present.

The second item recommended is so manifestly just and reasonable that it needs only a statement to enlist endorsement.

The third item will be necessary to make the first and second items effective, as well as to correct some other minor evils. There is a college formally ceded to the Mississippi Conference whose charter, as subsequently amended, empowers the trustees to do what the law of our church positively forbids trustees doing.

The fourth item punctuates and, I trust, will puncture a growing custom as unchristian as it is unsocial to the cause of education. That colleges belonging to the same Conference, and claiming to be Christian colleges, should get into such an unseemly wrangle over patronage, is simply too reprehensible to be properly characterized.

Possibly the committee did not cover all the ground that it should. If so, let us hear any suggestion, and at our next meeting will gladly give it the most careful consideration. Brethren, give this matter careful attention.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

NOTICE TO DELEGATES AND VISITORS TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The local committee in the city of Baltimore, having in hand the work of providing for the entertainment of the General Conference, have so far completed their arrangements for the comfort of their guests that they now desire to make a general statement on the subject.

The building selected for the meeting of the General Conference is the armory of the Fourth Maryland Regiment, a large and imposing structure, entirely new, located on Fayette street near Paca street, and easily accessible from all points in the city by the city passenger railways. It has a seating capacity on the main audience floor of twenty two hundred, and in the galleries of four hundred. On the first floor of the building are seventeen well-lighted and ventilated rooms, suitable for committees.

A postoffice will be established in the building. Telephone, telegraph and type-writing service will be provided, and also messenger service, for the convenience and comfort of the delegates. Most favorable terms have been obtained from the leading hotels and boarding houses of the city for board of delegates and visitors.

The seats in the auditorium are for the members of the Conference and for visitors. After setting apart sufficient space to amply accommodate the members of the Conference, fraternal delegates, and all others engaged in Conference business, there will be at least sixteen hundred seats on the floor of the audience-room to be occupied by visitors in attendance, and to which they will have free access. It has been deemed judicious to reserve certain seats in the galleries for families desiring such accommodations.

The committee wishes to assure all who may favor us with their presence in Baltimore at this great gathering of Southern Methodists, of a most cordial greeting, and we shall do our utmost to contribute to their comfort during their visit in our city. We also desire delegates who shall be accompanied by members of their families, and visitors who may purpose to attend the Conference, to advise the committee of that fact, and of what accommodations they may need, so that they may be provided before their arrival, and assignment of homes made without delay. Notice will be given delegates of the places assigned them at least two weeks before the meeting of the Conference. A card will be sent visitors immediately upon the receipt of certain information of their purpose to attend.

Through the courtesy of the railroad systems of the South and West the favorable rate of one-half the regular fare, or one whole fare for the round trip, has been obtained for members of the Conference and all visitors. We have assurance that these tickets will be on sale from May 2 to May 5, inclusive, good to return until May 30, with the privilege of extension to June 15, if desired.

We have made these statements in detail because we wish the public to be informed of our plans, and especially so since some incorrect and misleading statements have found their way into the public press.

"THE LAW OF SANCTIFICATION."

"The Law of Sanctification," by Rev. W. M. Leftwich, D. D., is a pamphlet of sixty-four pages, and is a most valuable contribution to the literature on the subject of sanctification. While so much has been written upon the various theories of sanctification, and much useless hair-splitting been done in the way of the definition of terms, that which is at the foundation of the whole matter seems to have had little, if any, attention. The church is indebted to the author of this pamphlet for clearly, logically and convincingly stating the law of sanctification, without the daily keeping of which all professions of it, and even the most orthodox theories about it, amount to nothing. Speaking of Paul, the Doctor says: "Such a life and character are possible only under the law of self-sanctification in the kingdom of God. No human life can reach its best estate upon any other plan. And, after all, this is the living gospel. It is the gospel translated into character, illustrated in the life, and put before the world in its highest concrete form. It is this gospel that is made the power of God unto salvation. A sanctified life in the home, in the shop, the store, the bank, the office, the field, and on the highway, is a living gospel of more power over men than all the didactic instruction on the subject of religion that can be given from the pulpit and the press."

Dr. Leftwich's pamphlet should be circulated freely throughout the church, that our people may learn that God expects his every child to conform his life to the law of sanctification, and, giving himself unreservedly to the operation of that law, he is thereby to "grow in grace," and go on to that perfection or ripeness of Christian character that God demands of all his children.

Ten cents sent to Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn., will secure you this pamphlet by return mail.

Selections.

DR. YOUNG J. ALLEN.

More than threescore years ago a Georgia baby was left an orphan and under the guardianship of an uncle, who was a Hard-shell, anti Missionary Baptist. This orphan baby boy soon developed into a very promising, vivacious, fun-loving youth. Why or how this Baptist uncle ever sent him to a Methodist school, we have never heard. But such was the case. The boy was entered as a student in Emory College at Oxford, Ga. Here he not only found an opportunity for splendid intellectual culture and training, but here he found and accepted his Savior in the conscious pardon of sin, and became a member of the Methodist Church. Soon after his conversion he felt called to preach the gospel in China. His dazed and bewildered anti-Missionary, Hard-shell Baptist relatives feared he had lost his mind, and refused to extend to him the ordinary parting courtesies.

In the meantime he fell in love with a very bright, promising, but poor girl. He recognized in this girl a heroine and elements of character adapted to the career he had chosen. He was wise enough to give her four years' training at his own expense in the Wesleyan Female College at Macon, Ga., of which Dr. John D. Hammond is now president—the oldest female college in the world. After her graduation they were married, and started to China just forty years ago. They were on a sailing vessel, and were becalmed, tossed and blown about six months before they reached Shanghai. Then there were not more than 1 000 Christians in all that vast empire; now there are 80 000 enrolled church members, and many thousands more of Christian adherents and sympathizers. At that time China was as some stupendous, sleeping monster, whose outer cuticle scarcely felt the tickling touches of the outer world. Within this last decade of this eventful century this sleeping monster has felt the shock of Japanese battleships, and is now twitching its ears and opening its eyes to the encroachments of civilization.

Just ten years ago it was our privilege and pleasure to be entertained in the home of Dr. Allen in the city of Shanghai. As preacher, teacher and writer we found he had grown to be a very important factor among the foreign influences conspiring to mold and shape the future of that great empire. He is now a Mandarin, and probably exerting as broad an influence with his pen as any living foreigner. China's new relations began with the Western world with the Teintsin treaty of 1861, and nearly all the important changes have taken place within the last thirty-seven years. As Dr. Allen was on the ground three years before the Teintsin treaty, he has been an eye-witness of the changes, and happily adjusting his work and rising influence accordingly. Dr. R. H. Graves, of the American Baptist Mission of Canton, reached China in 1856, and is probably the only active American missionary who antedates the work of Dr. Allen.

It was our pleasure this week to have the Doctor dine with us in St. Louis. He is a delegate to our General Conference, and had just arrived from across the Pacific Ocean. We were surprised and delighted to see him looking so well. There is a little more frost on his magnificent beard, but we have never seen him looking so robust. One secret of this increased vigor seems to be the total abandonment of a certain weed of which Missourians, Georgians, and green worms were very fond in the olden days. He thinks China is now awake to the fact that she must be more aggressive, or be annihilated. Hitherto she has never made any progress except when pushed on by other nations. She now realizes that she must act voluntarily. She is wide awake to the need of more material progress, and if the present external pressure does not prove too great, she will make rapid strides in the near future.

Dr. Graves has given to American and English readers a very instructive, helpful and charming book called "Forty Years in China." It seems to us that while Dr. Allen is doing so much for Chinese literature, he should not fail to give us a book in the English language embodying a synopsis of his thrilling life and work. It might be made as fascinating as fiction, and would be a fitting climax to his long and eventful career.—St. Louis Advocate.

WHAT MIGHT BE DONE.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

What might be done if men were wise.
What glorious deeds, my suffering brother,
Would they unite
In love and right
And cease their scorn of one another!

Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving kindness,
And knowledge pour
From shore to shore
Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies, and wrongs,
All vice and crime, might die together;
And wine and corn,
To each man born,
Be free as warmth in Summer weather.

The meanest wretch that ever trod,
The deepest sunk in guilt and sorrow,
Might stand erect
In self-respect,
And share the kindling world to-morrow.

What might be done? This might be done,
And more than this, my suffering brother,
More than the tongue
E'er said or sung,
If men were wise and loved each other.

REPLY TO J. A PARKER'S ARTICLE, "FALLACIOUS ARGUMENTS."

Thanking the ADVOCATE for the space in its columns to reply, I wish to state, first, that the "catechetical lesson, the only perceptible object of which was to prop up the failing doctrine of immersion," was prepared as a "Bible reading" on Christian baptism, and that it consists of a series of twenty-five plain, practical questions on the subject, all of which, except three, are answered by a quotation, without note or comment, from the Word of God, giving book, chapter, and verse. If this is "clap-trap," then may the Lord give us more of it in the pulpit and out of it. If it is "clap-trap" to ask a pertinent question, and then allow God's Word to answer it, it must be something more than "clap-trap" to prepare catechisms and other statements of what is believed to be Bible truth, and endorsed by churches, and send them out to the world.

Of the twenty five questions in the "catechetical lesson," Mr. Parker, after denominating them all as "clap-trap," notices four particularly. He begins with the third. Had he quoted the first and second, I believe he would have been a little more careful in his dealing with the third. The first question is, "Where is baptism first mentioned in the Bible?" Ans.—"In the Gospel of Matthew, third chapter." The second, "Who was the first administrator?" Ans.—"John the Baptist." (Matt. iii, 1-6)

If the answers to these two first are pertinent and right, then the answer to the third question—"Where were the first baptisms performed?" Ans.—"In the river of Jordan" (Mark i, 5)—must be right also. The two first can not be true unless the third one is true also. The authority is the same in all—the Word of God.

Mr. Parker says I dispute St. Paul, who tells us that the Israelites "were all baptized" hundreds of years before John saw "the river of Jordan."

If Mr. Parker means to declare that the passage of the children of Israel through the channel of the Red Sea was a real, literal Christian baptism, then I am constrained to ask a few questions. First, What ceremony was used upon this occasion? Second, Who was the administrator? Third, Were their flocks and herds, with all their belongings, baptized at the same time? If not, why not?

Of course, I know that Paul speaks of this incident, for I quote it elsewhere; but he speaks of it, not as a literal, but as a figurative baptism, just as our Savior speaks of his sufferings and death as a baptism. That the baptism "unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea" was a figurative, and not a literal baptism, is as evident as that the spiritual Rock that followed them was not literally, but only figuratively, or typically, Christ. This fact is so universally admitted that I am amazed at Mr. Parker's position that it was a literal Christian baptism. No respectable authority in the world will agree with Mr. Parker in this matter.

Again, Mr. Parker says: "Mr. Vardeman runs right over the author of the fourth gospel (John x, 40) who tells us plainly that 'at first' John baptized 'beyond Jordan.' . . . 'In Bethabara beyond Jordan.'" "The preposition 'in' was evidently what Mr. Vardeman was after; but prepositions express place, not mode."

In the answer given to the questions, "Where were the first baptisms performed?" I was not after the mode, but the place, and the preposition "in" is not in this place essential to the plain and simple meaning of the gospel which I quote.

The eleventh question of the "catechetical lesson" is, "How was Jesus baptized?" and the answer given is a quotation from Mark i, 9—"baptized of John in Jordan." Mr. Parker "wonders why Mr. V. did not take this question." I wonder why Mr. P. did not see that I did take this question and answer it, not by quibbling about prepositions, but by a direct quotation from the Word of God, using that awful "clap-trap" which Mr. P. thinks is to be "despised and shunned."

If Acts viii, 12, "They were baptized, both men and women," does not answer the question, "Did the apostles baptize infants?" and answer it in the negative, will not Mr. Parker kindly point out the passage that does answer it in the positive? One of the fundamental principles of logic and common sense is, that a command to do a certain definite thing is a prohibition to something else in its stead. We know that Jesus commanded his apostles to baptize believers; we know that infants are not believers; we know that these "men and women" baptized in Samaria were "believers," and, therefore, we know there were no infants baptized by the apostles there. Either there were no infants baptized in Samaria, or else the record of the Holy Spirit in this matter is faulty and misleading. If the apostles did baptize infants, why is there no record of it? And if there is such a record, why can it not be pointed out?

Mr. P. asks, "How did Mr. V. find out" there were no infants in the homes of Lydia, the jailer, Crispus, and Stephanus? How did Mr. P. find out there were infants baptized in these homes? If there were infants baptized in these households, as a defender of the practice, Mr. P. must prove it. Mark you, I have intimated nothing at all in regard to whether there were infants in any of these households or not. The question is not whether there were infants there, but whether there were any infants baptized. To take one case as a sample of all, to prove that there were infants in the household of Lydia, Mr. P. must first prove that Lydia was married; that she had a child, or children; that some of these were infants, and that they were with her at Philippi, a long distance from her home in Thyatira. Suppose Mr. P. could prove all this; then, in order to make out his case, he must prove that such infants were actually baptized, and that the apostles did something directly contrary to their orders to baptize believers, and something of which there is no record at all.

Of Crispus it is said (Acts xviii, 8) that "he believed on the Lord with all his house." Does this mean that there were infants in his house, and that they "believed?" Whether there were infants or not in the house of Crispus, they were not included in the statement that "they believed on the Lord." They could not do this.

Now, if infants are not included in this statement, why are they included in other statements about households? If Mr. P. had quoted the answer to the twenty first question in the "catechetical lesson," he would have given his readers my reasons for believing—not that there were no infants in those households, but that no infants were baptized. The question referred to is, "How are such baptized households spoken of?" The answer is: as "believing in God" (Acts xvi, 34); as "brethren" (Acts xvi, 40); as "addicting themselves to the ministry of the saints" (I. Cor. xvi, 15).

No, I do not remember that I ever baptized an entire household, but many Baptist preachers have done so. My next door neighbor informs me that in the case of his father's family it was a "household baptism," and there were no infants in it, either.

Mr. P. also objects to the answer given to the question, "How many baptisms are there?" "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." (Eph. iv, 5) If this does not answer the question, will he please give the Scripture that does answer it? Surely, we are not left in darkness about this command of our Savior. Does Mr. P. believe there is more than "one baptism"? If he does, let him say so plainly, and let him further say how many, and what they are. If he does not believe there is more than "one baptism," then why does he quibble about this definite statement of the inspired apostle?

Finally, Mr. P. says "immersion" was never in a New Testament "until Mr. Vardeman's people put it there." The correctness of this statement I very much doubt. I will say, however, that if the Greek word for baptize had been translated, instead of transferred, to our language, that every English New Testament in the world would have had "immerse" instead of "baptize." That the Greek word for "baptize" is properly translated by the English word "immerse," the learned men of all creeds and nations agree, and among them such great Methodist leaders as John Wesley, Adam Clark, C. W. Bennett, George R. Crooks, and Bishop Hurst.

THE COMMITTEES UNDER FIRE.

The endorsement of this plea, "I think our committees have too much power, and are too exacting in many cases, and I wish the Conference, as a body, had a right to reject the report and call for another examination," comes in the nature of a surprise. Give the Conference, as a body, that right, and what follows? The same "too-exacting" committee would proceed to hold another "too-strict" examination, for they will not go back on their carefully prepared judgment in the matter. Then the Conference must investigate the fitness and ability of its examining corps. Questions and answers submitted for their criticism must be gone over, a thing of endless detail and debate. The Conference may draw up a standard of questions on each book required in the course of study, by which the committeemen may guide themselves. Failing to satisfy the "dissatisfied" this way, let us fall back on a passing mark of fifty-one per cent., or go back to the old oral method which has been discarded by every institution and Examining Board of intelligence and eminence. Let us let down the bars, and say to all, "Come in and sup with us." Any examination in its last analysis must be left to their wisdom and intelligence, and undue influence or unwise pressure brought to bear upon the committees is to be deprecated.

A Baptist minister, who reads the Bible in four languages and has had charge of churches of note in his denomination, declared to me: "I wish our church had a method like yours of keeping out the illiterate and unqualified. Any little wayside church may call a meeting, ordain a preacher without any regard to his fitness whatever, and send him forth. The result is, our denomination is overrun with men who murder the Queen's English, and know absolutely nothing of the laws of grammar and rhetoric."

Our church fathers builded wisely and well when they put up these hedges around the sacred precincts of the pulpit. It protects the pew, and saves them from the shame and humiliation of incompetent heralds of the cross, who bring neither credit to themselves nor to the Great Head of the church whom they represent.

Principal Fairburn has said: "We have lowered the ministry by lowering the standard of the men who can enter it." God forbid that the Louisiana Conference should commit itself to such a suicidal policy.

If it be not more credit to a man to pass a rigid examination than a poor one, let us retrench. If it be not more credit to the committees to put up a high-grade examination, let us have the low grade. If it will not help us among the thoughtful leaders of the day to learn that no man can become an elder in our church without having been thoroughly tested and tried as to his gifts and graces, then let us depart from the "wisdom of the fathers." If we are not to wrestle with the grave problems of the day, but pass them by in unthinking ignorance, then let us return to an effete theology that met and vanquished foes that no longer vex the heart of the church to-day. Theology must change its line of defense, for its intellectual opponents have set in new array its weapons of warfare. Who can meet these issues save the mentally and spiritually equipped for the battle now raging in certain quarters?

In conclusion, I want to add my testimony that I have met with firm, fair and kind treatment from each committeeman. The only safe way is to know the books when you report for examination.

"OUR DOMESTIC MISSIONARY POLICY."

MR. EDITOR: With your permission I want to review a sentiment suggested and a plan stated in the ADVOCATE, of March 3, and emphasized in the ADVOCATE of the seventeenth. Bro. T. W. Lewis announces a policy, and Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan endorses it and states that it has been the policy of the Board of Missions of our (the North Mississippi) Conference for years.

Now, it seems that the plan is not a very popular one, as they can not get it adopted; or it must be very impractical. Of course, the appointing powers have known of the plan for years, as it has been declared often on our Conference floor, and the Doctor says the Bishop and his cabinet were formally advised of this policy at our last Conference. Now, it is evident that they did not favor the plan, or that it is not practical. In either case it seems to me they would drop that plan and try to find one that could be worked.

Now, if the Board of Missions had all the money necessary, I doubt if there are any men or angels that could develop some charges to what is wanted financially. I really doubt whether any other class of men could do any better, or even as well as the class who have served them from year to year; and such assertions made in private, on our Conference floor, and through our Conference organ, it seems to me to be very depreciatively discriminating against some of our truest and most consecrated men.

Now, as assertions do not prove anything, I have this proposition to submit to our Conference Board: At our next meeting let the Board select a number of the strongest and most successful men we have, and make such appropriations as they think necessary to support them well, and I will select the same number of charges as they are now arranged and served by "men who can not be sent to stronger charges;" and if we can get the appointing powers to send the men to the places selected, we will let these strong, successful men stay in this given circle of appointments, whatever term of years the Board may elect, and if at the end of this term these charges are really first-class appointments, such as these same strong, successful men would not feel at all afflicted to return to without any appropriation from the Board, then I will be convinced that their plan is correct, and that the unappreciative condition of so many of our charges is attributable to the unsuccessful and weak brethren who have served them.

Main Street, Water Valley, is not a test case at all. That was a prosperous community in a thriving little city, and the time was ripe for the development, and we did well to enter. The charges referred to are not in such condition.

She has given forty-odd boxes." (Indeed, we are pleased with your report, Miss Mattie, and award you the banner juvenile auxiliary.—Conference Corresponding Secretary.)

We wrote and enclosed programs for Loan Fund Day to forty-one pastors. The following will show how many responded:

Rev. J. P. Drake wrote: "Yours received just after I had observed Miss Helm's memorial at Long Beach; collection, $1 15. We hope to hold the memorial service, and will add something to this living and loving monument to one of the noblest of her race." Later Mrs. Joyner reported memorial service held at Bay St. Louis by auxiliary. Bro. Drake made a talk and collected $1.15.

Rev. T. L. Mellen responded: "Your letter did not reach me till Saturday afternoon; too late to carry out the program. Moreover, I preached a sermon (Is. liv, 2), stressing W. P. and H. M. work. Sunday, Feb. 13, I took up a collection, and got $5.50 in cash and good subscriptions for memorial fund."

Rev. G. S. Harmon replied: "The W. P. and H. M. Society at this place observed the Helm Loan Fund service on the sixth instant. Much interest manifested. Inclement weather and sickness reduced the congregation and collection; $3.26. The society is a strong arm to the pastor. Praying God's blessing upon your department," etc.

Rev. D. C. Langford: "Memorial service in honor of Miss Helm was observed at Paulding; collection, $1 75."

Mrs. Stuart, of Ocean Springs, reported an interesting service held in honor of Miss Helm; collection, $5.

Miss Pauline Stafford organized a W. P. and H. M. Society at Porterville, with nine members. Rev. B. F. Lewis organized at Brandon, eight members.

All we want in Christ we shall find in Christ. If we want little, we shall find little; if we want much, we shall find much; and if, in utter helplessness, we cast our all on Christ, he will be to us the whole treasury of God.—Bishop Whipple.

THE SECRET OF ENJOYMENT.

We paddled into a little lake—I and my friends—in our Indian birch canoe. We were hungry, and we wanted fish. We found a tanned and wrinkled trapper at the door of his cabin, and questioned him as to the waters. There had once, he said, been many gray trout there; but now they were all gone, and we must look for them in the next lake. We portaged and passed into the next lake. We found there another trapper, thin-lipped, and with deep-set furtive eye, who told us that the gray trout had descended into the deep waters, and could only, with great difficulty, be caught, but that there were many in the next lake. Into the next lake we portaged and passed, only to learn that the gray trout must be sought in a lake still further beyond. On we went, from lake to lake, till we had lost ourselves in the wilderness; but we never found the gray trout. Not the gray trout, indeed; but how many other things were conferred upon us, things vital and beautiful, a store of inextinguishable reminiscence! Years afterward we remembered the rare brown water, deep and dark, in the cool abysses of lakes, golden and glowing at mid-day over the rocks and shallows; the tingling forest air; the solemn and fane-like pine-woods; the morning mists reeling before the sunrise into rosy shattered spirals; the cold and lonely nights, near and radiant with stars; the passing of the loons above us; voices of the northern solitude, weird and disconsolate; the ringing of the axes of woodmen at dawn, hewing a path in the unbroken wilderness. These and many other things we remembered afterward with luxurious joy, when the gray trout were no longer a care to us.

So it is with happiness. We spend long lives in the pursuit of objects which we seldom attain; but always before us are the glories of anticipation, and behind us the magical playhouse of memory. Let us, therefore, cultivate a mood of the utmost spiritual openness. Let us not be exacting with life, nor demand too much of the present hour. Let us be content if we lay up for ourselves treasures of fruitful memory, for there is an alchemy in the imagination which can brew pleasure out of the most unpromising material, and gleams of a curious sunshine will some day fall even upon the recollection of our darkest miseries.—From "Happiness," by Archibald Lampman, in Harper's Magazine.

HOW AFFLICTION ILLUMINES SACRED TRUTH.

There is an invisible ink in constant use among diplomats and others, the purpose of which is that only those to whom the letter is addressed shall become acquainted with its contents. When the letter is received it is exposed to the heat of the fire, and then slowly, but surely and plainly, the writing appears upon the paper in unmistakable characters. The Bible contains God's letters to men, and they are distributed so widely on account of their cheapness that several are to be found in the home of nearly every civilized family which acknowledges God throughout the world; and yet how few there are who comparatively speaking, who can intelligently read these divine letters. Millions might as well be without the Book for all it is worth to them, because they only see the paper and the binding, the message it contains being written in invisible ink so far as their understanding it goes. And how often have we found that it required the fierce fires of affliction to make its written truths plain and consplonous to our view! When we have been laid aside by the hand of sickness or accident we have discovered for the first time, it may be, how very precious is the Father's message to his children, and how very happy we have been made to feel after discovering its warmth and its promises.—Temple Magazine.

I think it is in circumstances that we are most tested. It is just then that we have to meet God. And just as in some electric lights the two points have to come very closely together before the light shines between them, so the point of your will and the point of God's will will have to touch, and then come the electric light flashes of acquiescence and peace.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. T. Manholland: "On the evening of the second of April, about half-past eight o'clock, I was sitting in my study alone preparing for the Sunday service. It so happened there was no one at home except myself. The door-bell rang. On going to the door and opening it, in rushed about twenty-two ladies and gentlemen. They gave this scribe a gentle pounding, which has caused the following effect: First, it has made the one who received the pounding more humble; second, the parties who did the pounding felt happy that they had done their duty; third, and the receiver of the pounding was materially benefited. May God bless the dear people of Tchoupitoulas Street Church! is my prayer."

Rev. Robt. L. Phillips, Waynesboro, Miss., April 2, 1898: "We held a meeting at Spring Hill from March 12 to the eighteenth. It was a scriptural meeting, because it was preaching 'out of season.' The farmers were very busy in their crops, but the devil was busy in his; so we held the meeting. Our help was the Lord and the brethren. Three were baptized and received into the church, one young man brightly converted, some restorations, two or three renewed or confirmed in the experience of sanctification. One day, during the morning service, while preaching quietly, the Holy Ghost fell on the congregation; many Christians weeping for joy and sinners for their sins. We told the brethren we wanted a religion that could work in March and every other month in the year. 'Brethren, don't let your churches get too cold and dead. Pray for us."

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, P. C., Forest, April 4, 1898: "Perhaps a word from this charge will be of interest to some of the readers of your paper. Our first Quarterly Conference is a thing of the past. It was held at Harperville the twenty-sixth of March; well attended. Our presiding elder was there in his usual style; preached three of his best sermons to the joy and edification of his hearers. On Sunday the hall was full of people. The communion service was a delightful occasion. There must have been seventy-two or one hundred communicants. Sunday night, after a strong and earnest sermon from Bro. Simmons, the young lady, who promises to make a useful member, came forward for church membership. The Conference was a spiritual occasion, the presiding elder making special inquiry as to the spiritual condition of the work. The stewards have planned liberally for the pastor, raising his assessment $50 above last year. Paid one-fourth of the entire assessment for the presiding elder and preacher in charge at the Quarterly Conference. We are arranging as fast as possible to begin work on the new parsonage. This work, though just organized a little more than one year ago, bids fair to be one of our best circuits. We were kindly received. This is the second year on the work. Pray for us."

Rev. H. P. Gibbs, Secretary: "The Pastoral and Theological Society of Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, met in Grenada, March 21 and 22, 1898. Owing to the very unfavorable weather immediately preceding the meeting, the preachers living off the road did not get there, with the exception of Rev. H. D. Estes; consequently, the attendance was small. The program prepared by our presiding elder, Rev. H. C. Morehead, was one of the best. The papers were well prepared, and the discussions spirited and profitable. If one thing was brought out by the discussions more prominently than any other, it was that a Methodist preacher must be an all-round man, capable of developing the various interests of God's kingdom under the leadership of the Holy Ghost. The preaching was done by Bros. W. M. Young, J. A. Bowen, J. L. Burton, and H. P. Gibbs. Bros. Bowman and Burton represented the interests of the church committed to their care, took an active part in the discussions, and added interest to the meeting. The services closed with an experience meeting and season of prayer, in which the brethren testified to a personal blessing and profit from the meeting. The Holy Spirit was present, and each felt stronger as we separated for our various homes. The women of the district hold their annual district meeting with the W. F. M. Society and the P. and P. M. Society at the same time and place; and as we closed, the leaguers of the district took charge."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Carthage, Miss., September 7, 1898: "'Carthage' is a post village, capital of Leake county, Miss., 60 or 65 miles northeast of Jackson. It has a population of about 500. We have fourteen business houses, among them two drug stores owned by nice, good men; one a Presbyterian (Old School), the other a staunch Methodist preacher's friend. We have two large and well-kept hotels; one a Baptist, the other a Methodist. We have seven lawyers; one of them—viz.: Col. J. D. Eads—is one of the oldest, most substantial members of the Methodist Church in this country. He is a true friend to preachers and the Methodist Church. He is eighty-four years old, and takes the ADVOCATE. He has taken it forty-four years. We have three doctors; one Methodist, with a Presbyterian wife; one Baptist, with a Methodist wife; one Presbyterian, with a Methodist-Presbyterian wife. All good men, and successful in their profession. We have a good school, taught by Prof. Wallace, principal, and two young ladies. We have also a nice music class taught by Miss Pattie Lewis. We have two church-houses—one Methodist, one Baptist. The Cumberland Presbyterians have an organization here, and worship in the Methodist Church. We give two Sundays to Carthage, two to the country churches. The junior preacher gives three Sundays to the country, one to Carthage. Our congregations are good; prayer and class meetings in Carthage well attended. We love our presiding elder, Bro. Simmons, and we regret exceedingly he is not able to spend more time with us. He is a good man, a fine preacher, and looks faithfully after every interest of the church in his bounds. His district is too large. We have about 450 members in Carthage charge. We ought to take 75 or 80 ADVOCATES. We take 10 or 12. Of the seventeen stewards on the work, only three of them take our church paper. This is a shame. I regret it, but can't help it. One of my stewards has neither Bible or Discipline. 'My! my!' you say. So say I. I did not put him in office. He is a clean man, however, and has authorized me to get him a Bible. The country part of the Carthage circuit does not develop as fast as we would love to see it. We need a revival. I do not mean more members; I mean a revival of old-time Methodist religion. Not mere surface work; too much of that already at times. Our people need to be convicted. They need to have their eyes and ears opened, that they may see and hear, and know something of the exceeding sinfulness of sin. My heart is pained when I think of the desolate state of Zion in many localities. Is there no remedy? God help us."

REVIVALS.

The indications are that this year will be a great one for revivals. Successful meetings seem to be more general than last year, and it is much easier to lead sinners to Christ.

I spent most of the time during January and February in Missouri, where I assisted in three meetings at Carrollton, Norborne, and Marshall. Carrollton and Marshall are leading points. The meetings at Norborne and Marshall were revivals of great power. They were remarkable for the large number of adults converted, and the display of Holy Ghost power that often rested upon the congregations. The meeting at Carrollton was a good meeting, but much hindered by the continuous rains and snows.

I love to work with those Western people, though they are more phlegmatic than our Southern people. They are hard to move, but when they do, it means something. It takes much longer to hold a meeting in Missouri than in the South. I wanted to remain up there all the Spring, but thought it not best to spend too much time out of the bounds of my own Conference. Then, too, these Mississippi people are the best people in the world, and, therefore, I had rather be among them. And with, perhaps, the exception of Middle Georgia, we have the best type of Methodism I have found.

I spent the month of March helping Bros. Rook and Price on Paris and McNutt circuits. The revival at Paris was exceptionally good. Bro. Rook is doing a good work on the circuit, and my stay with him, his lovely family, and good people, was most pleasant.

The meetings at Sunny Side, Shellmound and McNutt were splendid, and I am sure that much good was done. It is a big pleasure to be with Dr. Price and his family. The Doctor is making a fine beginning on McNutt circuit, which is one of the most important in the Conference. The music in our meetings has been fine. Misses Price, the Doctor's daughters, rendered faithful service in the choir. We used the V. P. Hymnal, and I want to say that there is no better.

I am now with Bro. Porter at Minter City. The meeting has just started, and we can hardly, at this stage, say what the results will be.

I go from here home to assist Bro. Lewis in a tent meeting. Pray for us that God may do great things for Grenada. W. M. MCINTOSH.

TOLES, MISS.

Since my last writing I have visited another Indian settlement about fifteen miles west of our mission church. The settlement is near the Catholic headquarters. Our service was held outdoors. We had 18 Indians and 26 whites present. We arranged a few pine logs for seats for the Choctaws, and the whites supplied themselves largely with chairs from a house near by and chairs taken from wagon and wagon seats, etc. As it was a sunny place, and the sun began to shine a little hotly before we closed, I suggested to the Choctaws to put their hats on, and I set the example by preaching the first sermon in my life with my hat on, which was, however, in regular Choctaw style. There was good attention paid to the message, and more particularly by an Indian Baptist preacher, who was much affected. At the close they all gave me their hand, promising to be my friend, and that they would help me all they could in my work among them. The white people kindly tendered me their school-house till we can make other arrangements.

Our cause at our mission church (Tullicholuke) is doing well. The membership met Friday before the Quarterly Conference, and cleaned up the churchyard nicely, and on Quarterly Conference day (though on Monday) were out to enjoy the occasion; but, greatly to our regret, our presiding elder failed to reach us, and this scribe undertook to preside in his stead.

My school will be out about the tenth of April, after which I expect to make more extensive tours in the interest of the mission.

We have an opportunity to secure a beautiful location for a parsonage, consisting of 240 acres of land, two tenant-houses, a little store-house that would make an excellent office for the preacher, a good barn, a log-crib, a well, a goodly number of fruit trees. The residence, however, is not such as could be used, and about 75 acres that could be put in cultivation the first year, with some fencing, all for $500, with $100 within ninety days, and four years' time on the balance of $100 each; payment with six per cent. interest. I do not think we can afford to miss this opportunity. Beside answering for a parsonage, it will also give a home to quite a number of Indian families who are anxious to go on it next Fall and Winter. Can I not depend on the membership of the Methodist Church and its friends for the $100? My faith in them says I can.

As to the probability of our success among the Indians, I think it is great. I see no reasons why they can not, but many reasons why they can be brought to Christ. (1) They are human beings, and, being such, are possessed with immortal souls, and are, therefore, a part of the purchased of our Lord. Christ died for all, and all for whom he died can be saved. (2) Where faithful and persistent efforts have been made, success has been won, both by us and other denominations. Taking their past history and present surroundings into consideration, they are as easily reached as other people, and when once won to Christ, they make, as a rule, faithful Christians. What we need most is to contrive a plan by which the gospel can be given them in the shortest possible time. Ere long I expect to submit a plan by which this can be done. In the meanwhile pray for our success.

J. N. TUCKER.

TARRY AT LEAST A FEW DAYS.

It is announced that B—— W——, "minstrel," was converted the other day in a Western city, and has decided to become an evangelist and hold meetings in New York, where he formerly lived, and in the other large cities of this country. We hope his conversion is genuine, and that he will make a successful recruiting agent for the army of Christian soldiers; but we also hope that he will be content to build up a reputation in some community and church for a year at least before summoning the churches of our great cities to co-operate with him in great evangelistic movements. Something more than conversion added to the qualities which contribute to success as a minstrel, is necessary to success in winning souls; some considerable practice in holy living is essential to confidence and the development of discretion.—New York Christian Advocate.

"YES OR NO."

When a young woman answers "yes" to the impetuous wooing of an honorable and ambitious young man, it depends largely upon her health whether she will be a happy or an unhappy wife. A young wife who suffers from weakness and disease of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine is sure to fail of happy wifehood. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription imparts health, strength, virility and elasticity to the womanly organism. It fits for healthy wifehood and capable motherhood. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, soothes pain and invigorates and vitalizes. It banishes the nausea and complaints of the expectant period and makes the little one's arrival easy and almost painless. It insures baby's health and a bountiful supply of nourishment. Thousands of homes that for years had only needed the added tie of a baby to make them happy now resound with the laughter of happy, healthy childhood, as a result of the use of this remedy. Over 90,000 women have testified to its marvelous results in writing.

This wonderful medicine is the discovery of an eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the great Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. By writing to Dr. Pierce, ailing women can secure the free advice of a specialist who has treated more women than any other physician in the world, and avoid the disgusting examinations and local treatment insisted upon by obscure doctors. The 'Favorite Prescription' is sold by all good medicine dealers.

All about the home-treatment of ordinary diseases. Send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, for a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Cloth binding 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Weak Lungs, Bronchitis, Female Debility, and the distressing ills of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels are dragging many to the grave who would recover health by its timely use.

THE RECENT INTERNATIONAL STUDENT VOLUNTEER CONVENTION.

From the Review of Missions, for April, we gather most of the following interesting items respecting the Student Volunteer Movement, the third international convention of which was held at Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 23-27. At this convention the high expectations of its promoters were more than realized. It was, as one speaker truthfully declared, the largest missionary gathering ever held on this continent. The total attendance, including students, professors, speakers, editors and missionary secretaries, numbered 2,214, to say nothing of the vast crowds in the vicinity of Cleveland that flocked to the various meetings of the convention. Over 1,700 student delegates and 106 college professors representing 458 colleges, universities and theological seminaries in the United States and Canada were in attendance, the Volunteer Movement being almost entirely confined to the higher institutions of learning. There were present also 83 missionary secretaries representing 71 Missionary Boards and societies, and 89 missionaries from all parts of the world. Among the speakers who took part in the exercises were a number of the most prominent workers in the Christian world. Bishop Hargrove and Dr. W. R Lambuth were among the representatives from our church to that assemblage, which was marked by spiritual fervor and wideness of vision. The missionary zeal there aroused, the information there imparted, and the spiritual power there manifested, will extend to nearly every college and university in the land, and produce glorious and abiding results for the kingdom of God.

The Christian world is to be congratulated upon the fact that nowhere else is there such intense and intelligent enthusiasm in the cause of missions as among college students and instructors. No longer can it be said that missionary enterprise enlists the attention chiefly of the illiterate pious and fanatical dreamers. A vast ocean of change in sentiment rolls between us and the age of Sydney Smith, who only a hundred years ago ridiculed and lampooned William Carey and his associates as "didactic artisans, whose proper talk is of hullocks and not of the gospel; delirious mechanics; the lowest of the people; detachments of lunatics." Let it not be forgotten that David Livingston, the great explorer and missionary to Africa, though once sneered at as a fanatic, was given a state funeral and sepulture in Westminister Abbey, the resting place of kings and nobles and heroes. As the London Quarterly Review not long ago aptly remarked: "Men of mark for scholarship in larger numbers than ever devote their talents to the labor or the literature of the mission field and add to its prestige." Well has it been said: "The fact that the interest of the student class, from whose ranks are to come the leaders of thought and action, has been enlisted in behalf of the evangelization of the world, is of the largest possible significance."

The watchword of the Student Volunteer Movement, which took definite shape in 1888, and is, therefore, but ten years old, is "the evangelization of the world in this generation." The good it has done in awakening intelligent interest in foreign missions is incalculable. The movement has reached and affected 837 institutions of learning, in many of which a complete revolution has taken place in the attitude of the students towards foreign missions. Is it not significant that the greatest readers of missionary literature to-day are students? Four years ago in the colleges within the circle of the movement the systematic study of missions was begun. In all North America less than 30 classes were then pursuing such study. Since that time marvelous progress has been made in this direction. One hundred and forty-four classes, with an average attendance of 1,400, were organized the first year this new line of voluntary study was enterprised. Last year the number of classes was 267, the number of students in them being 2,361. Not less than $20,000, it is said, has been expended in missionary literature for the colleges to which the movement has spread.

The most striking feature of this modern missionary movement is the fact that under its influence over 4,000 volunteers have been enrolled, and of these 1,173 are already in the foreign field, serving in 53 different countries as the representatives of forty-six distinct and separate missionary societies; for, as its leaders state, "the Volunteer Movement is simply a recruiting agency, the servant of all the foreign missionary societies." In the British Isles the greatest activity among the student volunteers is exhibited in the medical schools, there being now in that region more volunteers among the medical than among the theological students. Thus the college students of this day are proving themselves worthy, but more practical successors of the zealous monks who went forth in other ages from the halls of learning to win the heathen to Christ.

It is noticeable that at the inception of this movement $5,000 represented the yearly contributions of our colleges and seminaries to foreign missions. The total from this source last year reached the splendid sum of $40,000. Over 100 institutions of learning now support missionaries either entirely or in part. We join the editors of the Review of Missions in saying that "this heroic devotion upon the part of the student body on this continent should stimulate the church to prayer for an awakened conscience."

TWO SORTS.

Recently we have been sending out circulars reminding some of our subscribers that they are in arrears. Most of them, like the good, sensible people that they are, reply in a kindly spirit, either paying up or asking for indulgence for a time. A few, however, get into a rage, and call ugly names, and flatly refuse to pay on the ground that we ought not to have sent the paper after the subscription expired, and this, too, in the face of the fact that they have never notified us of a desire to discontinue, but have regularly taken the paper from the office. After reading an occasional fulmination of this sort, it is a real treat to get a letter like the one from which the following quotation is made: "I thank you so much for being so patient in waiting with me. Your paper gets better all the time. I intend to keep on reading it as long as I can pay for it. I pray God's blessings upon you in your work." This letter breathes a Christian spirit. But what about those who take a paper as long as they can get it and then refuse to pay for it? "By their fruits ye shall know them."

A NEW BOOK.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF CHARLES FORCE DEEMS, D. D., LL.D., pastor of the Church of the Strangers, New York City, and president of the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, and Memoir by his sons, Rev. Edward M. Deems, A. M., Ph.D., and Francis M. Deems, M. D., Ph.D. 12 mo. 365 pages. Price, $1.50. Fleming H. Revell Co.: New York, Chicago, Toronto.

The numerous friends and admirers of the lamented Dr. Deems will hail the appearance of this volume with genuine delight. It is not every public man whose biography is worth reading; but the story of the life of this gifted and consecrated man, who, before his death, had achieved national—we may say, international—fame, is neither dry nor disappointing. Perhaps no other preacher, North or South, ever rose more rapidly into prominence, or held his place in public esteem more firmly, than did Dr. Deems. Being a man of remarkable versatility, as a preacher, teacher, author, editor, and lecturer, he was a brilliant success. Whatever he undertook he did heartily and well. His life seems to have been full of change and incident as well as of toil.

During his lifetime the Southern Methodist Church had not a more faithful servant or a more brilliant representative than was he. For a considerable portion of his life Dr. Deems resided in North Carolina, where he served the church in various capacities. He was repeatedly elected delegate to the General Conference, and at one time was not far from being elected to the bishopric. The latter part of his life was spent in New York City, where he founded shortly after the Civil War the "Church of the Strangers," which remains to-day a fitting and splendid monument to his memory. The account of its establishment is of romantic interest. While pastor of this church Dr. Deems wrote his life of "Jesus, the Light of the Nations," a book which has received the highest encomiums both in Europe and America, and which will give its author lasting fame.

The autobiography, comprising eighty-nine pages, covers the first twenty-four years of the Doctor's life, taking us up to his marriage and entrance upon a professorship in the University of North Carolina. The memoir by his sons contains much interesting matter, and is not too fulsome in its praise. Rightly is it said that "Dr. Deems was a man of pronounced and original personality. In the pulpit he was wonderously eloquent as an orator; in his pastoral work he was indefatigable, and, without apparent effort, was equally at home with the pauper and the millionaire, with the scholar and the unlearned." The vivacious, spiritual, and scholarly man whose deeds and character are so well portrayed in this volume has left behind him a noble and inspiring record. We hope it will be read by thousands.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference convened at Rayne Memorial Church on Thursday, April 7, at 10 A. M., with Bishop Keener in the chair. All of the pastors in the district except two were present. There was a very good attendance of city laymen, but not a single one from the charges outside the city. It was quite a pleasure to the brethren to see Bishop Keener able to be present at the first session of the Conference, and a regret to them that he was not able to attend the remaining sessions, owing probably to the fact of the change of time for the daily sessions to 5 P. M., for the convenience of the laymen. During the remainder of the Conference Bro. S. S. Keener, the presiding elder, presided with ability and grace.

In the reports of the various preachers in charge the following facts of special interest were reported:

We have a new charge, supplied by Bro. W. L. Hamil, comprising Lutcher, Burnside, and New River, from which the report was quite encouraging. A subscription was begun during the Conference for the purchase of a church lot in the town of Lutcher.

The Morean Street and Craps Street charges, by the mutual consent of both congregations, will soon effect a consolidation, the exact plan of which has not been determined, but which will be of great benefit to our work in that section of the city. It is hoped that enough money will be realized from the sale of one of the churches to put the other in first-class condition, and also to build a chapel at McCarthy Square, in the extreme lower part of the city, where it is much needed.

A gracious revival was reported at Louisiana Avenue, and also a good meeting in Algiers.

A neat little church has been dedicated in Gouldsboro, the terminal of the T. and P. railroad.

There is prospect of purchasing a parsonage at Felicity, sufficient funds having been realized from the collection of an old debt, and one thousand dollars has been subscribed to the liquidation of the debt on Dryades Street Church.

Encouraging items were reported from nearly all of the charges, but we have not space to dwell upon them.

Two bright young men were licensed to preach by the Conference —Bro. L. F. Magruder, of Louisiana Avenue Church, and now a student at Millsaps College, and Bro. Wm. Kleinschmidt, of Dryades Street Church.

A committee was appointed to superintend the repair of the Elijah Steele tomb in the Firemen's Cemetery, of this city, and Sunday, April 17, was set as the time for the various pastors appointed to raise money for that purpose.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. B. Thomson, W. W. Carre, A. S. Daniels, W. W. Sutcliffe. Alternates: J. Cohen, and T. J. Ferguson.

It will be observed that some changes were made in the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground. The following were elected: W. B. Thomson, W. W. Sutcliffe, A. S. Daniels, H. W. Spear, S. H. Meyer, W. H. Krone, J. A. Woodville, and W. B. DePass.

Dr. Sawyer introduced very fitting resolutions of respect to the memory of our beloved Dr. David Morton.

The following memorial to the General Conference was introduced by the Epworth League Committee, and was unanimously carried:

Resolved, That we memorialize the General Conference to revise Chapter 6, Section 6, of the Discipline, so as to provide for the election of an Epworth League editor, as in the case of the Sunday school, whose duty shall be not only to edit the League organ, but also, with the assistance of the League Board, such publications as are necessary to the graded instruction of our young people, and as shall be within their financial reach.

In some parts of the church the election of two Epworth League officers has been advocated, secretary and editor. This memorial is to the effect that in case it be not deemed advisable to have two such officers, that the one chosen be an editor rather than a traveling secretary, since it is thought that he is the more necessary to meet the necessities of our League work.

Sermons were preached by Revs. Pierce, Kelly, Kent, Wynn, and Mansholland.

Miss Mary Werlein read the annual report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

Dr. Black was present and addressed the Conference on the subject of the ADVOCATE.

ROBERT H. WYNN.

THE "CONSECRATED COBBLER."

When in the town of Serampore, not far from the city of Calcutta, a few months ago, I saw in a bookcase of the Baptist college of that place a most astounding monument to the perseverance and genius of one man. There, on a single shelf, were piled high, one above another, no less than forty Bibles or portions of the Bible in as many different languages and dialects, all of them the work of the pioneer missionary of the nineteenth century, the Rev. William Carey, a name revered and honored in all Christian circles. He was the man whom Sidney Smith sneeringly called the shoemaker's awl and hammer, the "consecrated cobbler;" but the "consecrated cobbler" became the greatest Sanscrit scholar of his time. He became professor of Sanscrit in the college at Fort Edward, at a very large salary, all of which he devoted to missionary purposes, and, as I have said, left this monument of Bibles of his own translation behind him. Most of these are in use to-day, for no better translations have ever been made, and yet this was only a small portion of the self denying labors of this missionary hero. No wonder that an eminent writer of the Ethnological Society of New York enthusiastically declares: "Missions enable the German in his closet to compare more than two hundred languages; the unpronounceable syllables used by John Eliot, the monosyllables of China, the lordly Sanscrit and its modern associates, the smooth languages of the South Seas, the musical dialects of Africa, and the harsh gutturals of our own Indians." "But for the researches of our missionaries," says another, "the languages of further India"—and he might add of most of the rest of the world—"would be a 'terra incognita.'"—North American Review.

Dr. Harvey tells a story of a man who was overtaken by a storm, to escape which he crawled into a hollow log. The log swelled, by getting wet, and caught the man so tightly that he could not get out. He began to think over his past life, recalling all the wrong things he had done. Ever and anon he would renew the struggle to extricate himself, but in vain. After awhile he thought of the way he had acted in not paying for his religious paper, and immediately he got so small that he could turn around and come out of the log without difficulty.—Western Recorder.

No man denies God until after he has departed from God; for as long as he delights in the sunlight and fellowship of God he can not bring his heart to the state of denial; but once we are separated from God, as Peter was, it is easy to deny him. And then return to him must be by the path of tears and bitterness.

Character gives splendor to youth, and awe to wrinkled skin and gray hairs.—R. W. Emerson.

From a private letter from Rev. A. B. Jones we quote as follows:

I attended meeting of Sam Jones' Camp Ground Association, Tuesday, April 5. Preached the annual sermon. Quite an enthusiastic attendance of members. Very important improvements have been made in hotel accommodations, dividing the sleeping apartments into rooms. The camp meeting to begin Friday, July 29, and continue ten days. The presiding elder, Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, was present, and was much pleased with what he saw and heard.

The New Orleans Methodist Sunday-school Union celebrated its first anniversary, last Sabbath afternoon, at Carondelet Street Church. The spacious auditorium was crowded. An interesting and appropriate programme had been prepared consisting of music, responsive readings, recitations, essays and addresses. The banner was awarded to Douglass Square Mission School. The award is always made on the basis of the best general average. This includes the best percentage of attendance and the largest amount of money per capita. There was great surprise that this mission school, which was organized only two or three years ago, should have won the banner. The program was a good one and well-carried out.

GRENADA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

The Board of Trnstees of the Grenada Collegiate Institnte had a called meeting on Tnesday, March 29. Of the thirteen members of the Board, nine were present. Bro. J. R. Bingham presided, and Bro. J. W. Griffis served as secretary. The object of this special meeting was to devise plans to go forward in onr female edncational work. Plans for enlargement and endowment were discnssed and agreed upon. The following preamble and resolntions were passed:

Whereas, The time seems to have come, in the providence of God, for the chnrch in the North Mississippi Conference to go forward in her female edncational work; And, Whereas, The Grenada college is the only property we own for doing this work; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that the institntion is wisely and well located.

Resolved, That we go forward in both endowment and enlargement.

Resolved, That, as a Board, we will seek to so interest the Conference as to dupllcate every dollar for enlargement in the way of additional buildings and equipments raised by the citizens of Grenada.

Resolved, That we will encourage and aid in endowment to the extent of our ability.

This paper met the hearty approval of every member of the Board, and President Malone begins to feel that there is light ahead. One absent member of the Board wrote that he would give $100 to the endowment fnnd, and another brother, who is not a trnstee, wrote that he would give $100 to the same fnnd. With the work our agent is doing, and the co operation of the preachers and other friends of the college, we hope to enlarge and endow this institution within the next few years. The trne policy of female edncation is to pnt our female colleges on the same footing as onr male colleges, pay the president and teachers a salary, and let the girls pay for board what their actnal expenses amount to. Dr. J. W. Malone is now in a position to begin this work of enlargement and endowment, and if anyone whose eyes may fall npon these lines should desire to give to the conrse of Christian edncation any sum, little or much, that will be an endnring benedictlon to the girls of North Mlsslssippi, let him or her write to him at Grenada, Miss.

T. W. LEWIS.

DR. DAVID MORTON.

Whereas, The Methodist Episcopal Chnrch, South, has been called to monrn the sndden death of Rev. David Morton, D. D., its General Secretary of Chnrch Extension; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the New Orleans District Conference, recognize that one of the foremost leaders of onr Zion has been removed from the field of his earthly labors and trinmphs, leaving to the Church the glorious heritage of a thoroughly consecrated and eminently successfnl life;

That in Dr. Morton the chnrch had a servant providentially called and fitted for the great work of chnrch extension, into which work he ever put his best of head and heart, his indomitable will, mighty faith and burning zeal, snrmonnting all difficnlties in the inaugnration and firm establishment of that great cause;

That, while his labors for the past sixteen years, resnlting in the raising of more than a million of dollars and the bnilding of hnndreds of chnrches throughout our home and foreign fields, constitnte an endnring monument to him, nevertheless we trnst that a "David Morton Loan Fnnd" may be raised as a special token of the love the chnrch has for his memory;

That we sympathize deeply with the bereaved family, earnestly praying that God may graciously sustain and comfort them in their great loss;

That these resolntions be pnblished in the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocates.

JAMES E. DENSON.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I left home March 22 for a two week's itinerary. I first attended onr Preachers' Meeting in Durant, where we had two days of pleasant fellowship and discussion of topics pertaining to Christian doctrines and work. After spending a night in Winona with onr sons, I ran np to Batesville and stopped over a day with Bro. McCullongh and his people, snpplying them with some needed books. Thence, on Friday evening, to Sardis, where I was met by the pastor, Bro. Kendall, with his characteristic brotherly greeting and conducted to the parsonage, where the ever-hearty welcome of the hostess, Sister K, was extended. Here I fonnd Bro. Cogdell assisting Bro. K. in a meeting. So we had several days of good old-fashioned Methodist preacher association together in that pastor's home as well as good preaching and edifying religions services at the chnrch two and three times each day. Bro. Kendall and his people are greatly in love with each other. He is rendering them faithful service, and they are giving special tokens of esteem by almost daily "sending things to the parsonage" and boasting of his good preaching.

I had the pleasnre also of a day in the district parsonage occupied by the beloved Dr. Wier and wife. He is as alert and diligent in the work as ever. May his bow long abide in strength!

March 30 I ran down to Grenada, where I met in session the Grenada District Pastors' and Theological Institute, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Parsonage and Home Missionary Society and Epworth League Conference. While the attendance npon either was not large, the occasion was enjoyable and, donbtless, profitable to those who participated in the exercises.

The first Sunday in April was spent very pleasantly and, I trnst, profitably at Kilmichael with Bro. J. F. Evans and his people. I had the loved privilege of preaching morning and evening and of addressing the Sunday-school at three o'clock P. M.

Monday night was delightfnlly spent at Winona in the district parsonage with Presiding Elder Stone and family. The Lord reward them and all other helpers in the gospel for their kindness.

Dnring these two weeks good libraries have been fnrnished to the Sunday schools at Sardis, Sherrard and Kilmichael, and many other nsefnl books pnt in circnlation. Grenada Collegiate Institute is doing well; everything there is lovely and nnder good report.

Rev. M. L. Burton is circnlating among the chnrches and is making a good impression personally and for the Orphans' Home. He reports 14 inmates and many applications.

THE NEW PRESIDING ELDER.

By orders from Bishop Wilson, I am now on the Corinth district, which I find in prosperous condition. The preachers are all at their posts, and as far as I have been able to learn, in favor with their people. There is great monrning over the fall of their faithfnl leader. Bro. Tucker died with sword in hand in the midst of the battle with every detail of his work np to date; a faithfnl record made of everything. I had fnlly made np my mind to retire from the Epworth College the first of Jnne, and was traveling a circnit in Arkansas, and knew nothing of my appointment to the circnit nntil ten days after the appointment was made. I leave a good place in the Epworth College for some ednoator in onr chnrch. My address will be Holly Springs, Miss.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel colnmns without the bnlkiness of snch an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

You will find onr offer of the "Combination" Bible on the fifth page; the other on the third.

Epworth League

BY H. N. HARRISON.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 17.—"THE KEEPING POWER OF GOD." 1. PET. i, 5; DEUT. xxxiii, 27.

1. Christ's love for his sheep, and their love for him, will preserve them safely nnto his coming. The trne sheep know his voice, and they follow him, and he giveth nnto them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them ont of his hand. (John x, 27, 28)

2. There are many professing Christians among ns who have mnch difficnlty in holding on to their religion. They find it hard to keep from stumbling into evil. We have observed that they are apprehensive and nneasy as to the fntnre. The fact is, the evil one keeps them in a state of painfnl vigilance and nncertainty. They do not seem to stand where "that wicked one toncheth them not." Now, the object of salvation is to keep ns from these things (See 1. John iv, 18). "Thon wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." (Is. xxvi, 3.)

3. The explanation of the tronble with many Christians lies in the fact that they are not fully committed unto God. We can only be fnlly kept when we are fully committed nnto him. We mnst commit both soul and body into his keeping (Ps. xxxvii, 5, 6). The life victorious is the privilege of every believer; yet we hear onr Christian friends on all sides confessing constant defeats. In their prayers, pnblic and private, they bemoan the egregions sins they have been committing against him in thought, word, and deed. Why shonld we sin against him? Are we compelled to do so? If we really love him, will we not keep his commandments? (John xiv, 15, 21.) It is by love that we fnlfil the commandments (Rom. xiii, 10). Hear Paul on the life victorions: "Who shall separate ns from the love of Christ? Shall tribnlation, or distress, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conqnerors through him that loved ns!" More than conqnerors! Think of it! Exceeding great conquerors! This shonld be the aim, as it is the privilege, of all God's children. When we meet the conditions laid down in the Word, we shall snrely secnre both the keeping power of God and the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. (II. Tim. i, 12)

We wish to remind the Epworth Leagners of Loulsiana that their Annnal Conference will be held at the close of the present month in Alexandria, La. Do not forget this, and go, if possible. Pray specially for this Conference.

"COMBINATION" FAMILY BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

MAGNIFICENT ENGRAVINGS.

There is a steady and increasing demand for Family Bibles. Every family is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest trinmph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. WORDS.

Words are things of little cost,
Quickly spoken, quickly lost;
We forget them, but they stand
Witnesses at God's right hand,
And their testimony bear
For us or against us there.

Oh, how often ours have been Idle words, and words of sin,
Words of anger, scorn and pride,
Or desire our fault's to hide,
Envious tales, or strife unkind,
Leaving bitter thoughts behind!

Grant us, Lord, from day to day,
Strength to watch and grace to pray.
May our lips, from sin set free,
Love to speak and sing of thee,
Till in heaven we learn to raise
Hymns of everlasting praise!

– Immanuel Baptist Messenger.

TEMPERS, AND WHAT TO DO WITH THEM.

What a shadow is cast over lives and homes by bad tempers! It is Sunday morning, God's day of rest and peace, when the worry and rush of the world should be quiet, and the voices of newspaper boys and hawkers of small wares should be still. A family of little children is waiting to be sweetened and blessed by God, mother, and father. But the mother has become put out over something; she speaks peevishly and crossly; her husband hardly dares put in a word; and the children are scared, and talk to one another in whispers. Though there is everything in the pretty home to entrap the sunbeams which play without, a shadow lies over all and mars the day.

Or it is church-time, and the family are late; the husband and father is waiting, dressed, ready for the house of God, but the mother or children are unready, and he calls for them, each time in a more irritable tone, and when at last they appear, "Late again," "Always your way," "I am tired and out of patience with you," bring some sharp retort, and the rest of the walk to the sanctuary is either spent in silence, or the parents confine their observations to whichever child they happen to be walking with. What good will the service have after such an introduction?

How often has a happy day's excursion been spoiled in the same way! It has been the topic of conversation for weeks. The wife has been hurrying all her work to be ready. Such preparations in dress for herself and the children, such cooking of savory tartlets and cutting of sandwiches! The husband has got off for the day with no little planning. Sunshine augurs a happy excursion. But somehow things do not go right. Perhaps the husband is unreasonable and thoughtless, or gives the wife reason to think that he does not appreciate her careful provision; or, perhaps, she is over-tired and nervous, and misinterprets a remark meant quite innocently; but one crosses the other, and the ill-natured word, the sour look, the sulking manner, somehow make the whole party miserable—worse than a shower of rain would.

People who have a temper are much to be pitied. They know when it is coming on, or has come, and wish they had not yielded, and hate themselves for being disagreeable; yet can not shake themselves loose from the evil thing that has sprung on them as the jaguar or antelope, or the ague on the traveler in the tropics. They are disposed, however, to fancy that they can not help themselves. They have inherited it, as they did the color of their hair or the shape of their nose. Their mother had it before them, and her father before her.

Now, there is some truth, no doubt, in this talk about heredity. For good or ill past generations have left their mark upon us; and parents, especially mothers, can not too deeply ponder it in their hearts. What they are, their children will become; and if there is a strong taint in the blood, an evil tendency in any special direction, there is the most reason why the mother should set herself resolutely to resist it, and replace it by the opposite. There is no doubt that this can be done. It has been done in thousands of instances, and may be done again.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer

It is a renewer, because it makes new again. Old hair is made new; the gray changed to the color of youth.

It is impossible to estimate the value of a good and sunny temper, which goes through life with a song, looking always on the bright side of things, and yielding to the blows of trial and disappointment with an unfailing grace. It is often associated with a sound constitution and abounding health, and there is undoubtedly a close connection between the two, but it is not dependent on these; for, as the great Dr. Arnold testified of his sister, who was for years a confirmed invalid, but whose chamber was the sunniest room in the house, so suffering and pain have often only set forth to greater advantage the well-spring of sweetness and good nature which has poured forth like strains of sweet music amid the clatter of a dusty, noisy thoroughfare.

But how may those afflicted with ill-temper be delivered? The apostle says, "Laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." That "laying aside" is a remarkable expression, for it means that the thing may be done by one sudden, definite act. We are not to wait till these evil things die down in our hearts, but are to make up our minds, once and forever, to lay them aside, as a beggar his rags when new clothes are offered him. It is a definite act of the will. Will you make it now? Will you say, "From this moment I choose to be free of these things, and I deliberately put them off"?

But you fear that this will not help you, you have so often made good resolutions before, and broken them. Then take one further step. Trust Christ to keep you. Look up to him, and say, "Lord, I have often tried to keep my temper and failed, but from henceforth I intrust its keeping to thee." Expect him to undertake the charge. Every morning look up into his face, and say, "I am still trusting thee to be between me and my evil past, and to fill me with thy own sweetness, gentleness, and patience." In moments of provocation dare to trust him still, and to hold to the compact by which your helplessness and evil claims everything from his all-sufficiency. Live thus, and you will become known for the very opposite temper to that which has so often caused you poignant regret.—F. B. Meyer, in Golden Rule.

GONE.

Every day things are forever passing out of our sight and slipping beyond our reach. Of how many things we are compelled to say, "They are gone." We start with life all before us; in a little while much that was once within our reach is gone. Time is gone, never to return; opportunity is gone, and can not be recovered; youth is gone, and often wasted; influence sometimes is gone through our own follies and misdeeds; money is gone, spent in useless and in foolish ways; and by and by life itself will be gone, and time will be gone, and we must meet the Judge who gave his life for us, and who gave us our lives that we might devote them to his service and his praise.

Moments are slipping by, opportunities are fleeing, years are passing, life is short, and in a little while everything which we once could have grasped is beyond our reach; and then comes the time of reckoning, the solemn account, the Judge of the quick and dead, before whom we must stand. Let us then improve the present hour, grasp each opportunity as it comes, redeem the time, because the days are evil, and so be ready that we at last may meet our Lord in peace, and enter into his presence with joy.

"My days are gliding swiftly by,
And I, a pilgrim stranger,
Would not detain them as they fly,
Those hours of toil and danger;

"For oh! we stand on Jordan's strand,
And soon we'll pass over;
And just before, the shining shore
We may almost discover."

—Common People.

EXAMPLE.

Example ranks next to character in its moulding power. The parent's example is the type, and the child's receptive nature the ready paper on which it is copied. By this invisible printing "parents advertise themselves in their children," and stamp within them messages of good or ill that can never be erased. A young minister when about to be ordained, stated that at one period of life he was nearly an infidel. "But," said he, "there was one argument in favor of Christianity which I could never refute—the consistent conduct of my father."—Exchange.

ARE YOU KIND TO YOUR MOTHER?

Who guarded you in health, and comforted you when ill? Who hung over your little bed when you were fretful, and put the cooling draught to your parched lips? Who taught you how to pray, and gently helped you to read? Who has borne with your faults, and has been kind and patient in your childish ways? Who loves you still, and who contrives and works and prays for you every day you live? Is it not your mother, your own dear mother? Now let me ask you: Are you kind to your mother?—Exchange.

GREED.

A story is told of a young man who picked up a sovereign on the road. Ever afterward, as he walked, he kept his eye fixed on the ground in the hope of finding another. Heaven was bright above him, but he gazed on mud and filth, and when he died, a rich old man, he knew this fair earth only as a dirty road in which to pick up money.—Evangelical Messenger.

When the game is not worth the candle, drop it at once. It is wasting time to look for milk in a gate-post, or blood in a turnip, or sense in a fool. Never ask a covetous man for money till you have boiled a flint soft. Don't sue a debtor who has not a penny to bless himself with—you will only be throwing good money after bad, which is like losing your ferret without getting the rabbit. Never offer a looking-glass to a blind man, if a man is so proud that he will not see his faults, he will only quarrel with you for pointing them out to him. It is of no use to hold a lantern to a mole, or to talk of heaven to a man who cares for nothing but his dirty money. There is a time for everything, and it is a silly thing to preach to drunken men; it is casting pearls before swine; get them sober, and then talk to them soberly; if you lecture them while they are drunk, you act as if you were drunk yourself.—Spurgeon.

Life here is short even at the longest. We can not finish in threescore and ten years the great things we dream of in our best moods. Then, only comparatively a few lives reach this full limit of age. It is but a little that we can do in our short, broken years. We begin things, and we are interrupted in the midst of them. Before they are half finished we are called away to something else, or laid aside by illness, or our life ends, and the work remains incomplete. It is pathetic, when a busy man has been called away suddenly, to go into his office, his study, or his place of work, and see the unfinished things he has left—the letter half written, the book half read, the column of figures half added up, the picture begun, but not completed. Life is full of fragments, the mere beginnings of things. If there were nothing beyond death, little could come of this poor fragmentary living and doing. But when we know that life will go on without serious break through endless years, it puts a new meaning into every noble and worthy beginning. Every right and good thing, however small it may seem, shall live forever.—J. R. Miller, D. D., in "Things to Live For."

"My father is very rich," said little Earl, as he walked by the side of his nurse. "All this land is his, and this house and the stable and the lake." "My father is also rich," said the girl, and she looked up toward the sky and away over the fields and woods. "The green fields and meadows are all his, the blue sky and the golden sun, 'the cattle on a thousand hills'—all these are his." "And who is your father?" asked Earl. "He is God, the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth," was the good and gentle answer.—Indian Witness.

FRUIT AS A MEDICINE.

While the general reader has been told many times of the advantages and desirability of a fruit diet, it may be that the traits and characteristics of the several fruits have not been as fully explained, in a concise form, as could be desired. Here are some useful suggestions, taken from a special article on the subject:

Fresh ripe fruits are excellent for purifying the blood and toning up the system.

As specific remedies, oranges are aperient. Sour oranges are highly recommended for rheumatism.

Watermelons for epilepsy and for yellow fever.

Cranberries for erysipelas are used externally as well as internally.

Lemons for feverish thirst in sickness, for biliousness, low fevers, rheumatism, colds, coughs, liver complaints, etc.

Blackberries as a tonic; useful in all forms of diarrhœa.

Tomatoes are a powerful aperient for the liver, a sovereign remedy for dyspepsia, and for indigestion; they are invaluable in all conditions of the system in which the use of calomel is indicated.

Figs are aperient and wholesome; they are said to be valuable as a food for those suffering from cancer; they are used externally as well as internally.

Apples are useful in nervous dyspepsia; they are nutritious and vitalizing; they aid digestion, clear the voice, correct the acidity of the stomach, are valuable in rheumatism, insomnia and liver troubles. An apple contains as much nutriment as a potato, in a pleasanter and more wholesome form.

Grapes dilute thick blood, send the circulation to the surface, remove the obstructions from liver and lungs, dissolve and dislodge gravel and calculi, and bring the stomach and bowels to a healthy condition.—Good Housekeeping.

MISS DOLLIE HICKS.

n undying love sprang up in my heart for s Dollie Hicks when, as her pastor's wife three years in Sardis, Miss., I learned the th of her noble, shrinking nature, the th of her unselfish friendship, and the de- ion of her heart to God and to his church. a large circle of acquaintances I believe I truthfully say I never knew a heart more al to God and his cause, or one who de- red more deeply that which was evil, and iced more heartily over the success of that ich was good.

Like Dorcas of old, she "was full of good rks and alms-deeds which she did." In bbath-school, W. F. M. Society, Ladies' d Society, and the weekly prayer meetings, though leading an unusually busy life, her ce was almost never vacant, and she was y there, by word and work, to advance cause of the Master she loved so well. ny a sick-room has rejoiced in her gentle istry, and it falls to the lot of few women be more universally appreciated and es- med in her own community. In the provi- ce of God the last days of her life were en to me after an almost total separation more than two years. She came to the hos- al of the Scarritt Bible and Training school king relief after months of lingering and reasing disease. She spent four bright, py days with us, so interested in and de- ted with the school she had loved and la- ed for from its inciplency. She was fully re of her danger, eager to live for the sake her loved ones, and yet perfectly resigned ready to go if it should be her Father's . I shall never forget the expression of face on the night before she left us as she ated every word of the beautiful old n commencing, "Since all the varying rs o' time." We would have kept her, we felt that this world would be poorer darker without her sweet, loving pres- ; but a tender Father led her gently e, and we know him too well for one mo- t to doubt his wisdom or his love.

ILL—It is with sadness that the writer ens the death of ADOLPHUS KNOX HILL, ber of Barron Hill, of whom we have just ken. Knox died in the bloom of youth, g only eighteen years and a few months He died on the ninth of February, 1898 was happily converted and joined the M. hurch a few months before his death. He very suddenly after taking sick, but suf- d a great deal before death. We can hard- ealize dear Knox has passed away. One e link is broken in the family circle that never be filled. He died as he lived—in triumphs of a living faith; and now two bers lie side by side in the country rthyard awaiting the resurrection. But e their bodies lie cold and silent in the ve, their spirits are happy around the ne of God and the holy angels. What a ed thought—sweet rest! While we can r again meet them here and enjoy their iation, we can meet them at the gate stands ajar. "And be saith unto me, e, blessed are they which are called unto arriage supper of the Lord."

funeral services took place at Davis g Church at 12 o'clock, Feb. 10, 1898 Rev. Cargill officiating. G. D. PURCELL.

ILL—GEORGE BARRON HILL, son of G. W. . A. Hill, was born Sept. 6, 1876, and Nov. 23, 1897, aged twenty-one years two hs and eleven days. He was married to Belle Clinton, of Alpha, La., March 3, Barron was a member of the M. E. h. He was killed instantaneously while ing at a saw-mill at Pollock, La. Too can never be said in memory of this de- young man. He was a true Christian, always delighted in reading the Word of As a husband, he was kind, gentle, and His aim was ever to do something to home happy for his dear, young, de- wife.

n Barron was nine years old his father leaving him to help support his mother ree younger brothers, for which he ly proved to be true. All who knew rned to love him. "Blessed are the hich die in the Lord from henceforth: th the Spirit, that they may rest from bors, and their works do follow them." eep not, dear friends, as those who hope, for death to Barron was only as . The funeral service took place at pring Church at 11 A. M., Nov. 25, 1897, B. Cargill officiating.

WHITED—ISABELLE JANE WHITED was born in New Salem, Westmoreland county, Penn., March 4, 1823. Her maiden name was Hall. She joined the Presbyterian Church when she was twelve years of age, and lived a consistent member of that church until the day of her death. She was married to Samuel Whited at Blairsville, Indiana county, Penn., Feb. 22, 1849. She was the mother of five children. Two died in infancy; three are still living, as is her aged husband.

She moved to Ouachita parish, La., in April, 1863. Not being near the church of her choice, she attended the services of the M. E. Church, South. No one would have known that she was not a member of the above-mentioned church, she being an active worker in the same. For seventeen years she was teacher of the infant class in the Sabbath-school at Bowman Chapel. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. The writer knew her intimately. Her home was the home of the preacher. She was kind and gentle to all; an active, zealous Christian worker; one who knew God in the pardon of sins, and loved God and his cause with all of her soul. She was preparing for the Sunday service when she met the angel of death. When she received the summons it found her ready. She fell asleep in Jesus on the eighteenth of March, 1898. She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother, a true friend. While she has ceased her labors on earth, she awaits her loved ones on the other shore, where she lives forever. C. T. MUNHOLLAND

COOPER—HILARY HALLAM, infant son of Rev. Inman W. and Mrs. B. W. Cooper, died of acute bronchitis at Moss Point, Miss., March 27, 1898, aged three months and twenty-one days.

The writer was summoned by telegram to mourn with Bro. and Sister Cooper in the loss of their precious babe. The physician had scarcely left the house, for the babe was not considered dangerously ill, when a sudden change took place, and it passed away to Him who has now called home three bright jewels from this household.

The interment was from the church, where a large number of friends were gathered. Revs. Byers and Bennett, pastors of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches respectively, took part in the services. The grave was literally covered with beautiful floral designs sent by friends from Biloxi and Moss Point. The little one was "buried in the roses." The bereaved parents, though sorely stricken, bore their affliction with commendable Christian fortitude, looking unto Him who has promised to wipe away every tear, and who comforts with infinite hope. C. F. EBERLY.

Biloxi, Miss.

BUCK—JESSE ALBERT BUCK, son of Mrs. Althia Buck, was born Aug. 14, 1886, and departed this life March 18, 1898.

Jesse was a bright, manly little fellow, the pride of his mother's heart. He was his mother's mainstay. Her lonely widowhood was cheered by his brightness, and her otherwise gloomy life was made happy by his love and devotion. He was verily a flower whose fragrance filled the home. He was the comfort of his mother when all else seemed far away. He was just reaching that age when she could begin to look to him for protection; but when she least expected it death touched him, and he slept. He left behind the aroma of a devoted life, and during his eleven brief Summers he gave promise of a life of usefulness and honor. In his case we were made to realize that "man cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down". Peace be to his ashes!

E. S. LEWIS.

Shaw, Miss.

FLOWERS—EDNA BELLE, daughter of W. W. and Myrtle Flowers, was born Jan. 8, 1896, and departed this life in Bitter Root Valley, Mon., Feb. 18, 1898.

She was a bright and promising child, and the joy of the home she had come to bless. Her life on earth, though short, was not in vain. She helped to bring heaven down to earth, and has carried hearts with her up to heaven. The spirit world is more real, and the home on high brighter and more attractive, since she has gone there. The Master has said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me," and we know that "the tender Shepherd doth guard with care the lambs of the upper fold."

Dr. Paton, having lost all his earthly goods, with savages all around seeking to take his life, was obliged to spend several hours one night in a tree for safety. "Yet," says he, "never in all my sorrows did my Lord draw nearer to me and speak more soothingly in my soul. . . . Had I been a stranger to Jesus and to prayer, my reason would verily have given way, but my comfort and joy sprang up out of these. 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee'; lo, I am with thee always!"—John G. Paton.

The slender, graceful curves of the lighthouse tower standing on the rock-bound coast are unseen, whilst from its lantern the reflectors flash beams of light far out to sea. We must live nearer Christ, catching the glow of his love; then, like John the Baptist, we shall be timid of attracting a single thought to ourselves, which might have found its way to him. We shall be willing to be pedestals, from which his beams shine the farther.—F. B. Meyer.

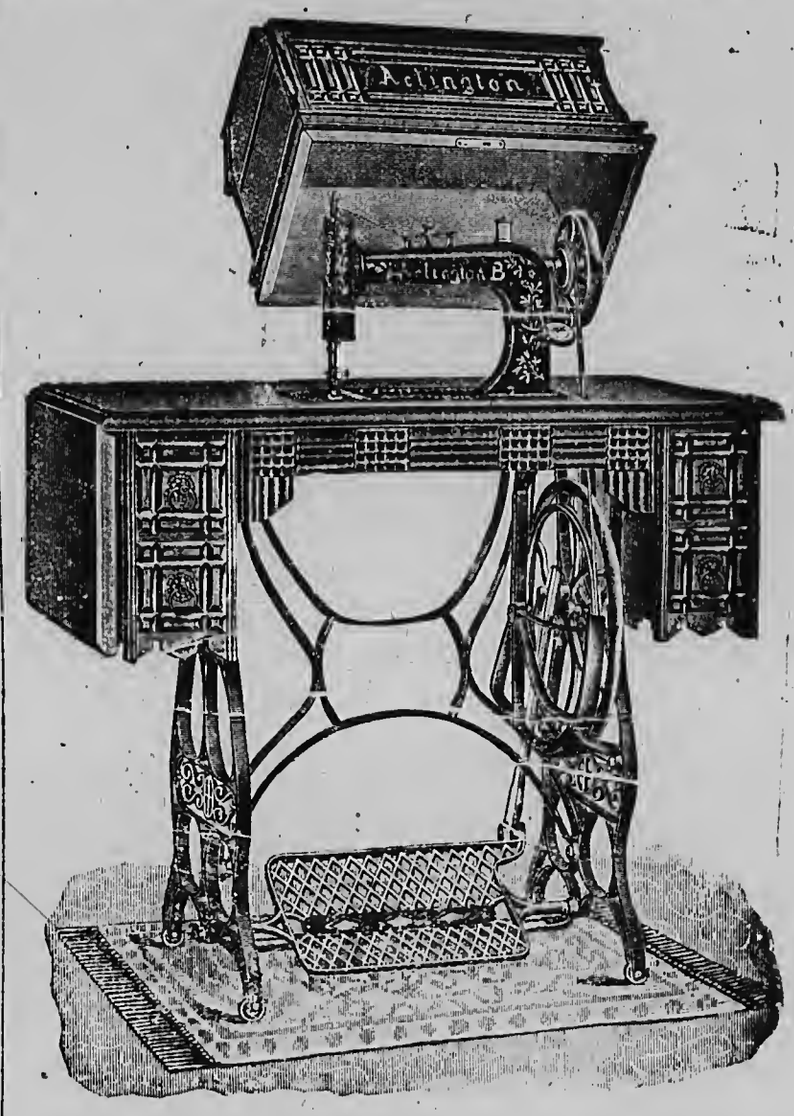
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Advices received from Skagnay, Alaska, says that at least seventy-five lives were lost in the snowslide on Chilcoot pass. The number may possibly be as high as one hundred. Sixty-nine bodies have been recovered so far, and the work of excavating is still progressing.

The remains of Miss Frances E. Willard were buried at Rose Hill Cemetery, Chicago, last Sunday. The body of the late temperance leader had been cremated, and previous to the ceremony on Sunday a small metal box, wrapped in white and containing the ashes, was placed beside the grave of Miss Willard's mother.

The naval appropriation bill which is now before the Senate is certain not to be cut down in any respect by the Senate committee. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe that, when the measure emerges from committee, it will be found that additions have been made to it which will add more than $6,000,000 to the total expenditure provided for in the bill.

Consul General Lee sailed from Havana on Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, on the United States lighthouse tender "Fern." Previous to his departure, as a matter of official courtesy, he called on Captain-General Blanco, the Military Governor and the highest Spanish functionary in the island. General Blanco refused to see the representative of the United States, alleging some frivolous excuse of business.

The message which President McKinley sent to Congress on Monday, on the controversy with Spain, greatly displeased the extremists of all parties and factions. It was too tame and unimpassioned for those who want immediate war and the independence of Cuba; it is too warlike for the peace-at-any-price partisans.

He decides that it would be unwise at this time to declare the independence of Cuba, or to recognize as sovereign and authoritative the present Cuban government, because, as he asserts, there is in existence there no organization of Cubans possessing the power and actually exercising the authority necessary to a government, or holding control over any considerable portion of the island, or performing the proper functions there of a civil government.

The Senate Committee will report unanimously for intervention without recognizing the present government in Cuba. The House report will be on the same general lines.

FOREIGN.

The Anglo-Egyptian forces attacked the Dervish position in the Soudan on April 8. The attack was entirely successful, and the Dervishes lost heavily.

There is now no doubt that France has made demands upon China in the shape of a proposition for the lease of a naval station and other privileges of a commercial character. With Russia, Great Britain, Japan, Germany and France occupying points along the Chinese coast, it is evident that the dismemberment of the Celestial Empire is no longer a dream, but a reality.

'Tis much to be regretted that so many of our wealthy congregations will persist in holding the money they expect to pay to missions until the end of the year. They seem determined to use it as long as possible. Wish there was some way to make them pay interest on it. Our Mission Board at Nashville is wrestling mightily with the mission finances, and yet these people hold on till just before Conference. I would to God our people would deal justly with the Lord. I'm glad there is to be a judgment.

Thank you, dear friends, one and all, and may God bless each one of you. I trust that I will be able to report as many again next week.

PAINT TALKS. IV.

SOMETHING ABOUT WALL PAPER.

The inventor of wall paper succeeded in producing an ideal dirt-preserver and disease-breeder. When anything else about us becomes soiled we wash it; but wall paper, which usually is put on with decaying paste, to begin with, continues from year's end to year's end collecting dust and smells and microbes, until it becomes, under the microscope, a veritable zoological garden of nastiness and disease.

It is a good rule to use in a house nothing that can not be cleansed. Carpet is bad enough, but it can be taken up at intervals for beating and airing. Lead paint crumbles off gradually in poisonous dust, but the paint covers only the wood-work, while the paper covers the whole wall.

When paint has outlived its beauty a fresh coat makes it at least clean; but when the dirt-collection on the paper becomes too apparent, it is commonly preserved for future use by pasting over it another layer of the dirt-collector.

There is only one valid excuse for wall paper—it is convenient. Paint in the long run is cheaper; it is in better taste and infinitely more healthful. But the great consideration is that a painted wall can be kept clean, while a papered wall can not.

It follows that all living-rooms should be painted. For this purpose the choice is between two materials—lead and zinc. The first is poisonous and darkens from the effects of coal gas, while the latter is innocuous, covers more surface, never changes color, and is more durable. Paints based on zinc are, therefore, certainly to be preferred on all accounts.

The property owner that does not use paint neglects his own interests, and if he does not give the preference to the combination paints based on zinc, he takes needless risks to his own financial damage. STANTON DUDLEY.

From out the gloom of time's dark toilsome night,
Where earth-clods crush the heart as in the tomb,
Are streaks of dawn, ere breaks the morning light
From out the gloom.

Count not life's clouds as thy eternal doom,
The silver lining o'er yon rugged height
Foretells in paradise thy soul in bloom.

The searing heat of noon may fade and blight,
Gray clouds dispel to give the blue sky room,
At eventide there shall be floods of light

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES"—NO. 4.

If "Sextus" will take time from reading the "common law" to read up a little on what the women are doing, then, instead of his solemn protest and condemnation, he will say, "God bless the women!" Most of this great and grand work has been done in the past twenty or twenty-five years. If there is a man in all this wide land with a soul so dead that he could not admire and applaud the work the women have done, I would surely say, "God have mercy on him!"

The women have organized and carried forward with skill and success some of the noblest enterprises, all of which look to the elevation, the purification and the salvation of poor, degraded, fallen men and women. I hardly know which to admire most—the great end they have in view or the consummate skill they display in the work they do.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union from a small beginning has now well-nigh a world-wide influence. It has been a boon and a blessing to millions of souls in many lands. This mustard-seed growth has assumed the proportions of a large tree. A list of the departments of Christian work enterprised by this organization is at once a surprise and an inspiration to all earnest men and women who love God and their fellow-men. The faith, the zeal, the persistency, the devotion and the enterprise of these women deserve the admiration of men and receives the approval of God. I wish "Sextus" would take time to look into this matter just a little, enough to get his eyes open. Then the signs of the times would be more hopeful and less discouraging to him. The women have done, or they have helped mightily to do, a great work in the State of Mississippi. They have helped to rid nearly every county in the State of open saloons. This work has been done in the face of strong and persistent opposition. In some counties and towns the women have gotten the saloons out, and the men have voted them in again; but the women go to work harder than ever. I do hope "Sextus" helped the women in his county. If he did, he has a right to have his say in a Christian paper; but, if not, he ought to appear in the papers of his side of this great moral question. The Christian people of Mississippi will not soon forget the heroic and long-continued struggle the women had in the city of Columbus and county of Lowndes in this State. Their pluck, faith and perseverance are worthy of the highest praise. They fought for their homes, their husbands, fathers, brothers and sons; for all that was dear and sacred to them in this life.

The women are doing a great and glorious work for God and humanity in rescue work and missions. They are hunting up and bringing to the Savior fallen women who are outcasts from decent society. This is a work that Christian women ought to do, and one that consecrated women only can do. Jesus came to save the lost, and he longs for the worst lost first. God only knows the good the women are doing in this field.

The women have organized missionary societies, and have carried forward great missionary enterprises, home and foreign, with unexampled success and safety. This they are doing in all the churches in all Christian lands. Some of us who have seen the beginning and the success of these great enterprises, set on foot and managed by the women, are filled with amazement and wonder that they were not at this work long ago. The women themselves did not know what great things they were capable of doing till they began to work. They have carried forward their own work, and have given new life and a tremendous impetus to like enterprises among the men. The women have done so wondrously well in all they have undertaken to do that I am about ready to give them a chance at any and every work they may desire to take in hand. The fact is, the Lord has plenty of work for every man, woman and child under the shining sun. The only trouble is that the devil has more men, women and children on his side than the Lord has on his, and some of the children of the devil are always ready to throw mud at those who are working in the vineyard of the Lord. Let the women alone, for they are doing a great work.

I think the signs of the times indicate that we are on the eve of far greater things than we have yet seen. The women who love our Lord are not going to be held back any longer by the "common law" and the foolish notions of men about what women ought and ought not do in the service and work of God. It matters not whether the men help or hinder, the love of Christ constrains them, and they are going to do the work; so, clear the track and let them have free course. They have done so well as it is, I am anxious to see them have a fair chance just to see how well they can do. If the men would help them as they ought to do, the women would sweep the last saloon from the face of this fair land, and they would corner and kill every blind tiger to be found. When I see the men using the ballot to bring the saloons in, in my heart I can't blame the women to want the ballot to vote these curses out. The suffrage of the men brings a world of suffering on the women. The women work like beavers to get the saloons out, and the men vote like devils to bring them in. My heart is filled with pity at this unequal and unfair contest. You mark what I tell you: the women of this country are going to rear a race of better men—men who will love home, and mother, and sister, and wife, and God, and native land. It will take time, but they have the grit and the patience to work and wait. God bless the women in all their labor of love for him.

In all this I have only used "Sextus" without abusing him. I have said through him what I wanted to say to others. I thank him heartily for allowing me to break this bark over his head. I may be able some time to return the favor.

GILDEROY.

LOUISVILLE LETTER.

A gentleman who has known Louisville Methodism for many years stated recently that our church had never been in so good a condition in this city as at present, and that it was never so active and aggressive. With thirteen churches, 4 331 members, nine parsonages, including the district parsonage, and plans on foot for building three other parsonages, it will be seen that we are in good condition and ready for a forward movement. The Rev. George Needham, our city missionary, is carrying on work at three points where the nucleus is being formed for additional churches, and a suburban church at Beechmont has also been built this year, which will be another pastoral charge next year. Almost every church in the city is inaugurating some new enterprise, and the outlook is exceedingly hopeful. The new Broadway Church, which will be our handsomest building, will soon be ready for dedication, and Fourth Avenue also hopes soon to erect a new and handsome building. Main Street is raising a building fund, and expects to project a new enterprise next year. At Walnut Street, which is the mother church and the successor of the old Fourth Street Church, where Southern Methodism was organized in 1845, we are making satisfactory progress, and have every reason for encouragement.

We have recently had a meeting in our church conducted by Mr. Charles T. Crittenton, the New York evangelist and founder of the Florence Crittenton missions, which resulted in great good. Mr. Crittenton is a very remarkable man, and though a multi-millionaire, he devotes all his time and income to evangelistic and rescue mission work. There are now three thousand rescued girls in the fifty-two homes he has established all over the country, and he is constantly adding to the number of these homes.

Louisville is quite a theological center, having three theological seminaries, one being a colored Baptist institution. The largest and most widely known of these institutions is the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, which has a plant representing in buildings and endowment $820 000. For the second time in its history the number of students has reached three hundred, which event the faculty celebrated last week by a banquet. Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, the president, is a bone of contention among the Baptists throughout the entire South, his book on "A Question of Baptist History" having stirred up very great opposition. A strong and determined effort has been made to remove him, and the question will come up again at the convention which meets next month at Norfolk, Va. It is said that two thirds of the delegates are opposed to him, but "He is thrice armed who hath his quarrel just," and there is no question about the correctness of Dr. Whitsitt's position. Some years ago I read Dr. Henry Dexter's little book, in which he made the same statements that are vouched for by Dr. Whitsitt regarding the history of immersion, and unquestionably all the records prove that that mode of baptism was not used until after the middle of the seventeenth century.

The Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary is a comparatively new institution, having only been in existence since 1893. It has an enrollment of about fifty students, and is under the control of the Synods of Kentucky and Missouri. The Presbyterians have considerable strength in Louisville, and several of their churches are among the handsomest in the city.

The matter of all-absorbing interest among Southern Methodists everywhere is, of course, the approaching General Conference. The personnel of the body indicates that its action will be wise and conservative, and I have no doubt but that whatever it does will be for the best interests of our Zion. The arrangements made for selling seats in the building where the sessions are to be held, and for lectures to meet the expenses, seem to me very unfortunate, and I do not wonder that unfavorable comments have been made. But we have no church in Baltimore that could accommodate the Conference, and it is probable that this is the best that could be done.

It is not necessary for me to tell you how much I enjoy the visits of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. I have read it from my boyhood, and, with the exception of two or three years, have received it during all my ministry. Its familiar face calls up many memories of the past, and reminds me how rapidly the years are going by. May it accomplish even more in the future than it has in the past, and may its influence and power for good be constantly increased!

HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

BY PROF. J. W. BEESON,

President East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I have been asked to prepare a paper on the higher education of our girls. In the beginning I wish to say that no subject could have been assigned to me that would have come nearer to my heart. It is one that I have been watching with no little interest during the past twelve years of my experience in college work. When we look back over the history of the world we find woman down trodden, oppressed, illiterate, and with little or no opportunities of mental development. It is only within the last century that she has been allowed many privileges in the way of education. Then, in the face of centuries of darkness and oppression, she is taunted for her ignorance and mental inferiority. When she was first permitted to enter school it was not thought possible for her to advance beyond the primary or secondary grades. It is only within the last half century that she has been permitted even a collegiate education, and that nothing to compare with that of her brothers. It was thought that she was incapable of receiving this higher education. All literature, even down to these latter days, is filled with this idea of woman's inferiority. Dr. Wayland, in his "Moral Science," thinks it necessary to make the following remarkable statement: "Let it be remembered that a female, like us, is a moral and accountable being, hastening to the bar of God." Yet this ridiculous statement is in a text-book still used in some of our female colleges in this enlightened age. The greatest poet of this century, the beloved Tennyson, says:

"Man for the field and woman for the hearth,
Man for the sword and for the needle she,
Man with the head and woman with the heart,
Man to command and woman with the obey,
All else confusion."

John Ruskin says: "A woman in any rank of life ought to know whatever her husband is likely to know, but to know it in a different way. His command of it should be fundamental and progressive; hers general and accomplished for daily and helpful use. Speaking broadly, a man ought to know any language he learns thoroughly, while a woman ought to know the same language or science only so far as may enable her to sympathize in her husband's pleasures and in those of his friends." Unfortunately, this is the idea that is prevalent among women themselves, thus causing them to underrate the importance of a thorough preparation for their life's work. This is one of the greatest enemies to the higher education of women to-day. The majority of them are unable to see its importance. The average young lady has an idea that a college for young ladies is a place where she is to go to learn a little French and Latin, get a smattering of mathematics, learn to thrum a few pieces on a piano or guitar, and daub a few miserable pictures on canvass to be polished over by the teacher. She lays more stress upon learning how to get in and out of a carriage, how to bow herself out of a room without turning her back upon the guests, exactly at what angle the head should be turned in making a bow, than she does upon a thorough development of the wonderful mind and soul with which she has been endowed.

This is especially true of the majority of our people in the South. They do not want a thorough education for their girls. They want a little smattering of learning, a diploma, then a place in fashionable society. They are unwilling for their daughters to remain in college long enough and work hard enough to acquire the profound mental training that is required at our colleges for young men.

But the saddest part of it is, that many of our female colleges are either possessed of the same ideas, or they are lowering their curricula to suit the whims of giddy girls and foolish mothers. It is distressing to see the superficial and miserably low grade of work that is done at some of our most popular female colleges.

In a certain town in Alabama two young ladies, classmates, equally bright, went off to college the same year. One entered a well-known flourishing female college and graduated two years later. The other entered a school in an adjoining State, and has continuously and studiously pursued her course, advancing one class each year for four years. The first school "finished" its pupils three years before the other, and yet this is one of the largest and most popular female colleges in that State.

Some years ago a daughter of a prominent man in Alabama was in the Freshman class in a certain female college, and not being very studious, she failed in some of her studies. The progress was not quite fast enough for the father (or more likely the mother), as they wanted to push their daughter out into society; so they sent her off to a popular "finishing school" in an adjoining State. The next year she returned with her diploma and a number of medals, and that from one of the most widely known and popular young ladies' seminaries in the South, while her classmates, who surpassed her the year before, had three more years in the less noted, but more thorough institution in Alabama.

No wonder that the minds of our women are dwarfed, and they are unable to cope with men, when so many female colleges do such superficial work. I hold that woman is entitled to as high and as thorough an education as man, and that it is her duty to equip herself for life's battles as thoroughly as circumstances will permit. I take this position for three reasons: First, because she is capable of receiving a higher education; second, because of the intrinsic fitness, or of her personal rights; and, last, because of her relation to the rising generation.

HELEN GOULD AND HER GOOD WORKS.

The train stopped at Irvington on the Hudson, and a score of children got off. They were all crippled. Some hobbled on crutches. One or two were hunchbacked. Four young women accompanied them, like shepherdesses. Four stages were waiting. Eventually these drove away, each with a flock of crippled lambs and a shepherdess.

That was Helen Gould's house party on the way to Lyndhurst, her home. While those children of the tenements were her guests, they were to her as the children of her own brother. She romped with the boys—the newsboys and bootblacks.

That is Helen Gould's life. Also, it is the way she spends her money. Her annual income amounts to $1,000,000—or nearly $3 000 a day. Of this the smallest sum is spent on Helen Gould's clothes. The largest part is given secretly to the poor and the struggling. To her most intimate friends she often alludes to her fortune as "my father's money."

Miss Gould's maxim is: "Do good unselfishly." The love of crippled children or the gratitude of the bedridden is more to her than brass band and newspaper headlines. Society looks at Helen Gould asquint. She does not believe in visiting lists or in afternoon teas. She declines to become a patroness of social functions; will not attend dinners, receptions, operas, or balls. Neither will she join in the dress parade at Newport, the hounds at Hempstead, or the social tide at Hamburg or Nice. Nor has she use for yachts, fast horses, rare jewels, or astonishing toilets. She leads a most exclusive life—that is, she excludes fashionable society.

To her society women are all alike: like clothes-pins. She prefers individualism. She engages in charity as in business, teaches Sunday-school, and is a Christian woman, yet she is not to be considered as one of charity's lay sisters.

She helped very materially to build the University of New York, by the way, and it was in the woman's law class of that democratic university that she obtained her knowledge of things legal. Long before her father's death she knew she would one day control great wealth. So, after leaving Dr. Gardner's school on Fifth avenue, where she received her early education, she entered the university and took the regular law course with the other young women. To avoid publicity, she did not graduate, but she left with a clear idea of what is meant by law.

She conducts her charitable enterprises as the Goulds conduct business, conservatively and in person, and not through lawyers or agents. She distributes personally as much money as the Charity Organization Society. The Fresh-Air Farm and Cripples' Home, which she established at Woody Crest, near her own Lyndhurst, is an example to all benevolent societies. There, during the Spring and Summer, she feeds, clothes, shelters and helps educate hundreds of children. Each company of youngsters stays two weeks, and, like soldiers at the state camp, the outgoing leaves the camp in perfect condition for the incoming. The children are made to feel that they are the guests of Helen Gould, and not objects of charity. And the farm, like all her benevolent work, is conducted on a business basis and without red tape.

Her assistants are her chosen friends, young women who are not society belles, but workers. She prefers tailor-made gowns because they are plain. But she is not a patron of fashionable tailors or Fifth avenue milliners. Those who make her gowns and her hats are her friends. Though Miss Gould works hard from morning till night, she yet needs several secretaries. These, too, are her friends. Thus in various ways she gives employment to a regiment of teachers, typewriters, seamstresses, milliners and nurses.

Her age is now about twenty-seven, and she has been all her life preparing for her present work. While her father lived she devoted herself to him, was his friend and companion. In her Jay Gould caught a glimpse of what it really meant to live. Then he died sad-hearted. None knew and loved Jay Gould as did the daughter who drove him to the station every morning; who, when she could, hid the newspapers from him; who would have shielded him from the world's contumely. Since his death the daughter has built to his memory a gray stone church, with beautiful windows, in a green field near her father's birthplace in Rockland county. And when she is weary she goes there and kneels and bows her head.

It seems as if Helen Gould were devoting her life to doing those things which her father left undone. The daughter may eventually spread the sunshine over the shadows cast by the father's image. Philosophers who say Jay Gould evaded the law of reciprocity by giving back nothing to the world from which he took so much overlook Helen Gould.—John Willets, in The Inland.

HELP THAT COMES TOO LATE

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

'Tis a wearisome world, this world of ours,
With its tangles small and great,
Its weeds that smother the Spring flowers,
And its hapless strifes with fate.
And the darkest day of its desolate days
Sees the help that comes too late.

Ah! woe for the word that is never said
Till the ear is too deaf to hear,
And woe for the lack to the fainting head
Of the ringing shout of cheer.
Ah! woe to the laggard feet that tread
In the mournful wake of the bier
What loseth help when the heart is numb!
What loseth a broken spar
Of love thrown out when the lips are dumb
And life's bark driftelh far.
Ah! far and fast from the alien past,
Over the moaning bar!
A pitiful thing the gift to day
That is dross and nothing worth,
Though if it had come but yesterday,
It had brimmed with sweet the earth
A fading rose in a death-cold hand,
That perished in want and death.
Who fain would help in this world of ours,
Where sorrowful steps must fall,
Bring help in time to the waning powers,
Ere the bier is spread with the pall,
Nor send reserves when the flags are furled,
And the dead beyond your call.

For battling most in this weary world,
With its tangles small and great,
Its lonesome nights and its weary days,
And its struggles forlorn with fate,
Is that bitterest grief, too deep for tears,
Of the help that comes too late.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE MINISTERIAL RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

ATTENTION BRETHREN!

MR. EDITOR: I desire, through the Conference organ, to call attention to this much neglected, but worthy institution. The manner in which the majority of our Conference look at it indicates a failure to appreciate its practical beneficence. By the courtesy of our efficient and enthusiastic secretary, Rev. T. B Clifford, I have the roll before me showing the names of those who have allowed their dues to go delinquent, as well as the punctual list. From this source we see that only sixty-six of our preachers are members of the association out of a Conference roll of 159. This is much under half of those most concerned, and at $5 per member, pro rata fee, only means to the widow and orphans of any who is next to fall $325, allowing one off for the deceased. With the whole working force, 159, enlisted it would insure a death benefit of $790, which is a sufficient sum to settle any ordinary family and place the widowed mother in position to pilot her course past many a threatening financial maelstrom, possibly removing entirely the necessity for an appropriation to that family from the Conference Claimants' Fund. This is certainly worthy the prayerful co operation of every "brother beloved."

Do you say, "I have no need to become a member, as my wife is sufficiently provided for already"? Well, brother, that's the greater reason why you should join. You are able to assist whenever called upon, and that is no small factor in a member's greatest usefulness. And, then, I don't think it would hurt any of the wives of our preachers to receive the benefit on the death of her husband in ready money. It would bind her and the surviving comrades together in mutual sympathy and Christian love.

Do you say, "Well, I will contribute to the relief of the bereaved widows and orphans of the Conference without joining the association"? How are we to know that, and how much you will contribute, unless you identify yourself with the recognized, organized medium through which this is to be done? What joy would come to the lives of our parsonage home keepers if they could feel that their husbands, under God, were providing against any probable future distress! Are you not willing to notify them ahead that you intend to do an equal part, and thus encourage them by the way?

Again: I think if the preachers would come fully to the front, many of our wealthy laymen would joyfully enter the good work, not expecting to share the material benefit except indirectly as the cause is helped thereby, but more for the love they bear to the noble women who forsake delightful homes to help bear the message of love to the world. By this means the benefit ought to be more than fifty per cent. additional.

Brethren, let us make this a specialty in the future. There should be a session of the association before the Conference assembled, that its claims be duly set forth.

Respectfully submitted,

W. L. ANDERSON.

"A COLLEGE EDUCATION UNDER CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES FOR OUR GIRLS."

Dr. Featherstun's articles on this subject are interesting reading, and are very gratifying to the friends of higher education for our girls. There is nothing that should appeal more strongly or urgently to the conscience of our church than such a condition in the education of our girls as is vigorously exposed in these articles; and yet this higher education so earnestly insisted upon by Dr. Featherstun is left to a few consecrated men who are willing to sacrifice themselves and their means to do for our girls that which the combined effort and wealth of the church is doing for our boys.

But my real purpose is to correct an error in Dr. Featherstun's general deductions, and to show that Whitworth College is an exception to "sham in female education," and does offer "a college education for our girls." This means that "higher mathematics" is thoroughly taught. The character of the work done in this department is better understood when it is known that we send out girls this year who have completed in a very satisfactory manner the following books: College Algebra, Plain and Solid Geometry, including conic sections and unsolved problems; Plain and Spherical Trigonometry, and Surveying; Analytic Geometry, including chapters on the loci and their equations, the straight lines, the circle, different systems of co-ordinates, the parabola, ellipse, hyperbole, loci of the second order, and higher plane curve, and Calculus.

Seventy-two of the girls are taking our Latin course, which includes, after first year's Latin: Via Latina, with grammar and exercises; Cæsar, grammar, weekly exercises—English into Latin; Cicero, orations and letters, grammar for recitation and reference and weekly exercises; Virgil, with same as Cicero; Livy and Horace, with grammar recited and used as reference, and study of metre. Greek and the Romance languages fully sustain the character of work done in Latin.

In English, Whitworth College stands at the front with other first-class colleges. We have in the Freshman year Meikeljohn's English Language (four parts), special drills on analysis of words and sentences, paraphrasing, scansion, etc. The pupils read, study, and are examined upon American authors mainly; supplementary classics: "The Task," Whittier's "Songs of Labor and Other Poems;" selections from Irving, Burke's speeches, Evangeline, Thanatopsis. In the Sophomore class Genung's Rhetoric and Rhetorical Analysis, study of some of the masterpieces of the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; essay work in construction and analytical composition; supplementary classics: Deserted Village, Vicar of Wakefield, Poe's Poetry, L'Allegro, King Lear, Ancient Mariner, Vision of Sir Launfal, Burke's Reflections on French Revolution. Three-fourths of the Junior year is devoted to literary work. The remainder of the time is put on "Classic Myths," critical reading, discussion in class, and examination upon In Memoriam, Jew of Matta, Sohrab and Rustum, Sesame and Lillies, three plays from Shakespeare, Macaulay's essay on Milton, Silas Marner, Criticism. The Senior class studies Cook's First Book in Old English, Sweet's First Middle English Primer, Chaucer, and selections from the best authors. In addition two compositions per month are required throughout the four years.

The Departments of Sciences and History are doing thorough work, and courses high. Chemistry runs through one and two years, the second year including Organic Chemistry. In the course of physics, besides one year of required work in the Preparatory Department, the Junior class, without respect to degree, has spent the entire session in the study of heat, sound, light, and electricity, having solved two hundred and eighty-two problems on these topics.

But I have already written enough without going into details on history, zoology, botany, geology, mental and moral philosophy, etc., to show the character of the work done and the justice of our claim to recognition as a first-class college for girls.

In view of these facts, therefore, even the casual reader can see that Dr. Featherstun is mistaken in his estimate of the kind of work done at Whitworth College; and if he desires to inform himself as to the character of work that is being done in the class-room for the higher education of our girls, we extend to him, or any one else who may wish information on this point, an invitation to come to Whitworth at any time and be convinced beyond possible mistake that our college is doing the identical work that he claims a college should do for our girls.

I can not conclude without calling attention to the big-hearted, unselfish man who is doing such a noble work. Bro. Chambers deserves the hearty and substantial support of our church for the stand he has taken and so heroically maintained for the higher education of the young women of our church. Who will help him put the education of our girls on an equal footing with our boys? Who will be the first to contribute to the endowment of Whitworth College?

CHAS. W. CRISLER.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers and My Friends of the North Mississippi Conference:

I wish, through the columns of this paper, to convey to you my appreciation for the many kind expressions of sympathy received from you since the ascension of my precious husband. Many have remembered me, and offered comfort and consolation, and helped me bear my burden of sorrow. The preachers and people of the Corinth district have been faithful to me, and especially thoughtful of me in my affliction. My heart goes out in love to you all. I pray God's richest blessings and benedictions upon you. God's grace has been sufficient. I have tested his promises, and found them true and steadfast. Continue to pray for me.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

(Written for the P. and H. M. Convention at Bay St. Louis.)

This title is used in a restricted sense. We can not speak of the opportunity of woman in general, for, radiating from the home, this now includes almost every circle of human effort and influence. The opportunity of woman in the church, though more appropriate, would still be too broad a subject for discussion. By our title, then, we mean the enlarging opportunity of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. We can not fully gauge its growth without a brief look into its past history.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission movement had its first expression from the heart of the Shunamite woman, when she built the little chamber on the wall for the prophet Elisha. It is represented in the days of our blessed Master by Mary and Martha, and the "other women" who ministered unto him; in apostolic ages by Dorcas, Lydia, Phebe, Priscilla, and a host of noble women who labored with their brethren in the gospel, and distributed unto the necessities of the saints. These all had their worthy successors as the centuries rolled on, but we pause in the early days of Methodism at the name of Selina Shirley, Countess of Huntington. This "devout and honorable woman" was the type and prophecy of the womanhood of the present, embodying in her wonderful personality the broad views and noble aims which in our own century and our own beloved church have blossomed into the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Beauty, talents, rank and wealth were laid at the feet of her Lord. Her home mission work was widely extended. She traveled over the kingdom with her chaplains, giving the gospel to the poor. Many chapels were erected by her, and she founded Trevecca College for the education of young ministers. She parted with her jewels, aristocratic equipage, and liveried servants, that she might have the more to bestow upon others. During her lifetime she gave more than half a million dollars to Christ. At her death what remained from her benefactions was left to carry them on. With her dying breath she uttered these words: "My work is done. I have nothing to do now but go to my Father." May we who have taken up her work labor as faithfully, and when we have done all we can, as long as we can, feel that there is "nothing to do but go to our Father!"

Lady Huntington is a striking illustration of what can be accomplished by one consecrated individual possessed of organizing ability. After the organizer develops, the organization is sure to follow in the fullness of times. Our century is often called the age of organization. Especially is this true in woman's realm. Some time within its early decades the Ladies' Aid Societies of our church arose. These met the demands of the period which gave them birth, and used well its opportunities.

In the pioneer days of Methodism in this country the preacher had no home provided for him, and if he ever had the audacity (which he often had) to marry on an income of fifty or a hundred dollars a year, location soon became a necessity. No wonder that our good bachelor-Bishop, Francis Asbury, complained that "the devil and the women were getting all his preachers."

After the road had been blazed out, with the coming on of better days, stately churches began to succeed the old log meeting-house, and then followed the building of the parsonage.

Not a great while before the organization of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society we spent four years in one of the oldest parsonages west of the Alleghany Mountains. I was a member of its aid society, probably, like the parsonage, the oldest in the State. They called themselves by the alliterative title of the "Fayette Female Financial Society," which we shortened into "Female Financials." Many of our members lived in the country. Once a quarter they held their meeting at the parsonage, spending the day with the preacher and his family. This was always a great occasion with the preacher's children (all at that time very youthful), for each female financial came laden with meats, pies, cakes, fruit and goodies innumerable. The president of our society was good Sister Armstrong, one of God's saints, who always dwelt in Beulah land, and breathed the bracing atmosphere of the heights; a woman who could see the rainbow hues of heaven through the tears of this world's sorrow, and praise God in the furnace and at the open grave. She knew how to speak and pray and work for Christ. She made a faithful president; wise and liberal in devising for the comfort of the parsonage home. The other members were worthy of their leader. "Fond memory brings the light of other days around me" in the many little acts of kindness and of love which flowed in such a steady stream into our home and hearts.

VALUABLE CULLINGS.

Osborne said: "Show me a man on fire with the missionary spirit, and I will show you one who thoroughly and devoutly believes in Jesus Christ. Show me one who sneers and jests at foreign missions, and I will show you one who, in spite of all his ritual precision and dogmatic soundness and orthodoxy, no more believes in Jesus Christ than does the veriest pagan suckled in a creed outworn."

These strong, true words should arrest the thought of those women who think, if they meet all demands of home and church, nothing more is required; that no one can or should doubt their faith in Christ. Things are wrong at home; Christ is blasphemed, wickedness abounds, self reigns, and church members walk unworthily, but in heathen lands Christ is not known, no regard is there for human suffering, no horror awakened at human bloodshed, no veracity, no faithfulness, only a dreary waste of helplessness and hopelessness. If this were not true, as some aver, the great commission, "Go unto all the world," is written in the blood of Jesus, and enforced by his glorious resurrection and ascension. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." If we believe him, we are glad to obey him.—T., in Nashville Christian Advocate.

If the women do not train the children in the work of foreign missions, pastors will find congregations after awhile destitute of all Christian activity. Our church needs the strong aid of the pastor in its woman's work more now than ever. The women are not asleep, and if the formation of woman's clubs on every hand indicate anything, they show that if women ever slept, they are now awake. The church needs them much, and no energetic, well-informed pastor who noted the signs of the times will discourage them in Christ's work, especially in the training of the young for special service.

The Woman's Board of the M. E Church appropriated $313,837.80 last year to support and extend its foreign work; our Board appropriated $92,000. Our Board is younger than theirs, but we could do more than we do. Their Epworth Leagues and other church organizations are as numerous and active as those in our church, but they do not injure their foreign work. The foreign work is dear to their hearts, and they plan, collect, train the children, send out missionaries, extend the work, nothing daunted, by the multiplication of societies, or any other difficulties in the way. How the scene brightens as one turns from the discouraging ories at home to the glad notes from the cheerful workers in the field! Christ is there; he is pleased; they are happy because they realize it.—Mrs. Trueheart, Review of Missions.

STUDENTS' VOLUNTEER CONVENTION.

Of this marvelous gathering, where representatives of every land and race met on a common platform—devotion to Christ and purpose to extend his kingdom—Mrs. Trueheart, representative of our Woman's Board, and Miss Gibson, from overflowing hearts, wrote most favorably. Wise means are being used: traveling secretaries, one woman for woman's colleges, five men to the theological, professional, and other institutions. Another means is a systematic study of missions.

The Student Volunteer, the organ of the movement, is to cultivate and guide the movement; but, above all, and most emphasized, is the 'morning watch,' which each volunteer pledges himself to observe; so that for one-half hour, or longer, every morning thousands of young men and women are seeking to know more of God's Word, and holding direct communion with God that the endowment of power may be theirs. It is a cause of rejoicing to think that in over eight hundred institutions of learning in the United States and Canada many students are keeping the 'morning watch,' and with them in spirit, over many lands, fellow-volunteers are at the seat of mercy, also pleading with God for strength and wisdom in the extension of his kingdom. The watchword, the 'evangelization of the world in this generation,' is inspiring. It means much when one prays definitely and with faith. Surely God is able and God is willing to grant an answer to prayers offered by his servants for bringing to pass the fulfillment of his own commands. The past thirty-three years have witnessed mighty changes in the churches on the subject of missions, and the next thirty three may see the consummation of the watchword of the movement. Why not?"—Mrs. Trueheart, Review of Missions.

Would it not be well for our auxiliaries to observe this "morning watch" some part of every day, or lengthen our "twilight hour" prayer service, that we may have that quickening, spiritual uplift which will ultimate in that fullness of life that will make its impress upon all of our work for the Master?

A SURE REMEDY FOR A BAD MALADY.

Since it is our inabilities that irritate us, the part of wisdom would seem to be, if we wish to avoid irritation, to lessen or destroy inability. Easily said, but with difficulty done. Yes, but it can be done, provided one goes the right way to work and takes the right view of affairs. There are those who do everything they desire, nor are they put out by having their wills crossed as to times and methods. It is the limitation of desire and the subordination of will that explains the paradox. Instead of demanding that God should do everything that they wish and according to their plan, they fall in with his plan and count his wishes to be best. It is a simple solution of the problem, and it works admirably in practice. Wherever this is put into operation irritation disappears and calmness ensues. How can one be fretted if he accepts promptly and heartily whatever the Lord appoints, and considers even the smallest things of life to be such appointments? We commend the prescription (which is not new) to those—a vast multitude—who are troubled with the disease.—Zion's Herald.

LIVING IN HOPE.

Let us learn from the communion of saints to live in hope. Those who are now at rest were once like ourselves. They were once weak, faulty, sinful; they had their burdens and hindrances, their slumbering and weariness, their failures and their falls. But now they have overcome. Their life was once homely and commonplace. Their day ran out as ours. Morning and noon and night came and went to them as to us. Their life too was as lonely and sad as yours. Little fretful circumstances and frequent disturbing changes wasted away their hours as yours. There is nothing in your life that was not in theirs; there was nothing in theirs but may be also in your own. They have overcome, each one, and one by one; each in his turn, when the day came, and God called him to the trial. And so shall you likewise.—H. E. Manning.

There are men who oppose the introduction of the Bible into the public schools because it is a book number. They would not have the minds of the children saturated with antiquated thought and their style affected by antiquated modes of expression! Antiquated, indeed. Ruskin says: "To my daily knowledge of the Bible I owe the best part of my taste in literature, and the most precious, and, on the whole, the only essential part of my education." Is Ruskin's style antiquated? Huxley says: "If a man can not get literary culture of the highest kind out of his Bible, and Chaucer, and Shakespeare, and Milton and Hobbes, and Bishop Berkeley, to mention only a few of our illustrious writers—I say, if he can not get it out of these writers, he can not get it out of anything." Does Huxley write like a musty old father of the middle ages?

We may not move through the dark continent of Africa, a living sunburst of God's truth and glory, as did Livingstone. We may not be asked to lie in a prison, as did Judson, to testify that we desire God's will to be done by us and in us. But we have some money to give, some heart-promptings to compassion, some insight to see where aid is needed, some ability to pray. Are these all and ever at the disposal of the Master?—Sunday-School Times.

There is such a thing as putting ourselves in the way of God's overflowing love, and letting it beat upon us till the response of love to him comes, not by struggle, not even by deliberation, but by necessity, as the echo comes when the sound strikes the rock.—Phillips Brooks.

I have no respect for that self-boasting charity which neglects all objects of commiseration near and around it, but goes to the end of the earth in search of misery, for the purpose of talking about it.—George Mason.

Never give up, but ever to keep up and to keep at it, is the duty and the test of heroism in times that are hard and in hours that are dark.—H. Clay Trumbull.

We should enjoy more peace if we did not busy ourselves with the words and deeds of other men which appertain not to our charge.—Jeremy Taylor.

Goodness has ever been a stronger guard than valor. It is the surest policy always to have peace with God.—Bishop Hall.

More helpful than all wisdom is one draught of simple human pity that will not forsake us.—George Eliot.

WASTE OF LIFE.

Have you ever thought of the number of lives which appear to be without any aim that is worth living for? Their horizon is narrowed to the pettiest circle of interest: things control them instead of their controlling things; they never seem to ask why they exist, or what they intend to make of it all: they lack the power of individual conviction. How enormous is the waste of power in society! Almost limitless possibilities of noble living and noble doing are involved in every unit which goes to make up the crowd, and the crowd moves on composed of such people, who are swept on en masse by force of circumstances, and as much without determined personal efforts as leaves whirled along on the stream. There is no endeavor to strike off some beaten path and to follow some worthy ideal. It is not by the vegetable world alone that the puzzling question is suggested why

> Out of fifty seeds
> God often brings but one to bear.

It is far more fearfully true of the seeds of human life and character. Of fifty, nay, of a thousand lives, how is it that scarcely one seems to bear any fruit that is fit to be called the purpose of its being? For the possibilities implied in humanity, however commonplace the surroundings, are almost measureless. We can not anticipate the power which any man or woman may exercise for good, if there is but the heart to love and live in earnest.

Most persons assume that there is no use in their attempting to be what they term "different from other people," and accept the conventional as if it were a necessity. When young they had, perhaps, dreamed dreams of a worthier future. When their enthusiasm caught fire as they read the lives of the great and good, they then hoped for some worthy task. The girl then pictured something better than years frittered away in the fulfillment of those absorbing "nothings" which are termed the duties of society. The young man imagined a higher career than to be chained to the wheels of mammon, and had the ambition to stamp some noble characteristics even on his common toil. But as time went on, and tyrant custom exercised its sway, all these ideals vanished—or, perhaps, only partially vanished—for evermore they may rise in memory, and, like the ghost of Banquo, make what the world calls success appear a mere tragedy.

If we could but examine deeply enough, I believe we should be surprised at the amount of unhappiness which is the doom of those the world calls prosperous, but whose lives, according to the best standard, have been largely wasted lives. The pessimism which is the curse of many sections of society is the result of this loss of faith in every ideal. And, without professing pessimism, there are thousands who in the midst of luxury pine for something better than the monotony of comfort to which their lot in life has assigned them. Their best aspirations are not satisfied. They feel that their lives are being wasted, and they long for some work which would afford worthy aims and deepen their human interests. At present they bitterly confess to themselves that they are of no earthly use in the world. Even when they are busiest, there are men who painfully feel that their work has nothing noble in it; it is all for themselves; and they know also that the drudgery of business is absorbing the kindlier dews of the heart. They are becoming the slaves, instead of the masters, of their increasing fortunes.

Many excuse themselves on the ground of circumstance. According to them, it is by the force of circumstances, or by some native greatness, that others have struck out a path that has led to nobler victories than material success; but they say that their circumstances are so different that nothing personal can be expected from them. And yet it requires but slight knowledge of the facts of life to learn that some of the greatest triumphs in the war of goodness and love over sin and misery have been won by those whose circumstances were all against their achievement. We could give instances from all classes, from the rank of the wage earner to that of the busy merchant and the nobleman, and were we to place these fruitful lives side by side with those which we term wasted existences, we could see how inexcusable they are. The "idle and unprofitable servant" can not but stand speechless as he listens to what the faithful have been able to make of the great talent of life which God has intrusted to all. It is too terrible to calculate the mass of useless, featureless lives which make up the bulk of so-called Christian society, and to consider the possibilities that are lost. How beautiful would this world be made if all the power which is now wasted was turned to effective employment in the kingdom of God!—Good Words.

THE AIR THE CHRISTIAN BREATHES.

A gentleman who was camping out in the Rocky Mountains, beside a slender stream, noticed one day that when he took a drink and threw the water remaining in his cup into the stream, an ousel instantly flew up as if to catch the drops. He at once became curious to know if that were really its object, and on throwing more water, was delighted to see that every time he did so the bird flew up into the falling shower, evidently enjoying the sport and the sprinkle on its plumage.

It seems to me that this little mountain bird is a beautiful illustration of the way the sincere Christian, who enters heartily into the purposes of Christ in trying to please God and help men and women to good lives, comes to find the very air he loves to breathe in service for and with the Savior. Of course, the man or woman whose heart's affections are set upon worldly things, and who breathes an atmosphere of greed or gossip, can not understand the happiness of the Christian, any more than a mocking bluejay or a chattering magpie can understand the water-ousel's fondness for the roar of the waterfall.

The little ousel is able to sing its sweet song all the year round, cheerful when the blizzards of December chill other birds and send them shivering to some warmer clime, or when the dusty heat of the Summer-time parches to silence other throats, as well as in the most brilliant and blossoming days of the Spring. So the man or woman, in youth or age, who rejoices in fellowship with Christ, in faith and service, can sing all the year round. The assurance of God's care sends rays of light through the darkest cloud, and no matter how lowering the threatenings of trouble, the buoyant soul will sing its cheerful song of confiding trust.—Louis A. Banks, D. D.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. T. A. Luster writes: "West Lake and Jackson Street (Lake Charles) are moving on well. Congregations good, and interest increasing in all directions, especially in Sunday-school work."

Rev. J. A. Bowen writes under date of April 13: "The Rev. H. T. Gaines, pastor of Senatobia station, is conducting a great revival in his charge. This is the second week. Already there have been many bright conversions at the altar. The church is greatly revived. Bro. Gaines is in great favor with all his people. We are glad to be with him in this glorious meeting."

Rev. Jas. M. Martin, P. C., Delhi, La., April 11, 1898: "Sunday was a good day for us here in Delhi. Our church was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the music appropriate. My theme at 11 A. M., of course, was the Resurrection of our Lord. There was a large congregation present. One accession to the church. The interest in church work in my charge is increasing. Our Sunday-school is doing well, and our congregation large and attentive."

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, Enpora, Miss., April 8, 1898: "We are moving forward well on the Enpora and Maben charge. We are painting the parsonage, and will soon have the church at Maben ready for dedication. The prospects are good for a revival. I spent one week with Bro. Kendall and the good people of Sardis. It was a great pleasure to me to see how the pastor and the church at Sardis love each other. Bro. Kendall is among his old friends. Many of them he received into the church, and some of these before the war. They not only visited the parsonage, but they came with tokens of love."

Rev. R. A. Meek, Tupelo, Miss., writes: "We have lately closed a most interesting meeting here. It began with two masterly sermons by that prince of pulpit orators, Dr. S. A. Steel. If there is anyone in the connection who can surpass him, it has not been our good fortune to hear him. Bro. T. W. Lewis, of Grenada, came to us on Monday, the twenty-first ultimo, and preached twice a day for a week. I do not need to say that he gave us an admirable series of sermons. They were clear, scriptural, powerful, and struck home to the hearts of the people. The interest was deepening and widening, and every indication pointed to a sweeping revival, when we were forced to close the meeting by an outbreak of small-pox in the town. As it was, we had eight or ten conversions, and eight additions to our church. Many church members and professed Christians were also revived and influenced to enlist more heartily in the Master's service. Last Sunday was an unusual Sabbath with us. The health authorities had forbidden public gatherings of every sort; so that we had no preaching or Sunday-schools in the town. Not a church bell was rung. The people remained indoors, and our streets presented quite a lonely appearance. The small-pox here so far is confined to the negroes, and, with the strict sanitary regulations now in force, we think an epidemic is impossible. The outlook for our new church enterprise is most encouraging. Opposition has about ceased, and we hope soon to project an $8,000 building. One to cost less than that would be inadequate to our needs."

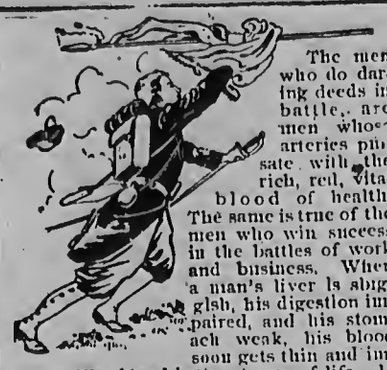
Rev. J. H. Foreman, Raleigh, Miss., April 8, 1898: "I reached this work Jan. 11, and found a kind and hospitable people who gave me a hearty welcome to their homes, and found a new parsonage going up. We had to rent a house for about three weeks, after which we moved into our new house, the parsonage. It is now almost completed. When completed it will be valued at $500. It has five rooms, hall between, gallery in front, beautiful front view, and is tolerably well furnished. Many thanks to the preachers of the Forest district for a brand new looking stove. We have had no special storm, yet there has been almost a constant income of good things to the preacher and his family in the way of meat and lard and corn, etc. Many thanks to the people who have been so careful to look after our comfort. We have a membership of 350, large-hearted and kind. Our first Quarterly Conference is a thing of the past, which was held last Saturday and Sunday, April 2, 3. Our beloved presiding elder, full of smiles and as cheerful as ever, was in the chair, and conducted the business of Quarterly Conference with skill and to the delight of all present, and preached three sermons very much enjoyed by all who heard them. The stewards fixed the assessment for preacher in charge—$300, and their report for the first quarter was $112. I have the salvation of this people at heart. I have had a very good time the first quarter and hope to improve every quarter. Dear brethren, pray for me, that I may be an humble instrument in God's hand in saving many, many, many precious souls this year. We are happy on the way, trusting in the Lord for the increase."

HATTIESBURG STATION.

I was assigned to this charge last December, one year past. We have entered upon this, our second year, with bright prospects for advancement on all lines of religious work. Our Sunday-school is increasing in numbers and interest under the earnest and faithful leadership of Bro. R. A. Magruder. He is always at his post on time every Sabbath. His teachers are all members of our church, and they have been converted. Our prayer meeting attendance is increasing. Regular services are well attended, and from all indications now we feel hopeful that we shall soon have overflowing audiences as we did prior to the yellow-fever scare last year. We have taken 100 persons into our church since we came here, and nearly all of our members claim to have been changed in heart from sin to righteousness. Our church is the strongest church in this city, numerically, financially and spiritually. If our present church-building was not nearly new, and tearing it down would not incur too great a loss, we should bestir ourselves for a large commodious brick building at once for the next session of our Conference; but as things now stand, we shall likely use our frame building until the increasement of our membership and audiences demand a larger church.

Our church here is now assessed beyond any other charge in our district. It is now considered the strongest charge in our district, although it is among the youngest charges. Pray for us to the will of our Lord in all things.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.



The men who do daring deeds in battle, are men whose arteries pulsate with the rich, red, vital blood of health. The same is true of the men who win success in the battles of work and business. When a man's liver is sluggish, his digestion impaired, and his stomach weak, his blood soon gets thin and impure. The blood is the stream of life. If it is impure every vital organ in the body is improperly nourished and becomes weak and diseased and fails to perform its proper functions in the economy of life. The victim suffers from loss of appetite and sleep, wind, pain, fulness and swelling of the stomach after meals, bad taste in the mouth, foul breath, imaginary lump of food in the throat, headaches, giddiness, drowsiness, heavy head and costiveness.

All of these conditions and their earnest are promptly cured by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It brings back the keen edge of appetite, makes the digestion perfect and the liver active. It makes rich, red, pure blood, filled with the life-giving elements of the food that build healthy tissues, firm flesh, strong muscles and vibrant nerve fibers. It invigorates and vitalizes the whole body, and imparts mental power and elasticity. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, strengthens weak lungs, stops bleeding from lungs, spitting of blood, obstinate lingering coughs and kindred ailments.

Costiveness, constipation and torpidity of the liver are surely, speedily and permanently cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. They never gripe. They stimulate and strengthen the jaded organs until a regular habit is formed, and may then be discontinued without a return of the trouble. They stimulate, invigorate and regulate the stomach, liver and bowels. Medicine stores sell them, and have no other pills that "are just PRUDENCE IN THE PULPIT AND PASTORATE.

There are some who are ever ready to resent any suggestion as to the need of prudence in the work of the ministry, foolishly fancying that a preacher of the gospel who endeavors to be prudent in his words and conduct thereby compromises principle and shows himself a coward. Now and then, it is true, ministers may be found who seem to be more solicitous about observing the proprieties and keeping in favor with the public than they are about the conversion of sinners. Rather than be characterized and stigmatized as fanatical and imprudent, they are willing to let the cause of God suffer. Such are deserving of contempt, for in promoting righteousness, in bringing about reforms of various kinds, it is often necessary to pursue a course that the world deems unwise and impolitic. Having first made sure that we are right both in principle and in policy, we ought to go ahead, despite unfriendly criticism and opposition.

To suppose, however, that in laboring for God and the right there is no place for prudence, for the selection of the means best adapted to secure noble and worthy ends, is to make a grave mistake. Unfortunately, some who are exceedingly zealous for the Lord set about his work in a wrong way, and, consequently, greatly circumscribe their usefulness. Christian workers ought all to seek to be "as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves." Especially ought this to be the aim of every Christian minister. Many a preacher has accomplished fully as much by his tact and ready sympathy exhibited in mingling with his flock as by his pulpit ministrations. Perhaps no religious teacher of either ancient or modern times was more tactful and courteous in speech and behavior, even toward his enemies, than was the Apostle Paul. Yet a bolder or more faithful advocate of truth never lived. His defense before Festus is a model of courtesy and courage.

The man who is loudest and most caustic in his denunciation of evils and evil doers is apt to make friends for the opposition, especially if the evils he antagonizes chance to be minor ones. There is such a thing as stirring up unnecessary strife and opposition. To apply abusive epithets and coarse illustrations to those who manifest indifference or hostility to the cause we advocate is unchristian as well as indiscreet. In pointing out the sins of society ministers ought to use great plainness of speech, so that none may fail to see what is their duty; but hoarish bluntness and acrimony disgust, and ought to be studiously avoided. To fire a sermon directly at some one man or woman in the congregation or the community is seldom wise or beneficial. The person thus singled out is almost certain to feel angry and aggrieved. Circumstances sometimes arise, however, which necessitate such a deliverance.

It is the duty of the ministry in every age to show the application of the truths of the gospel to the problems of the times and the needs of the people, without losing sight of the fact that the great end of preaching is to bring men under the power of grace. In discussing sociological and political questions in the pulpit there is need of no little prudence, for if the speaker be too positive and unreserved in his utterances, he is sure to alienate some, it may be many, of his hearers, and thus be unable further to influence them religiously. The preacher who is ever scanning the political horizon, or the newspapers and magazines, for topics for pulpit discourses, has but a feeble appreciation of the function of the ministry. Some of the sermons characteristic of the times are little better than political harangues or lectures upon sociology.

We are not an advocate of sermons out of touch with the age, but we hold with Mr. Gladstone that, as regards the questions of the day, the gospel of Christ preached in its simplicity can and will correct all the evils that need to be corrected. Strikingly appropriate in this connection is the following utterance by Dr. Broadus: "The temporal benefits of Christianity are greatest just in proportion as there is most of true spirituality. Preachers do men most good as to this world in proportion as they bring them to care most for the world to come."

The Southern Methodist pulpit is to be congratulated upon its comparative freedom from partisan utterances and entanglement with political issues, which state of things is not true in the North, and we hope that our brethren will ever be thus prudent in this matter.

A wonderful confirmation of the divine origin of the gospel is to be found in its marvelous adaptation to the wants and aspirations of humanity in every age. In all the varied duties of his sacred office the minister has need to exercise prudence as well as love and patience. In order to become a successful fisher of men, he must avoid, as much as in him lies, "giving offense in anything," and should be well reported of by them that are without. To know when and how to approach people on the subject of religion is a thing of no light importance, and should be studied about as well as prayed over. The inopportune obtrusion of religious matters upon the attention of some non-professors drives them further away from God, or, if not resulting thus, it is but "the casting of pearls before swine." There is a certain inoffensive and praiseworthy form of diplomacy which Christians ought to employ in endeavoring to win men to Christ. If we gain the confidence and respect of the worldly and wicked, we may then hope to do them good; but if our zeal be of that intemperate kind which scorns the proprieties and takes no account of the feelings and prejudices of men, it will defeat its purpose. Well has it been said that "a few pebbles from a brook in the sling of a David, who knows how to send them to the mark, are more effective than a Goliath's spear and a Goliath's strength with a Goliath's clumsiness".

Zeal and consecration, though of inestimable value, can not make amends for imprudence, which sometimes takes the form of impudence. A minister who is noted for his lack of discretion, whatever his gifts may be, is an unsafe leader. Many things are lawful that are, on the other hand, neither expedient nor beneficial. "Let us, therefore, follow after the things which make for peace."

DR. ALLEN IN NEW ORLEANS.

Dr. Young J. Allen spent last Sabbath in New Orleans, occupying the pulpit at Rayne Memorial in the morning and at Carondelet at night, besides addressing a mass meeting of young people at Rayne Memorial in the afternoon. His presentation of the cause of missions is unique and exceedingly forceful. Dr. Allen has been in China thirty-nine years. He was a well-educated man, to begin with, and he has steadily grown in the way of mental culture until, as a man of letters, his fame has become world wide. Besides being the originator of both the Anglo Chinese University and the female college now presided over by Miss Haygood, he has done an amount of literary work that seems almost marvelous. He has written a number of books for the benefit of the Chinese, and has translated others by the score. He was for many years in the employ of the Chinese government, so great was his reputation for scholarship. His history of the late war between China and Japan has been endorsed in personal letters written to him by the rulers of the three nations involved—China, Japan, and Corea. The book from the first had such an immense sale that it was pirated (there being no copyright law in China) and published in four different cities in China, and also in Japan.

The work, although approved by all the nations concerned as an impartial history, makes a vigorous attack on the civilization of China, showing in what her deficiencies consist, and why she was so easily overwhelmed by Japan. China now requires all her candidates for office, —all of whom are obliged to possess diplomas from several different institutions of learning—to study, in addition to the Chinese classics which have constituted the curriculum for thousands of years, the literature, history and science of the Christian nations. The books used in these government colleges and universities, which are quite numerous, are prepared almost solely by missionaries. Thus "a great and effectual door is opened unto us" in that vast empire, and a revolution is in progress which, though little known by the outside world, will, after a while, startle the world with a wonderful transformation of the laws, the institutions, and the entire civilization of this, the oldest, most conservative and most conceited of all the nations of the earth. Dr. Allen is thoroughly imbued with the idea that one of the greatest needs of our church to-day is increased facilities for the publication and circulation of Christian literature among these oriental aristocrats, who are now, for the first time in their history, willing to be taught the literature, the science and the religion of the occidental world. Our church at present appropriates only $500 per annum for publishing. Yet last year one single book, written by Dr. Allen, and published without any help from our Mission Board, had a sale of $10,000. Five hundred dollars a year, at a time when books written from a Christian standpoint ought to be published in China by the thousands, is a mere bagatelle. Dr. Allen hopes to be able to induce the General Conference to establish a Publishing House in China. If we live to get to Baltimore, he will get at least one vote in favor of his statesman like scheme.

We had the pleasure of being associated with Dr. Allen for some hours at the hospitable home of Bro. F. A. Dicks. We had met him before some years ago, but had not been associated with him to any extent. We found him genial, companionable, and exceedingly instructive. We wish it were possible for him to visit all the great cities of our Southland and present the cause of missions in China. Could he do so, we are sure the cause would receive a tremendous uplift.

AT GLOSTER.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. M. M. Black, we lectured at Gloster, Miss., on Friday, the fifteenth. En route we had the good fortune to have as a traveling companion Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, who was returning from an eventful trip (mentioned elsewhere) to Bay St. Louis. Gloster seems to have recovered from her disastrous fire of a few months ago. The burnt district is almost all built up again, and with houses more substantial and more attractive than before. We had quite a good audience, who gave patient attention to what we had to say. The proceeds of the lecture will be used in seating the new church—a work which will be completed in good style in the near future. We made headquarters at the parsonage, which is jointly occupied by the pastor and the presiding elder. Saturday, at noon, we were again in the treadmill.

SENATOR WALTHALL.

The press dispatches of Tuesday state that Senator Walthall is very critically ill. This announcement will be received with profound sorrow. As a general in the Confederate Army, his career was a most illustrious one. Not only did he win imperishable renown for his military prowess, but he won the esteem, the confidence and the love of the citizen soldiery under his command. In civic life his career has been even more illustrious. Such is the hold which he has upon the people of Mississippi that they have again and again conferred upon him the highest honors they have to bestow without his having ever sought office at all. The whole amount of his candidacy at any time has been to consent that he would serve the people if they should elect him. Such cases are exceedingly rare. Many prayers will go up for his restoration to health.

MEMORIAL HOME.

We invite special attention to the appeal in this week's issue in behalf of the Memorial Home. This institution for the rescue of young women from a life of shame should have the support of true Christians regardless of denominational affiliations. It is non-sectarian, and has the hearty endorsement, as shown in the appeal itself, of leading ministers of all denominations. The institution is in need of funds to carry on its Christ-like work.

Dr. Young J. Allen left by the Southern Pacific, Monday night, to attend the great Epworth League Convention at Galveston. Thence he will go to Nashville to be present at the annual meeting of our Board of Missions. He will next visit Atlanta and Wofford College before going to Baltimore.

CUBA FREE.

On Monday night, the eighteenth, the following joint resolutions were adopted by both Houses of Congress:

Whereas, Abhorrent conditions which have existed for more than three years in the island of Cuba, so near our own borders, have shocked the moral sense of the people of the United States, have been a disgrace to Christian civilization, culminating as they have in the destruction of a United States battleship with two hundred and sixty-six of its officers and crew while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Havana, can not longer be endured, as has been set forth by the President of the United States in his message to Congress of April 11, 1898, upon which the action of Congress was invited; therefore,

Resolved, first, That the people of the island of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent.

Second, That it is the duty of the United States to demand, and the government of the United States does hereby demand that the government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba, and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

Third, That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States and to call into actual service of the United States the militia of the several States to such an extent as may be necessary to carry this resolution into effect.

Fourth, That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

The only opposition to these resolutions during the latter part of the debate was that they do not go far enough. A respectable and hard-fighting minority insisted on the recognition of the present Cuban government. That immediate war with Spain will be the result of this action, can not be doubted. In this matter Congress has simply followed public opinion.

It is our deliberate conviction that at least nine-tenths of the people of this nation heartily endorse the action of their representatives in Congress.

NEW BOOKS.

THROUGH TWO ADMINISTRATIONS. Character sketches of Kentucky. By Pattie French Witherspoon. 16 mo. 110 pages. T. B. Arnold, publisher, Chicago.

This book narrates five short, but fresh and fascinating stories, which are told in a natural and pleasing style, a thread of connection running through them all. The first sketch, entitled "In the Reign of Aunt Arethusa," pictures the stern rule of an unlovely maiden aunt, whose angular qualities and imperious bearing cast a gloom over the spirits of all who lived in the home with her. "Aunt Margaret," who forms the subject of the next sketch, is a person of totally opposite character to the one first depicted, being unselfish, gentle, and patient, almost to a fault. In the remaining sketches also she appears as the heroine, whose presence and words are a benediction. Several darkeys appear in the background, and amuse the reader by their droll, unstudied sayings. The scenes are quite realistic, and there is more than one pathetic passage. The sketches are pure and elevating in tone, and will give pleasure to readers of all classes.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY: GENESIS TO REVELATION. By Flavius Josephus Tyler. 16 mo. 153 pages. Third edition. Revised and enlarged. Price, 75 cents. Pickett Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

This little volume, by the pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Ala., contains a brief analysis of every book in the Bible, bringing into prominence the fundamental doctrines and teachings of each portion, and giving many valuable suggestions and explanations. The author lucidly explains the symbolism of the Old Testament, especially as found in the Levitical economy, classifies the different books of Holy Writ, and notes the central thought of each part or volume. A diagram is given illustrative of the genealogy of Christ, and harmonizing the seeming contradiction in this respect between Matthew and Luke.

Part III. contains some helpful hints as to how to study the Word, and outlines a number of topics for Bible readings, as, for instance: "The Christian as a Fruit-bearer," "Hearing and Doing," "The Work of the Holy Spirit," "Systematic Giving," etc. The concluding chapter is a strong and scathing arraignment of the evils of the theatre.

The average Bible reader needs a guide of some sort in his study of the sacred volume, and we feel sure that the use of this little volume will prove helpful to many.

MISSISSIPPI STATE CONFERENCE OF EPWORTH LEAGUES.

The fourth Annual Session of Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues assembled in Meridian, Miss., April 14-17. I have been appointed to report proceedings of above-named Conference to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I will furnish a synopsis for publication in issue of April 28.

Among the distinguished visitors from a distance may be mentioned Dr. S. A. Steel, Nashville, Tenn.; Judge L. H. Estes, Memphis, Tenn., and Rev. P. L. Cobb, the private secretary of Dr. W. R. Lambuth.

About 250 delegates are present. The hospitality of Meridian is abundant, and we are rejoicing together in hope of the glory of God.

THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

There are churches whose pastors are afraid to preach the truth; for fear it will touch some brother who is in the habit of paying a small mite to him; and there are some churches that have within their pales men who are running saloons, manufacturing whisky, or otherwise living questionable Christian lives, whose personal influences they fear so much that they do not prefer charges against them. . . . Oh, that we had more men of God who would not fear to teach the whole truth, regardless of what other men do or say!—Baptist Evangelist.

Dr. J. C. Simmons, one of the most prominent ministers in the Pacific Conference, called at the ADVOCATE office recently while we were out of the city. We are sorry to have missed him.

The City Mission and Church Extension Society will hold its anniversary meeting at the Louisiana Avenue Church next Sunday evening. Dr. Cooper, of Moss Point, Miss., will make the annual address.

Cards are out for the marriage of Rev. Walter A. Terry, of the Mississippi Conference, to Miss Evelin Roberta Middleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Middleton, of Yazoo county. The ceremony will be performed in Tranquil Church. We extend congratulations in advance, and invoke upon the happy pair the richest blessings of our heavenly Father.

Mr. Darwin Beach Carre will be married April 26, at 8 o'clock P. M., to Miss Fannie Leila Merey. The ceremony will take place at the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. B. M. Palmer, D. D., officiating. We extend to the noble groom and his winsome bride our heartiest congratulations. May their fondest hopes of matrimonial bliss be more than realized!

Rev. J. B. Hunnicutt, of the faculty of the Georgia State University at Athens, was married, April 14, to Mrs. Rebecca W. Jones, of Long Beach, Miss. The ceremony was performed in Main Street Methodist Church, Bay St. Louis, Miss., Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt officiating. The bridal party left immediately for their Georgia home. We extend hearty congratulations to our youthful friends; invoke Heaven's richest blessings upon them. We invite the especial attention of the Wesleyan Advocate to this announcement.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS

The annual meeting of Seashore Camp Ground Board of Trustees was held April 14 and 15, and opened with prayer by the Rev. S. S. Keener, of New Orleans.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: W. W. Sutcliffe, of New Orleans, president; J. H. Lakin, of Montgomery, Ala., vice-president; W. B Thomson, of New Orleans, treasurer; J. A. Woodville, of New Orleans, financial secretary; Jos. A. Bancroft, of Mobile, corresponding secretary; A. S. Daniels, of Algiers, La., chairman of Executive Committee; W. L. Vis, of Camp Grounds, superintendent (P. O. address, Biloxi, Miss.).

Rule 2, time for occupying tents and reception of visitors, was changed from May 1 to April 1 by a unanimous vote. The grounds are now open and in a most excellent condition. There is every prospect of a large gathering and a successful revival this coming camp meeting, which will open on Wednesday evening, July 13, and will continue for eight or ten days. All are cordially invited. Louisville and Nashville trains stop on the grounds. Communications will be answered by any of the officers.

OUR CLAIM BEFORE CONGRESS.

Friends in Mississippi are entitled to know how their delegation stood with respect to our claim, and we, therefore, take pleasure in transmitting an extract from a letter received from our attorney in Washington, under the date of March 15, as follows, to-wit:

"Senators and Representatives from the South, generally, were favorable to your claim, and, without exception, supported it, apparently with a marked degree of earnestness; and while all did their duty, and many are entitled to special mention (which I will take occasion later on to make), I can not at this juncture refrain from making mention of the delegation from Mississippi, which did some splendid work. Every member voted and worked for your bill save Senator Walthall, who was seriously ill, and Representative Catchings, who found it necessary to be away. Both, however, were paired so that their enforced absence did not affect the vote on the bill one way or the other.

"The Hon. Patrick Henry, of the Seventh Mississippi District, was particularly active. As a member of the Committee on War Claims of the House, he did much to secure an early and favorable report. He could hardly have done more if the measure had been his own. He worked faithfully and intelligently, and deserves well of the Methodists of his section.

"The Hon. Jno. M. Allen, of the First Mississippi District, is another. He, as you perhaps are aware, has an extended acquaintance, is well and favorably known by all members of Congress, and perhaps the most popular man in Congress. Everybody likes him, and everybody speaks well of him, and he used his extended acquaintance and large influence in the most effective manner in favor of your bill. He made no speech, because there were so many who desired to speak that speaking was calculated to hurt rather than help; but he worked in and out of season with members in such a way that his efforts were more effective than speech-making. The Methodists of the South owe Mr. Allen a great deal.

"Senator Money and Representatives Sullivan, Fox, Williams and Love did their full duty. It was indeed very gratifying to find the delegation from Mississippi, without reference to church affiliation or predilection, so earnestly and actively enlisted on your behalf."

Yours truly,
BARNES & SMITH, Agents.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

You will find our offer of the "Combination" Bible on the fifth page; the other on the third.

BISHOP WILSON

in speaking of the "Combination Bible" says: "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

TO THE PREACHERS AND MEMBERS OF THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

BRETHREN: You will see by the ADVOCATE, of April 7, that our District Conference will embrace the fifth Sunday, May 26-29. We are praying and expecting that it will be an occasion of great spiritual good to all. Let all who possibly can do so come to remain over Sunday, and the preachers and laymen of the district spend one Sabbath together, and let us make it "the day" of the Conference in preaching, love-feast, class meeting, fellowship one with another and communion with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. What a blessing especially to the church and homes entertaining us! We promise you a most hearty and welcome entertainment, and our people will be disappointed if you rush away before Sunday, as we usually do.

Come, brethren, and come praying that the baptism of the Holy Ghost may be the signal feature of our gathering. We need your prayers and your presence, and we want you to worship with us on the Sabbath. Application will be made to the I. C. R. R. Co. for special rates, and notice given in due time.

V. V. BOONE, P. C.

OUR GRENADA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Probably there are Methodists in North Mississippi who do not know what a good school we have at Grenada. It is our school, and we should do what we can to advance its interests.

It was my privilege and pleasure recently to visit the school for a few days, and I feel like telling our people how pleased I was with the institution.

Dr. Malone and his good wife have the girls' interest at heart, and are trying to do their work well. The faculty is a good one, and there is no use for our girls to go to schools of other denominations in this or any other State for good advantages and Christian influence.

The pupils have extra good advantages in music, and girls need not go to a distant city, but would do well to build up home institutions.

Surely never a boarding-school had a sweeter set of girls, or that seemed to love each other more, "in honor preferring one another."

Let us stand by our schools, and help to build them up, and keep them going.

TRADE MARK "COMBINATION" FAMILY BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

MAGNIFICENT ENGRAVINGS.

There is a steady and increasing demand for Family Bibles. Every family is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to April, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

KEEP A BRAVE HEART WHEN YOU CAN.

BY JULIA H. JOHNSTON.

Keep a brave heart when you can—
This is the very best plan.
Show a bright face to the world,
Keep a fair banner unfurled,
See that you keep in the right,
Walk evermore in the light,
Make it your practice and plan,
Keep a brave heart when you can.

Live in the sunshine all day—
This is the happiest way.
Clouds do not put out the light,
Somewhere the sun shineth bright;
Do not anticipate grief,
Count on the certain relief,
Make it your practice and plan,
Keep a brave heart when you can.

Live but a day at a time;
Listen, when merry bells chime,
Do not pass by any joy,
Praise will your moments employ;
Comfort hearts sadder than yours,
Show them the peace that endures,
Make it your practice and plan,
Keep a brave heart when you can.

A DOCTOR'S DIRECTIONS.

They save a daughter from blindness.

When a father writes that yours "is the best medicine in the world," you can allow something for seeming extravagance in the statement if you know that the medicine so praised, cured a loved daughter of disease and restored to her the eyesight nearly lost. The best medicine in the world for you is the medicine that cures you. There can't be anything better. No medicine can do more than cure. That is why John S. Goode, of Orrick, Mo., writes in these strong terms:

"Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine in the world. My daughter had a relapse after the measles, due to taking cold. She was nearly blind, and was obliged to remain in a dark room all the time. The doctors could give her no relief; one of them directed me to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Two bottles cured her completely."

The thousands of testimonials to the value of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla repeat over and over again, in one form or another the expression: "The doctors gave her no relief; one of them directed me to give her Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Two bottles completely cured her."

It is a common experience to try Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a last resort. It is a common experience to have Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla prescribed by a physician. It is a common experience to see a "complete cure" follow the use of a few bottles of this great blood purifying medicine.

Because, it is a specific for all forms of blood disease. If a disease has its origin in bad or impure blood, Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, acting directly on the blood, removing its impurities and giving to it vitalizing energy, will promptly eradicate the disease.

The great feature of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the radical cures that result from its use. Many medicines only suppress disease—they push the pimples down under the skin, they paint the complexion with subtle arsenical compounds, but the disease rages in the veins like a pent-up fire, and some day breaks out in a volcanic eruption that eats up the body. Ayer's Sarsaparilla goes to the root. It makes the fountain clean and the waters are clean. It makes the root good and the fruit is good. It gives Nature the elements she needs to build up the broken down constitution—not to brace it up with stimulants or patch it up on the surface. Send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook, and learn more about the cures effected by this remedy. It's sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

PLEASANT TO LIVE WITH.

"Jane is a very pleasant person to live with," said Mrs. Horton, speaking of her sister-in-law.

I listened to this information believingly, for I knew something of Jane myself. But at the same time, I felt sure that if she were really pleasant to live with it was because she exercised good sense and sound reason in her efforts to live agreeably with others.

I had noticed that Jane seldom omitted her daily walk. These outings, doubtless, had great power in keeping her temper serene and her feelings fresh and happy. A happy person is generally a pleasant person to live with. But one can not be happy who is weary, bored, exhausted. In such a state the tendency is to be "difficult," jealous, easily injured. Sometimes Jane went by my house in the morning with a little satchel on her arm. Once I went out to give her a bunch of sweet peas. She told me that she was going for a little excursion.

"I didn't really feel much like it," she said, "but I find that if I do not break up the monotony of life by frequent changes, I get cross."

Wise Miss Jane! As she went gayly down the street sniffing at her flowers, I resolved to follow her example.

I more than half guessed at another of Jane's ways. I felt sure that she conscientiously refrained from criticising her housemates. They were not perfect, but they were the persons with whom she spent her days, bound up with her in one social body. One would not purposely injure one's own hand or foot, yet in the body of the family the injury of one is the injury of all. An unkind remark is sure to react upon him who makes it, while at the same time it involves all in the pain that follows.

I have no doubt whatever that one reason of Jane's pleasantness was her good health. But in order to have good health at her age one must not overtax one's nervous energies. Though the road might be enticing, I was sure that Jane did not walk so far as to tire herself out. I believed that she did not read at night till her eyes gave out, that she did not sacrifice a week's pleasantness in order that some piece of work might be done at the exact minute determined upon.

Happening once to be in Jane's room, I saw that she had a shelf full of small, helpful books. As I looked at them she told me that she called them her wing strengtheners. When, like a tired bird, her spirit came falling to earth, a glance at some radiant sentence would set her soaring again. Ah, if Jane was pleasant to live with, there was reason for it! The flowers of human nature do not grow without cultivation.

One especial and fragrant pleasantness I must not omit. Jane was given to praising her friends—not unduly, not flatteringly, but their kindness or their cleverness was sure of appreciation from her. Life has many clouds at the best. Deserved praise is natural and necessary sunshine. Would that there were more Janes!—Mary F. Butts, in The Congregationalist.

HOW A FOOLISH PRINCE LEARNED A LESSON.

There was once a young prince who could not bear the sight of a spider or a fly. "They are such ugly creatures that I can not look at them," he said. "They are never of any use, and I can not understand why they were ever made. I should like nothing better than to know that every one of them had been killed."

In course of time, this young prince became a man and was made a general in the king's army. One day a great battle was fought, and he was so beset by his enemies that he was obliged to hide himself in a thick wood. Being very tired, he lay down in the shade of a spreading oak and fell asleep. While he was thus sleeping under the oak, he was discovered by one of his enemies, who crept quietly toward him, intending to kill him. But just at that moment a horsefly bit the prince on the hand and awakened him. He sprang up quickly, and seeing his danger, drew his sword to defend himself. But the coward, who had hoped to take him by surprise, turned about and ran away as fast as his legs could carry him.

Several days after this, the prince, being still closely followed by his enemies, concealed himself in a cave not far from the seashore. He had been there but a short time when a spider came out from under a rock and wove its web across the cave door.

Even before the spider had left off its weaving several soldiers who were searching for the prince passed that way.

"See this cave!" cried one. "Very likely he has hidden himself within; let us stop and see."

"Nonsense," said the others; "do you not see the spider's web across the door? How could he go inside without brushing that down?"

And without another word they all hurried on and made no stop.

The prince, who had heard their words, raised his hand toward heaven and thanked the Maker of all things for his goodness. Afterward, when he had driven all his enemies out of the country, he was fond of telling everybody of the lesson which he had learned from the spider and the fly. And never, so long as he lived, could he bear to see anyone hurt the smallest creature.—Christian Observer.

WHY NOT TO-DAY?

She was standing at her mother's coffin. The tears flowed heavy and copiously down her pale cheeks. As she looked on her mother's face before the coffin was closed, those standing near heard her exclaim: "Oh, mother, how gladly I would help you with your work. How cheerfully I would spend a few hours more with you during the evening, reading to you from the old family Bible, or some other good book. Oh, mother, if you could only live a few years longer, how I should try to make life pleasant and enjoyable for you."

Ah, yes, now that mother lies in her coffin where she can not hear nor appreciate the kind words, and receive the little kindnesses promised, now the daughter is willing to do so much for her mother.

Is it not true that many daughters wait until the coffin holds the remains of what used to be mother before they think of doing little deeds of kindness for her who watched over them when they were lying in their little beds, unable to care for themselves?

Daughters, your mother is the best friend you have. She understands you better than you understand yourself. She has open ears for the sorrows, the vexations, the perplexities, the trials you wish to speak of to some one. Perhaps you do not realize it to-day, while she is with you, the friend she is; you will feel it, be sure, when she is gone. You are young, cheerful, amiable, perhaps pretty; you have many friends to take you warmly by the hand, many lips speak flattering words into your ears, many eyes look admiringly at you. Your mother's hands are rough and trembling, they can not grasp yours very firmly; her lips falter as she speaks words of advice to her darling daughter; her eyes see you dimly; but be assured, those withered hands grasp yours with a truer grasp than that of your dearest friend, those lips speak words which come from the depth of her heart, and are worth more to you than any other; they see more clearly what you are; they look up to heaven for you and implore heaven's blessing upon you. Daughter, you will miss those hands, those lips, those eyes when death deprives them of life.

Appreciate their service while they are here with you. Mother may be strange, peculiar in her ways, but she is still your mother. She may be old and exacting; you may be as she is when you reach her age. Do not wait until death makes it impossible for you to do anything for her. She is with you to-day, then why not begin to show her kindness to-day?—Arthur E Geingel, in New York Observer.

Perhaps no finer illustration of a great purpose can be found than that of General Booth, whose Salvation Army has changed the prospect of the outcast world. Twenty-five years ago he was denounced, ridiculed, persecuted and abused as a fanatic or fool. He resolved to convert the slums of London, Paris, Rome, Chicago, New York, and on to the end of the list. For this he was maligned, hooted and mobbed, year after year, and often driven out of towns and cities. But with undaunted courage he worked on, trusting in God and the gospel to give him victory sooner or later. For one decade, two decades, he planned, toiled, advanced, regardless of opposition, as true to his purpose as the needle to the pole, as confident of final triumph as a saint could be, hoping on and ever with the heroism of unfaltering faith, until now the plandits of a grateful public, on two continents, hail his coming. The rich and the poor, the king and the peasant, the Christian and the outcast, the pulpit and the press, vie with each other to do him honor. His purpose has achieved success. He has done what the church for eighteen hundred years failed to do, and introduced a new and effective agency into the evangelization of the world. This is but another achievement of an irrepressible purpose.—Exchange.

The barroom is a bank. You deposit your money, and lose it; your time, and lose it; your character, and lose it; your health, and lose it; your strength, and lose it; your manly independence, and lose it; your self-control, and lose it; your home comfort, and lose it; your wife's happiness, and lose it; your own soul, and lose it.

Hygiene.

ALCOHOL.

Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, who has lately passed away, was a great scientist, and a great practicing physician. He had much to say concerning the nature and effects of alcohol, and among other things the following:

"Alcohol is not included in the scheme of life."

"The use of alcohol as a beverage produces an infinity of evil for which there is no compensation and no human cure."

"There is nothing in alcohol that can make any vital structure of the body."

"Alcohol employs and carries with it a false necessity. It gives a false idea of happiness, false action, false organization and false belief in self."

PREVENTING SUMMER MALADIES.

Let the home have all possible sunshine and air.

Ventilate the sleeping-room, never sleeping in a strictly close apartment.

Let bedding and bed linen be each day "well shaken before taken" in hand to be "made up."

Leave night garments unfolded, and as well as may be, exposed to the healthful influence of gentle breezes.

Have open windows during the morning hours, weather permitting; close them in the heat of the day, and open them again at early nightfall.

Let cleanliness of person and place be the order of both day and night, with a strife between the two divisions of time as to which shall be the more perfect.

SIX RULES OF HEALTH.

The secret of health and of long life, says Der Familienarzt, lies in the following very simple things:

1. Breathe fresh air day and night.

2. Take sufficient sleep and rest.

3. Work like a man, but never overwork.

4. Avoid passion and excitement. The anger of an instant may be fatal.

5. Do not strive to take the whole world on your shoulders—trust in your good destiny.

6. Never despair. Lost hope is a mortal malady.—Translated for The Literary Digest.

"CAPTURED BY A CAKE WALK."

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to say some things about "church entertainments," as they are usually called, and embrace church suppers, bazars, cake walks, and the like, for the purpose of raising money for the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. Now, I do not believe this is the way our Lord would have us prosper again his great truths in the earth; but I am aware many of my brethren are of a different opinion, and that they encourage such things in their pastoral charges, and sometimes follow a man that has put himself against such things, and, by the help of the good Lord, was putting his people to a higher and better plan of supporting the church. But the new preacher is hardly on the ground until in some way the church sneaper crew find out his sentiments, and all the efforts of the former pastor are gone to the winds. If the church but really prosper, even financially practicing these methods of raising money, there would be some reason for pursuing such a course; but my observation is, there is no surer way to dry up the financial springs of a congregation than to practice the church supper or bazar business. It may pull them over a hard place for two, but in the long run it means financial and spiritual death. If the Bible methods were practiced by the pastor, congregations and preachers, there would be no occasion for such things; but then they won't do. Avarice and unholy church pride lies at the base of the entire trouble. A congregation is too proud to have the worst-looking building in town for a church or a parsonage, or to let the preacher go unpaid, but too avaricious to pay the Lord what they justly owe him; hence, to satisfy their pride and save their money, they go into these things to make the world do what they should have done, and get the blessing they needed for doing it.

How a faithful pastor can encourage such cupidity and worldliness is more than this scribe can tell. How much I do wish our preachers would all stand together in opposing any other way than the way laid down in the Bible for sustaining the cause of God and spreading scriptural holiness over these lands!

The following, which I take from the Memphis Commercial-Appeal of Monday, Feb 7, 1898, is a fair sample of the spirit in which these things are entered into:

CAPTURED BY A CAKE WALK

——, Ark., Feb. 6, 1898.

Special.

A cake walk for the benefit of the Methodist Church, given by the society young people at the court-house last night, was an unqualified success in every respect. First prize and booby prize were presented by Rev. —— in very impressive and appropriate language.

I will withhold all names, even that of the fashionable minister. Surely we are in a bad way. To read such things published to the world as being engaged in by the Methodist Church is enough to send the blush of shame and humility to the cheek and into the heart of all that love God and the church. The Arkansas minister presenting first and booby prizes at a cake walk in very simple and appropriate language was, I'm constrained to believe, a rare spectacle. But the same spirit that prompted him and his society young people is the same that prompts all unscriptural methods in raising money to carry on the great work of evangelizing the world and bringing it to the feet of the King of kings and Lord of lords.

If our preachers would be a unit in denouncing all such things, the next decade would, in my opinion, show marked advancement, both financially and spiritually, in our great church. GEORGE PAUL.

If only we knew how much we are surrounded with the tokens of mercy! The earth is full of them. Grains of wheat, leaves, flowers, the commonest things, have all their tales to tell. Our ignorance hinders our thanksgiving—not that we are as thankful as we might be for the mercies that we do know of. Perhaps, if we were, more would be revealed to us. Say to yourself: 'I am surrounded with mercies which I know not of. Lord, that I may praise thee, let all things have their voice for me."—The Quiver.

Patient, hopeful waiting is hard work when it is the only work possible to us in an emergency. But patient waiting is in its time the highest duty of a faithful soul.—H. Clay Trumbull.

MILLER—Mrs. MARY P. MILLER died at the home of her son-in-law, H. W. Shaw, near Palestine Church, in DeSoto county, Miss., Nov. 14, 1897, aged nearly seventy-two years.

She was married twice. Her first marriage was to W. H. Phillips, with whom she lived fourteen years, and by which union seven children were born to them. Her second marriage was to A. W. Miller, who died in 1891. She spent the remainder of her widowed life with her son-in-law, H. W. Shaw. She was amiable in life, kind and gentle, and a true friend to all, and a devoted Christian, having been a consistent member of the Methodist Church for nearly fifty-seven years. She never grew tired of doing good, but became more and more like the Master. Her conscientious life and warm-hearted Christian bearing had drawn around her a host of loving friends. Her health had failed her for several years previous to death, but she endured the afflictions with Christian fortitude. Throughout her long sufferings she received kindest attention from relatives and friends. Her son-in-law, H. W. Shaw, watched over and cared for her with true devotion; and Sister Frances Craddock was untiring in her assistance and care. She was ready for the summons. By loving hands, and surrounded by a large number of relatives and friends, she was buried in the graveyard near her loved church. The impress and influence of her godly life will live on forever.

Thank God for such Christian lives! Her funeral was preached and she was buried by her pastor. J. R. D. KING.

ALLEN—ROBERT WILLIAM ALLEN was born in Limestone county, Ala., Oct. 13, 1857, removed to Mississippi when quite a boy, and spent the remainder of his life in DeSoto county; was married to Miss Victoria O'Bryant, Oct. 31, 1891, and died Feb. 22, 1898, leaving a wife and two little girls.

Early in his manhood he lost his father, and upon his death the cares and obligations of the family fell upon him, which he discharged loyally and manfully. He was nurtured and admonished by a godly Christian mother, whose impress upon his life moulded his character. He was a devoted son and brother. His love for his mother is worthy of all emulation. As a husband, he was always loving, tender, and kind; as a father, he was thoughtful and indulgent. The happiness of his family was his highest earthly ambition. He did not join the church until late in life, but his whole life has been one of marked morality and piety. His life, after joining the church, was always consistent and active; always ready and willing to do anything put upon him; was a ready and willing supporter of all its demands. He loved his church, and was ever the preacher's friend. In his death the church and community mourn the loss of a warm-hearted Christian member and friend. May we emulate his Christian character and counsel. He was buried at Pleasant Hill, De Soto county, Miss., by his pastor.

TUCKER—Near Deer Ford Church may be seen a beautiful marble slab bearing this inscription: "JOHN TUCKER Born Sept. 26, —. Died Feb 8 1897. PRISCILLA d. (nee Gates) TUCKER Born Jan 8, 1831 Died Feb. 7, 1897. Not parted even in death."

This brother and sister were married Aug. 24, 1853. After a wedded life of nearly forty-four years they were granted their oft-expressed wish that they might depart this life together. Her spirit preceded his to rest twenty-three hours, but their bodies were laid to rest at the same time in the same grave.

They were members of Deer Ford Church. They had belonged to the Methodist Church since early life. They were in comparatively good health until a few days before their death. As husband and wife they were one in every respect. The thought that animated the heart of each was the happiness of the other. They were devoted parents. Two sons and three daughters were born to them, all of whom are members of the Methodist Church. The terrors of death were dispelled by the glorious hope of immortality beyond the grave. On their death-bed they assured their loved ones that there was nothing between them and their heavenly Father.

W. H. HENSON, Pastor.

MONTGOMERY—At a meeting of the Joint Board of Trustees and Stewards of Greenville station, M. E. Church, South, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Once more we are forcibly impressed with the solemn thought that, "In such an hour as we think not the Son of man cometh." But a few days since our friend, companion and brother, Dr. D. C. MONTGOMERY, was engaged in the active practice of his profession, administering to wants of others; to-day he has fallen on sleep to awaken in life eternal, and in his death the community has lost an honored and beloved citizen, physician and friend of humanity; his church one of her truest, most worthy and faithful members and officials, and his family a head that can never be supplied in this life. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we know that to him it has only been a change from labor to rest, yet we truly regret and lament his loss from the church in which he lived and taught by his pious and godly life and pure consecration.

Resolved, That we sympathize most deeply with his family in this, their sore bereavement, and pray that the God of love and mercy may kindly care for, protect and keep them until they meet again.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the city papers and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and that a copy be also sent to his family.

THE GREAT CHURCH LIGHT

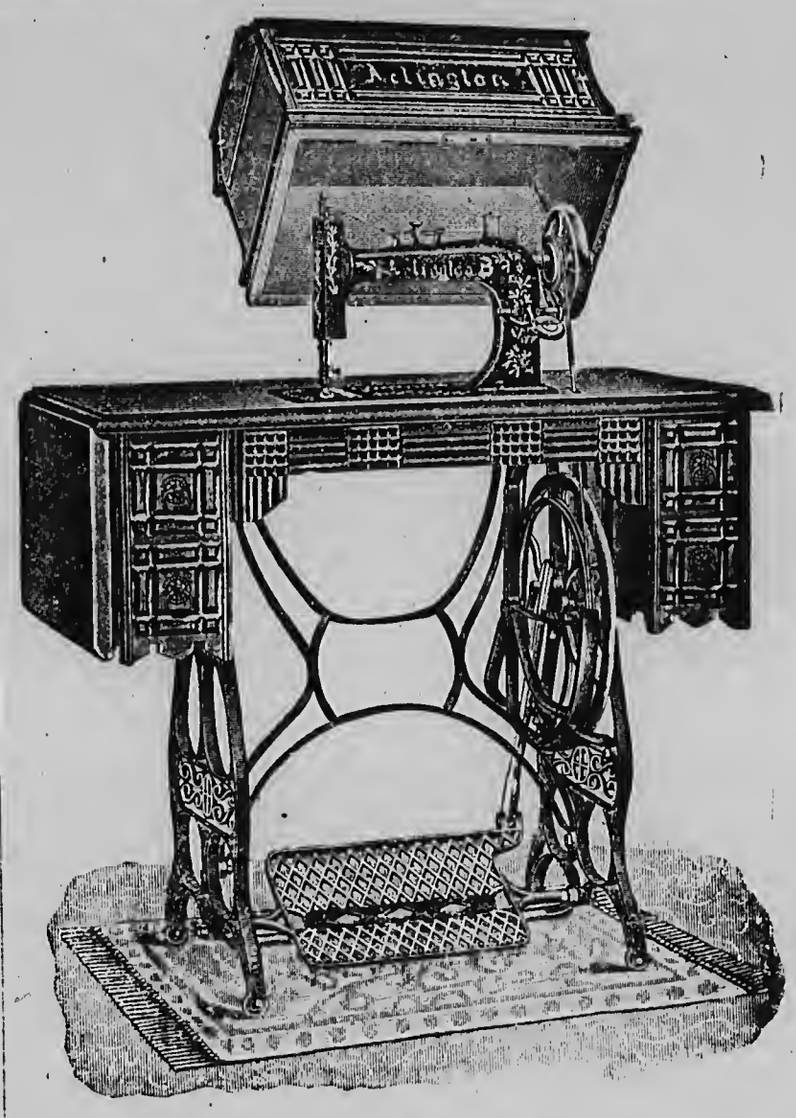
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm. Its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE POLLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A half-million-dollar contract was awarded to a St. Louis firm for constructing lock and approaches for improving Plaquemine Bayou, La.

Governor Black vetoed 75 per cent. of the bills passed by the New York State Legislature, and he frowned down about as much more that otherwise might have passed.

The Rev. Dr. J. C. Boyd has been pastor of the United Presbyterian Church in Lebanon, Pa., forty years, and, it is said, has not missed a day's preaching in all that time on account of illness.

It is said Claus Spreckels' great beet sugar factory at Salinas, Cal., which is now nearing completion, will be the largest in the world, having a working capacity of 3300 tons in twenty-four hours.

The Alaska Commercial Company has given its museum of Alaskan curios and products to the California State University. The collection is the largest of its kind in the country, and has been collecting for more than thirty years.

A number of patriotic women throughout the country have offered to purchase and fit out a second ambulance ship and place her at the disposal of the government. As the war is not expected to last very long, the surgeon-general has declined this assistance, but expressed his willingness to receive any contributions that may be made for purchasing fresh meats, fruits and delicacies for the sick and wounded.

The House of Representatives at Washington adopted last Wednesday what was intended to be a joint resolution, empowering and directing the President to employ the army and navy to secure peace and a popular, stable government in Cuba. But recognition of Cuban independence was strictly withheld. . . . On Saturday the Senate took action, specifically recognizing the Cuban Republic, and directing the President to employ all the power of the United States to drive the Spanish control out of the Island of Cuba. The action of the Senate embraced so many more propositions than were contained in the expression of the House that the two resolutions are seriously in conflict, and, therefore, they do not constitute a joint resolution, and, this being so, they can have no force until the two Houses agree upon a joint proposition. . . . After one of the hardest fought battles between the two Houses known in many years Congress, at an early hour on Tuesday, came to an agreement upon the most momentous question it has dealt with in a third of a century. The Cuban resolution was passed, and was sent to the President on Tuesday. Its provisions mean the expulsion of the Spanish in the Island of Cuba by the armed forces of the United States. (See resolutions on fourth page.) . . . The President, believing he has done all he can to avert war, signed the joint resolution Wednesday morning.

FOREIGN.

The school children of France have only 139 days for study, the balance of 226 being holidays.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Honolulu recently held services in memory of the late Miss Frances E. Willard.

Preparations are being made in England for the centenary celebration of the founding of the Religious Tract Society. Subscriptions are being raised towards a fund of $250,000, a good portion of which has already been received.

There seems to be a general belief in Europe, if the European press is to be believed, that the continental powers will make some effort to prevent war in behalf of Spain. Just how they will proceed it is difficult to imagine; but that they are displeased with the position assumed by this country in demanding that Spanish sovereignty over Cuba be abandoned is certain.

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

Algiers, La., April 13, 1898—Philip Haab, residing at 346 Elmira and Elix street, this place, has been a victim of ring worms, and tried many different medicines without relief. Since taking a few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla he has had no trouble from this source, and says that his appetite is wonderfully improved.

CORRECTION.

I find, in looking over the statistical tables in the Minutes of the last session of the Louisiana Conference, that Caddo charge, Shreveport district, is credited with having paid $38.35 by the W. P. and H. M. Society. It should have been Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

French Mission is reported as having been assessed $14 for Conference claimants. My book shows the assessment to have been $14. Respectfully,

WM. G. EVANS,
Statistical Secretary.

Epworth League

BY H. N. HARRISON.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 24.—"THE GIFT OF POWER." ACTS i, 8; ii, 1-7; I. PET. i, 12.

1. The gift of power is, as the topic indicates, a bestowment from above. It is not conversion or regeneration, but something superadded—a divine "extra," a reinforcement from on high. The topic calls it "a Christian inheritance"—that is, only a Christian can inherit or obtain it.

2. The reader will observe from Acts ii, 1-7, that the disciples received the baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire on Pentecost, as Jesus had promised (Acts i, 5). Every Christian ought to have a Pentecost (Acts ii, 38, 39). More than three years before this our Savior himself received the baptism of the Holy Spirit when he fulfilled the conditions necessary and peculiar to his case (Matt. iii, 13-17; John i, 32, 33). This was his Pentecost. We may add that he did not preach a word or work a solitary miracle until he was clothed upon by this power. Do we not also need to be thus endued with power for service?

3. The immediate effect of the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon the disciples was to send them abroad everywhere as Christ's witnesses preaching the Word. It made them bold, aggressive. Formerly they were on the defensive; now they were on the offensive. When the Spirit of God gets thus into the hearts of Christians, he makes them warriors indeed. He makes them holy, like unto himself. The mightiest and, at the same time, the holiest and most uncompromising fighter in the world is the Holy Ghost.

4. The question arises, How shall we obtain this gift of power? We answer, By meeting the conditions. We must seek the blessing definitely. Our consecration must be definite, with this end in view. We must not be given to vague praying, but to definite supplication for the gift of power. Thus did these very disciples pray in the upper room, and they looked for, expected, and received the blessing by faith in the promise of Jesus (Luke xxiv, 49). We have got to meet the conditions, or we can not utilize any form of power. Steam and electric power, though they have always existed in the world, were never successfully invoked by man until recent years. The secret of power lies in meeting the conditions.

5. The word translated "power" in Acts i, 8, is the Greek "dunamis"—our word "dynamite." Think of it—filled with the dynamite of God! Oh, that every member of the League were filled with the divine explosive! What mighty bombs we could cast into Satan's camp!

The Union Epworth League had a pleasant and enjoyable meeting Tuesday, at 8 P. M., at Dryades Street Church. President Geo. Parker was on hand, and was elected to represent the city Leagues at the State Conference. A memorial was adopted by the leaguers requesting the State Conference to send out a field secretary for the purpose of establishing new Leagues and strengthening weak ones. Bro. Wynn's wife, Bro. Foster and, we hope, others will go to the State Conference. We earnestly hope that each League in the city will send a delegate. Let us make an earnest effort to do so. Let us keep this matter before God in heartfelt prayer.

When God's children pass under the shadow of the cross of Calvary, they know that through that shadow lies their passage to the great white throne. For them Gethsemane is as paradise. God fills it with sacred presences; its solemn silence is broken by the music of tender promises; its awful darkness softened and brightened by the sunlight of heavenly faces and the music of angel wings.—F. W. Farrar.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ROUTE TO BALTIMORE VIA WASHINGTON CITY.

The Chesapeake and Ohio railway with its connections offers by far the most interesting route to the Conference in Baltimore in May. The route from Louisville is through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, passing Frankfort, the State Capital, Lexington, and the home of Henry Clay. At Ashland the line from Cincinnati is joined; the route from Cincinnati being along the banks of the beautiful Ohio river for 165 miles. Shortly after entering West Virginia the banks of the Kanawha river are followed, Kanawha Falls is passed and the canons of New River are penetrated. After skirting the picturesque Greenbrier for 50 miles, the heights of the Alleghenies are reached, and next comes the Shenandoah Valley, the Blue Ridge Mountains and Piedmont section, the most beautiful of the Appalachain Valley. After passing through Charlottsville and Gordonsville, the route is through the most memorable battle fields of the Civil War, among them Cedar Mountain, Culpepper, Rappahannock, Warrenton Junction, Manassas and Bull Run.

What if, some day, the tangled skein
Of life, with knotted threads of pain,
The strife, the purpose misconstrued,
Shall be made clear beyond the main.

What if, beyond the realm of time,
The sorrow which years could not dim
Shall be transformed to joyful song,
Attuned to harp of seraphim.

If, in the sun-bright clime beyond,
The withered hopes, to human ken
Long perished, wet with heavenly dews,
Immortal there shall bloom again.

If, in the light of that new day,
Freed from the shadowy mists below,
Mistaken aims, there seen aright,
To clearer vision radiant grow.

If heart-throb answering heart-throb there,
Beyond the surging tempest's moan,
The soul makes answer to the cry
Of soul, who knows as He is known.

FOURTH STATE CONFERENCE OF EPWORTH LEAGUES IN MISSISSIPPI.

At 7:30 P. M., Thursday, April 14, 1898, in Central M. E. Church, South, Meridian, Miss., the above-named assemblage was called to order by the president, Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, Miss. After prayer by Rev. T. B. Clifford, Scripture reading by the president, and singing led by the choir, the Rev. H. M. DuBose, D. D., of Jackson, Miss., delivered an address emphasizing the wonderful possibilities of the Epworth League movement, and showing the leaguers assembled the special benefit to be derived from such a gathering. At the close of the address a general handshaking was indulged in, several soul-stirring songs were sung, announcements made, and Conference adjourned with the benediction.

The work of Friday opened with a

SUNRISE PRAYER MEETING,

conducted by Rev. G. H. Galloway, of Meridian, and at 9 A. M. regular work of the Conference began, opening religious services being conducted by Rev. F. M. Keen. The addresses of welcome on behalf of the local Leagues, Young People's Baptist Union, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and Woman's Missionary Societies, were delivered respectively by J. H. Ledyard, Jno. T. Sanford, J. T. Lawson, and Mrs. C. R. McQueen. Capt. S. B. Watts, appointed to represent the Young Men's Business League, was unavoidably detained, and was represented by Dr. H. W. Featherstun. The response to these addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Booneville, Miss. Next followed the appointment of committees, and subjoined I give chairman of each: Credentials—Rev. T. B. Clifford, chairman; Finance—Dr. Rosa Wiss, chairman; Nominations—Rev. J. A. Randolph, chairman; Resolutions—Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, chairman; League Work—Rev. B. F. Lewis, chairman. Rev. T. B. Clifford was appointed to report proceedings of the Conference to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The Conference then listened to an admirable paper written and read by Mrs. Janie Klein, of Vicksburg,

"THE IDEAL DEVOTIONAL MEETING," and such was the impression made that it was ordered published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Epworth Era. Miss Lou Hawkins, of Water Valley, read a splendid paper, in which she told how to secure a good attendance.

JUDGE L. H. ESTES, of Memphis, Tenn., then took his place upon the platform to tell of the League in the revival. He first asked the whole congregation to stand and sing one verse of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and then to kneel and sing the second verse. It is needless for me to say anything about Judge Estes and his address, for nearly all Mississippians know him and have heard him. Suffice it to say that everyone who heard him was impressed anew with the duties and stern realities of life, and formed new resolutions for the coming days. What a power for good he is! Oh, that we had more laymen like him!

Committee on Credentials then made its first report, showing over 200 delegates present. Announcements were made and benediction pronounced by Rev. T. L. Mellon.

Conference reassembled at 2 P. M., religious exercises being conducted by Rev. J. A. Randolph, of Macon, Miss.

"THE REFLEX INFLUENCE OF BENEVOLENT WORK"

was the subject of a paper read by Miss Victoria Wiss, of Meridian. It showed knowledge of the work of the Charity and Help Department, and was an exhortation to the workers to more efficient service for humanity in the name of Him "who went about doing good." Rev. T. L. Mellen, of Canton, then told how the interest of the League might be promoted by and at this juncture a resolution was presented and passed to the Committee on Resolutions, asking for the earnest co-operation of the presiding elders in Mississippi in this great work among the young people. H. A. Lee, of Water Valley, emphasized in a short talk the great need of the singing of appropriate songs by the young people. He spoke of the power of song, and its place in our devotions, and exhorted to more and better singing among our people. A paper was then read by Mrs. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, Miss., on a VERY IMPORTANT SUBJECT,

THE PRESIDING ELDER,

viz.: "What Social Entertainments Shall Be Substituted for Those We Condemn?" So important was the subject, and so wonderfully well discussed in the admirable paper read, that the Conference, by resolution, ordered it published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Epworth Era. The Conference then adjourned to attend a concert given by the faculty and students of in honor of the visiting leaguers. The programme was well arranged and well rendered, and set forth the fact that efficient work is being done by Prof. Beeson and his corps of teachers. Friday evening, at eight o'clock, opening religious services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Morse, of McComb City. Committee on Resolutions made partial report, and resolutions relating to an hour set apart for normal work at next State Conference, and also to the Legislature looking to relief from Sunday labor for railroad men, were adopted. An excellent paper was then read by Miss Vic Thompson, of Tupelo, Miss., entitled, and was ordered published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and Epworth Era. Miss Thompson is one of the most efficient League workers in the State, and has been enthusiastically engaged in the work from the beginning. Dr. DuBose was asked to take the place of an absent speaker, and to tell of the importance and means of promotion of social life in the League. After singing and announcements Conference adjourned with the benediction.

"THE PRACTICAL VALUE OF A LEAGUE LIBRARY,"

Saturday morning, at 5.30, a number of leaguers met opposite Central Church to board the street cars specially engaged for to attend a sunrise prayer meeting conducted by Rev. H. G. Hawkins and Judge L. H. Estes. It was good to be there. Nearly everyone present testified to the goodness of God and the saving power of the gospel, and each returned from that early morning meeting feeling that it was an early hour well spent and much enjoyed. Regular morning session opened at 9 A. M., religious services being conducted by Henry Marshall, of Vicksburg. A telegram was received from Grenada Epworth League sending greetings. Place of meeting for next State Conference was left in the hands of the Executive Committee. An instinctive paper was read by Miss Caroline Carpenter, of East Mississippi Female College, on showing much thought and careful preparation. Rev. J. W. Chambers, of Whitworth College, then took charge of a question box which had hitherto occupied a place upon the table, and satisfactorily answered the many questions contained on slips of paper deposited therein. Rev. Dr. S. A. Steel was then introduced to the Conference, and talked in a very practical way on the work of the Epworth League. Announcements for Sunday's services were then made, and Conference adjourned with the benediction. The Waynesboro Epworth League band rendered many selections during intervals between sessions of the Conference. They were under direction of their pastor, Rev A. T. Bell.

Conference opened at 2:30 P. M. with religious exercises conducted by Rev. W. W. Morse, and following this a paper was read by Miss Stella Rollins, of Grenada, on "The Place of the Junior League in the Church;" also one by Miss Mary Clair Brown, of Meridian, on "Methods of Junior League Work." Each of these young ladies are much interested in this department of work, and out of a full heart and practical experience they edified and instructed those who heard them. Miss Addie Marshall, of Whitworth College, and a representative of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, delivered a splendid address on which showed that she was thoroughly posted as to the work, and that her heart was truly in it. It was as good seed planted, we trust, in good soil, that shall bring forth abundant fruit. Miss Emmie May Featherstun then read a splendid paper on "The Ideal Junior League Superintendent," which was both pointed and practical, and showed thought in the right direction. Report of Finance Committee was received and adopted, and they were instructed to publish three thousand copies of the Minutes of the Conference. Resolutions endorsing the Epworth Era, and of thanks to the good people of Meridian, railroads, etc., were adopted. A resolution looking to the appointment of an editor and associate editor, and the establishment of an Epworth League department in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, was unanimously adopted, and I herewith send resolution for insertion in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Report of Committee on Nominations was received and adopted as below: President, Rev. J. A. Randolph, Macon, Miss.; first vice-president, J. H. Ledyard, Meridian, Miss.; second vice-president, Mrs. Janie Klein, Vicksburg, Miss.; third vice-president, Miss Lucy Hawkins, Water Valley, Miss.; recording secretary, W. N. DeLoach, Grenada, Miss.; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Miss Victoria Thompson, Tupelo, Miss. Rev. P. L. Cobb, representing the Mission Rooms, M. E. Church, South, at Nashville, was present during the Conference circulating missionary literature, such as maps, pamphlets, etc., and adding much to the success of the Conference.

At 7:30 P. M. (Saturday) devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. H. W. Featherstun, of Meridian, after which Committee on Epworth League Work made their report, recommending that the Leagues of Mississippi raise during the next twelve months the sum of six hundred for the Orphans' Home at Water Valley, and six hundred toward the support of a single missionary in the foreign field. Sixty shares, of ten dollars each, were pledged in a few minutes by the Leagues represented. Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D., was then introduced to the vast audience, and in his own thrilling way delivered his now famous address on the "Pioneers of Methodism in America." At the close nearly the whole congregation gave the speaker their hands, promising fidelity to duty and to God in the future.

SUNDAY, APRIL 17,

was a great day for Meridian. The visiting preachers filled the pulpits, and the leaguers and their friends literally filled the pews. The afternoon was devoted to League rallies at the various churches, and at night to praise and testimony meetings. The Conference was evidently a means of instruction and inspiration to those who attended, as the testimonies attested. We feel that Methodism in Mississippi has received a fresh throb of enthusiasm that shall be felt far and near because of this coming together of these young people in Meridian.

May each one of the leagues who attended this Conference be instrumental during the next twelve months in bringing many souls to Christ, thereby glorifying God, benefiting the race, and adding stars to their own crowns of rejoicing in the sweet by-and-by! THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

Booneville, Miss.

Resolved, That the Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues does hereby request the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to give the State Leagues of Mississippi and Louisiana at least two columns of his paper, to be used in the interest of the League.

Resolved, That in the event this request is granted by the editor, that the president of the State League Conference appoint an editor to serve until his successor shall be elected at the next State Conference.

Resolved, That the Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues hereafter elect an editor to serve one year, and the next year an associate editor, and that we request the Louisiana State Conference to alternate with us.

MR. VARDEMAN'S REPLY ANSWERED.

MR EDITOR: The reply of Rev. A. M. Vardeman to my criticism of his catechism has been spun out to fill two columns of the ADVOCATE. I am glad you extended to him the courtesy of your paper. It was well that he gave us, in the outset of his reply, the following statement, for without it one would never have supposed his paper under review to have been a "'Bible reading' on Christian baptism," because of its resemblance to one of the old-time doctrinal tracts for the instruction of children. This statement clears that matter up: "I wish to state, first, that the 'catechetical lesson, the only perceptible object of which was to prop up the failing doctrine of immersion,' was prepared as a 'Bible reading' on Christian baptism, and that it consists of a series of twenty-five plain, practical questions on the subject, all of which, except three, are answered by a quotation, without note or comment, from the Word of God, giving book, chapter, and verse."

This reminds me of another "Bible reading" which I once heard in the Baptist Church at ———, in which "buried with him by baptism," etc., was read to show how we are baptized. A thoughtful brother present wanted to discuss the subject, as there were two sides to it; but the proposition with which the leader met this desire was: "Let us pray. Bro. U., lead us in prayer." Bro. U. was not wholly unlike Ewald in his controversy with Gesenius on the ineffable name of Deity. He prayed, and when he had done praying there was precious little of the theology of the leader of the "Bible reading" left.

In the light of the information contained in the above quotation, it is easy to see that this is a "Bible reading" on the Baptist idea of Christian baptism. It is the disjointed, inappropriate use of Bible language which constitutes the clap-trap features of the production. This was the ground of my objection to Bro. V.'s views. The Century Dictionary defines "clap-trap" to be "designing merely to win approval, or catch applause." That this is what he did is proven by the fact that within two weeks' time that "Bible reading" was advertised as on sale at a Baptist printing office, and the people urged to buy it.

As to the clap-trap features of the "Bible reading," against which Bro. V. manifests so much feeling, Webster may help us on somewhat. He defines it as "deceptive, unsubstantial, counterfeit." I demonstrated in my former article that the nature of Bro. V.'s questions and answers was calculated to deceive—e. g: He asked this question, "Were any infants baptized by the apostles?" To this question he accepted the following answer, and passed it on as satisfactory, "They baptized both men and women." What has the baptizing of "men and women" to do with the baptism of "infants"? "Infants" was the objective point in the question, and should have been the object of the answer. It is hard to believe Bro. V. did not see the deceptive effect of such an answer.

Again, Bro. V. says: "If it is 'clap trap' to ask a pertinent question, and then allow God's Word to answer it, it must be something more than 'clap-trap' to prepare catechisms and other statements of what is believed to be Bible truth, and endorsed by churches, and send them out to the world."

No exceptions have been taken to his questions. They are all well enough. So are his answers when properly applied. But to ask, "Where were the first baptisms performed?" and then lug in the words of a writer who was writing about a fact, and not about a place or locality at all, has the appearance of seeking to please. When Mark wrote the answer which he has been forced to give to this question—i. e., "in the river Jordan"—he was not speaking of "Christian baptism" at all, but of John's baptism, which was afterward repudiated by St. Paul, as we will more clearly see further on.

As to those household baptisms—there are four—after assuming that the unnatural was the proper order of things in those households which were baptized, he proceeds to pound me most severely because I assume the natural order, viz: children in families. This is the rule. The opposite is the exception, and was more exceptional still in man's pastoral state than in the present state of nervous strain and physical debility superinduced by our social and other relations.

Bro. V. bumps up against my "common sense" when he says, "One of the fundamental principles of logic and common sense is, that a command to do a certain definite thing is a prohibition to something else in its stead."

It is in order to ask whether Bro. V.'s practice does not violate this "fundamental principle of logic and common sense." The great commission is a "command to do a certain definite thing"—that is, to "baptize all nations." Bro. V.'s dictum "is a prohibition to something else in its stead." The term, "every creature"—Mark xvi, 15—is either specific, or it is general. If it is general, it includes all animals and fowls, as well as men. If it is specific, then it specifies the human race—"every creature" of it—infants and all. The point is this: Whoever is subject of one part of the ministries of the gospel is subject of all its ministries. If "every creature" is to be the subject of the ministry of the Word, "every creature" is equally the subject of all the provisions of that Word. Matt. xxviii, 19, says "all nations." This explains that "every creature" in Mark is specific of the human race. But Matthew goes further than Mark, and says "all nations" must be "baptized." "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them." Here, then, is the command: to baptize "all nations," "every creature." But does Bro. V. follow his dictum in this? Not at all, but leaves out a part of the "command," and "does something else instead"—i. e., he neglects the little "creatures."

Respectfully, J. A. PARKER.

HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

BY PROF. J. W. BEESON,

President East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss.

As to her capability, we have only to point you to what has already been accomplished. Sixty years ago there was not a female college in all this fair land of ours. There were a few female academies, but none dared assume the name of college. To the South and to Methodism is due the honor of the first, which is Wesleyan Female College, of Macon, Ga., established in 1839. Now over 200 female colleges have over 40 000 female students. Vassar and Wellesley have curricula equal to that of any male college in the country. In former days the State recognized no responsibility in the higher education of its girls, while making ample provisions for its boys. Although the rights of women in this direction are still not recognized as they should be in many States, yet industrial schools for girls are being established in many States, with our beloved Mississippi in the lead. Already more than twenty State universities are opened to women, and more are being added to the number every year.

Many higher institutions of a private or denominational character, such as Cornell University, Boston University, the Methodist University at Washington, and Leland Stanford and Chicago Universities, with millions of dollars back of them, are, in all their departments, including divinity, open to women. Grand old Harvard and Columbia College have condescended to open their back doors to women by way of the Woman's Annex.

Nor have the girls failed to carry off their share of the honors when they have been allowed an equal showing. A few years ago Miss Fawcet received the highest honors at Cambridge University. Miss Alford also of Cambridge, won the first place in the classical, one of the hardest courses in the university. Miss H. L. Read captured the sargent prize at Harvard for the best metrical version of one of the Odes of Horace, and Miss Agnes Lowe took first prize in the Junior oratorical contest of the University of Wisconsin. A few years ago Miss Victoria Hill took first honors at the University of Mississippi. At Oxford University, in 1887, Miss Ramsay competed with young men who were known to be the best trained students of the best schools of England, and she surpassed them in their own particular domain. She was not only first in her class, but rose above her class and stood alone the highest in the university. To such distinction no male student ever rose. She accomplished what no Senior classic ever accomplished before. In the A. and M. College, in Alabama, the young women took off the honors in mathematics two years in succession.

Thrown, as she often is, upon her own resources for support, how necessary it is that she should have the best possible equipment, that she may be the better prepared to cope successfully with her more able-bodied brothers who are already in possession of the forts and strongholds in the professional world.

STILLNESS OF HEART

BY ABRAM J. FLAGG

What the heart is at the birth,
What the soul is to the earth
What the gem is to the mine,
What the grape is to the vine,
What the bloom is to the tree
That is Jesus Christ to me.

What the string is to the lute,
What the breath is to the flute,
What the spring is to the watch,
What the nerve is to the touch,
What the breeze is to the sea,
That is Jesus Christ to me.

What the estate is to the heir,
What the Autumn to the year,
What the seed is to the farm,
What the sunbeams to the corn,
What the flower is to the bee,
That is Jesus Christ to me.

What culture is unto the waste,
What honey is unto the taste,
What fragrance is unto the smell,
What springs of water to a well,
What beauty is in all I see,
All this and more is Christ to me.

W. P. AND H. M. S. CONVENTION.

The fifth Annual Convention of the W. P. and H. M. Society of the M. E. Church, South, was held in the city of Knoxville, Tenn., April 6-12 Miss Belle H. Bennett, of Richmond, Ky., presiding. Church Street Church, of which Dr. James A. Duncan is pastor, was selected as the place of meeting for the convention. Knoxville is in the center of the great valley of East Tennessee, and is noted not only for its "fair women and brave men," its mountain scenery and salubrious climate, but also as being a great financial, commercial and educational point. The warm-hearted hospitality of its people, and their deep interest in the work of the convention, rendered its coming together not only a season of profit, but one of pleasure as well. The exercises were opened on Wednesday evening with a devotional service conducted by the president, Miss Bennett, after which the addresses of welcome by Dr. J. E. Duncan for the city churches, and Mrs. J. E. Chapman for the Conference society, were listened to with marked attention and appreciation. An earnest response was given by Mrs. J. H. Yarbrough, of Nashville, Tenn.

Dainty lunches were served daily during the convention, between the morning and afternoon sessions, by the ladies of the different Methodist Churches, which tended greatly to facilitate the transaction of business and relieve the weariness of long-continued work.

Special thanks are due Miss Mary Gant, of Knoxville, for lovely drives over the city; to Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong for their cordial hospitality, and Dr. and Mrs. Carnes and their accomplished sister, Miss Willie Lord, for many courtesies extended during our stay.

An impressive praise service on Thursday morning, led by Miss Bennett, was followed by earnest responses from many of the delegates.

Mrs. E. E. Wiley, of Greenville, Tenn., made a short talk and cordially invited the ladies to visit the Industrial School, located at Greenville, at the close of the convention.

Dr. David Sullins, of Cleveland, was introduced, and spoke earnestly of his deep interest in the work of the P. and H. M. Society. He said, further, that while the women of America were the truest and best women in the world, that one who deserves the highest commendation for her wisdom and precaution amid most trying situations is Christina, Queen Regent of Spain. At the request of Miss Bennett a special prayer was offered by Dr. Sullins for the Queen and President McKinley, that they may have help and guidance in their decisions at this time. Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, general secretary of the society, stated that the following cablegram had been sent to the Queen: "The Christian womanhood of the United States joins you in your desire for peace."

Rev. T. C. Carroll, in the name of the ladies of Fountain City Church, presented to Miss Bennett a gavel made from a bench of the old church built at Fountain City before 1812.

Mrs. R. L. Blevins, wife of the warden of the penitentiary at Petros, presented to Mrs. Hargrove a paper-weight carved in a design of Easter lilies by a convict at Brushy Mount.

The afternoon sessions were devoted to reports, discussions on various plans of work, and the meeting of committees.

A most delightful feature of the exercises was the special musical selections by the choir, under the direction of Prof. H. E. Parsons. A vote of thanks was heartily tendered them by the ladies.

The report of Mrs. W. D. Kirkland, general treasurer, was heard with deep interest, as the finances form a most important part of the work. She reported number of parsonages helped from all sources up to March 31, 1898, 717. Total amount of money in loans and donations from all sources, $91,254.76.

The report of the general secretary, Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, was full and comprehending, giving much valuable information along all lines of work.

An earnest appeal for Our Homes was made by Miss Emily Allen, present editor of the paper. Miss Mary Helm will take charge in September, and it is the aim of the society to enroll the 10,000 subscribers so earnestly desired by her sister before that time. Miss Allen was elected field editor and general organizer.

An able and impressive sermon was preached on Sunday morning by the pastor, Dr. Duncan. The music, specially selected for the Easter service, and the beautiful decorations, were most pleasing and appropriate. Suspended from a hidden wire were large white letters, decorated in smilax, forming the words, "Easter Day—1898." Three white crosses, bearing the same decoration, adorned the altar. Upon the two outer crosses two beautiful white doves symbolized the purity of the Christ's life, death, and resurrection. Easter lilies, palms and white cut flowers formed a fitting framework for this beautiful picture.

In the afternoon a memorial service, led by Miss Allen, was held in memory of Rev. David Morton, D. D., and Miss Lucinda B. Helm. Dr. Morton, whose death occurred recently at his home in Louisville, was for sixteen years secretary of the Church Extension Board, and a true and valued friend of the P. and H. M. Society. Miss Helm, the founder of the society, and also of its official organ, Our Homes, is loved and honored in Southern Methodism as few women are. Although frail and delicate from childhood, she accomplished a mighty work, and many shall "rise up and call her blessed."

On Sunday evening Miss Mary Bruce, of the Cuban Mission, spoke eloquently of the needs of the Cubans on the island, Key West and other points in Florida. She appealed for help for these helpless, suffering people so near our Southern shores, and for the thousands now in Florida who have fled from Spanish tyranny to American soil. At the close of Miss Bruce's address Mrs. Hargrove requested a contribution to the Cuban relief fund; also to the fund for the establishment of a mission school at Key West. To this request the generous people of Knoxville and many of the delegates nobly responded, the sum contributed amounting to $500 or more.

One of the most enjoyable features of the meeting was a lecture on the "Cumberland Mountaineers," by Mr. John Fox, Jr. Having lived among these people, he is thoroughly conversant with their peculiar dialect, mannerisms and customs, and the great need of missionary work among them. The Sue Bennett Memorial School at London, Ky., named in honor of its founder, was established specially for this mountain work. Miss Bennett, who has charge of the work, says: "Only eternity can tell what this one school, under the control of the P. and H. M. Society, has done for this large section of country."

In response to courteous invitations from the faculty of the State University at Knoxville, the Normal College located at Fountain City, and the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb in the city of Knoxville, many of the ladies visited these places, and were highly pleased and entertained. At the latter institution one is struck with the bright, happy, intelligent faces of the children, and the loving, earnest, painstaking care of the teachers. Surely God is good to these afflicted ones in thus providing for them, and making them happy in their isolation.

Dallas, Texas, was selected as the next place of meeting by the convention.

After expressing cordial thanks to one and all for the many courtesies received and hospitalities extended, a solemn communion service, in which all, both members and visitors, united, closed the exercises of the convention.

On the day following, and last, but not least, among the many pleasant features of this meeting, was a visit to the Industrial School at Greenville, Tenn. This school and home for orphan and helpless children, under the direction of that noble Christian woman, Mrs. E. E. Wiley, is supported mainly by the "big-hearted" people of the Holston Conference. It was opened in 1896 under the supervision of the P. and H. M. Society, and is valued at $7,000; but no estimate can be placed on its value as a home and school for these homeless little ones.

The town of Greenville, about seventy-five miles north of Knoxville, is noted as the birthplace of Andrew Johnson, whose old tailor-shop still stands on the east side of the town with the sign, "A. Johnson, Tailor," still hanging above the door. Just south of the town, on a high bluff overlooking many miles of beautiful country, is his grave and monument.

Greenville is also noted as the place where Gen. Morgan, of Confederate fame, was shot and killed while sitting in his room at the hotel which now bears his name.

As we left these historic scenes, these mountain views and "big-hearted" people of East Tennessee, and turned our faces homeward, we carried them with us in memory, and felt that it was good to have been associated, even for a few days, with a band of women whose lives are devoted to the uplifting of humanity by helping the weak to escape the snares and temptations of ignorance and sin. "OUR DOMESTIC MISSIONS."

MR. EDITOR: Two articles have appeared in recent numbers of the ADVOCATE under the above caption. Both were from the North Mississippi Conference, and from the town of Grenada. They were from the pen of brethren whom I "esteem very highly in love for their work's sake," but am forced to take issue with them on some points.

Bro. Lewis' "policy" is to double the assessment for domestic missions and send capable and efficient men to our mission charges. In his opinion, if that was done, they would soon become self-supporting. But where can the men be found without taking them from the pulpits that are already self-supporting? And to do that would reduce them in a very short time to missions. It will never do to put the men who have failed in mission work in charge of our best appointments. But is it indeed a fact that the mission charges in our Conference are served by men who are lacking in some of the essential elements requisite to ministerial success?

Bro. Lewis says that some of the men serving these charges are sent to them because they can not fill better appointments. If that be true, the situation is indeed appalling. It is worse than appalling. It is a disgrace to the North Mississippi Conference that gave them birth and sent them out with "authority to preach the Word of God, and to administer the holy sacraments in the congregation." Ministerial and pastoral functions are not self-assumed in Episcopal Methodism. These men did not force themselves into the pastorate by simple choice of their own, wholly indifferent to the wishes of the Conference and the needs of the church. They are no impostors. They came into possession of their ministerial and pastoral prerogatives, first, by the voluntary suffrages of the laity of the church after satisfactory examination; and, second, by the voluntary suffrages of the ministers of the church after an approved examination on the course of study prescribed by the Bishops for the admission of preachers into the traveling connection, and by ordination to the office and work of elders in the "church of God." They gave, too, unquestionable evidence of their ability and fitness for this work by two years' efficient and acceptable service in the pastorate before they were elected members of the itinerancy. I can not understand how any man can be lacking in ministerial ability when he is a member of the itinerant ministry of the M. E. Church, South, and a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Bro. Young very pertinently says, "The good men who must serve these mission circuits will unavoidably feel that they are discounted by their brethren." They feel that way now. This feeling is not without foundation, either. It is an actual fact that they are discounted; and it is hurtful, too. The people they serve know it, and they discount them. Faith is fundamental to every economic principle of the redemptive plan. Christ said, "According to your faith so be it unto you." The people must have faith in the wisdom and ability of their spiritual leaders in order to receive the highest benefits of their leadership. Christ made failures. It was not lack of ability on his part, but lack of faith in him on the part of those who heard him. To discount "the good men" serving "these missions circuits" is to weaken, if not to paralyze, their earnest efforts for the kingdom of Christ. That some of "these mission circuits" are able to support their pastors is true beyond all question; but it is as impracticable to get them to accept our views of church finances, and assume and discharge the obligations of supporting their pastors, as it is to get other men to accept the tenets of Arminian theology, and assume and discharge the obligation of membership in our church. There are as many and great differences in communities as there are in forms. Men will have their own peculiar views in reference to their financial obligations to the church, it matters not what may be said or done. There always have been, and always will be, men and communities broad and liberal in their views, and benevolent in their gifts to the cause of Christ. On the other hand, there always have been, and always will be, men and communities narrow in their views and "stingy" in their gifts for religious purposes.

But some of our mission charges, in consequence of loss of finances by death and removal, are not in their present form able to give their pastors a liberal support. The writer knows of a charge that has three appointments that paid a few years ago more than three hundred dollars; now they pay only about one hundred. If some different arrangement could be made, putting some weak and some strong churches together, with wise and judicious management, they might be developed into self-supporting charges.

An observing layman said to the writer recently that our small railroad towns were taking many of our best country churches to "make double-barrel and three-barrel stations," and were reducing the charges from self-supporting to mission appointments.

But is it a real fact that the money appropriated by the Conference Board of Missions to these poor charges is a wastage? To this question every thoughtful and candid man will give a negative answer with an emphatic "No." No money expended by the North Mississippi Conference has yielded more satisfactory returns than the money expended on some of these mission charges. They have been the inexhaustible resources of our ministerial supply. They have produced as many, if not more, preachers than any other charges in our bounds. Some of the most gifted and useful members of our Conference are the rich products of this so-called sterile soil. The mission territory of our Conference has furnished Grenada, Holly Springs, Aberdeen, Greenville, Water Valley, Columbus, and other leading appointments, with some of their most gifted, efficient and acceptable pastors; and these places ought to be willing to contribute liberally of their means to help produce them; and they should remember, too, that fatherhood and motherhood are entitled to honor when sonship lays claim to royal blood.

I have, in conclusion, no "policy" or "plan" to offer. As I see it, there is none to offer better than the one we now have. To stop the appropriations, as Bro. Young suggests, would be to murder men, women and children, who are now suffering almost to the last point of endurance; and they are no vagrants, spongers, and gospel tramps, either. They are Christian heroes and heroines of the purest blood and the highest types. They have in them the material of which martyrs are made. They merit every cent of money they receive from the domestic mission funds, and more. All honor to these heroes and heroines of God! They are enduring more privations and sufferings, and are doing more and harder work, than the preachers in "high steeple." Heaven is smiling them approval, and will soon reward their labors and sufferings with "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE AND ITS WORK.

The Epworth League is a body of Christian workers bandod together, and having for its object the winning of souls to Christ. Inscribed upon its banner is the beautiful motto, "All for Christ." The League has grown and spread out until there is scarcely a village or hamlet in our beloved country where its influence has not gone. Our little organization is but one of the many component parts that go to make up the grand whole; but there is much work for us to do. It rests with us whether we remain in the infantile state, or whether we grow in strength and become a powerful factor for good. We can not remain at a standstill. We must go forward or backward; we must wield an influence for good, or we must wield it for evil.

From a spiritual standpoint, what a magnificent field opens before us! "There is joy in heaven over one sinner that repented." Then, if but one soul is led by us to God, what a grand work will have been accomplished! And what rejoicing will there be in heaven! Angels will shout hosannas to God, and sing, "Glory, glory to God in the highest." How delightful the thought that we may open the mouths of angels in praises to God.

There are numbers right here in our midst who are without God and without hope of eternal life. Surely we may win some of these from the world. They are our brothers, our sisters, our friends; dear to some of us by sacred family ties—and how we love them! Among these let us labor with all the zeal and energy of our natures, prayerfully endeavoring to bring them into the sheepfold of Christ. Particularly should we direct our best efforts toward the youth of our town, whose noble natures are being dwarfed by the evils that surround them. Pitfalls and snares beset them on every side. None save he who has met and been scarred by these evil environments can fully appreciate to what extent the lives of our boys may be affected thereby, nor picture what direful results may follow. These temptations are very alluring, and easily entrap the young; and when it is, perhaps, too late, they may be brought to a realization of their pitiable condition—their self-respect gone, their manhood gone, their love of the beautiful in life so dwarfed and withered as to be almost beyond recall. Shall we stand quietly by and see our boys enticed from the paths of rectitude and away from the teachings of their gentle and loving mothers? God forbid. Can we, as leaguers, fail to see and do our duty when we see our boys being led astray by the enticing hand of sin? We hope not. Then "let us be up and doing." But if we would accomplish anything for good, our own lives must be righteous and godly. We must ourselves live right if we would expect good results from our labors. God will crown our efforts for success if we work with an eye single to his glory.

No pen can do descriptive justice to the Christian life. There is beauty, there is nobility, there is loveliness in the life of the true Christian that is delightful to behold. It sheds a halo of glory all around and about, and is pleasing even to the eyes of the worldly minded, and tends to draw others into the pathway that leads to eternal life. There is such beauty of character in the daily walk of the true Christian that others are constrained to inquire into that which prompts him to lead such a life. Inquiry into the secret motive power that prompts the pure life of the true child of God means to learn something of our Maker; and to learn of God and his boundless love for us, is to be led to love and to serve him. How important, then, that those who profess the religion of Jesus Christ should realize the grave responsibility that rests upon them! They should be very careful to lead lives worthy of emulation; lives that reflect the glory of God; lives so true and so pure that the finger of scorn may not be pointed thereat. True religion gives a peace to the soul, a joy to the heart, and a conscience void of offense toward God and man. Living a righteous life gives one a consciousness of God given strength that does not fear reasonable contact with the world. Live very close to God, and some one of your associates may be drawn away from the world and added to the army of the Lord.

Have you ever stopped to think how much the young convert needs the helpful assistance of the more mature Christian? One who has just espoused the cause of Christ is as a little child, and must be taught to walk as you would teach the child to walk. He has entered upon a life, the pathway of which is new and strange to him. Then take him by the hand and lead him in the way he should go, and ere long he will be able to lead others. When we have succeeded in inducing one of these to join our League, our work with him has but begun. He needs you badly in his first days of religious life. If left to battle alone with Satan and the world, he will almost surely drift back into the old ways. Human nature demands congenial companionship, and if he fails to find that companionship among Christian people, he will go back to the old life to find it. Then, how necessary it is that we should make it pleasant, as well as helpful, to him to belong to our order! Make each new member feel that he is part and parcel of this organization, that he is needed in its work, and not make him think that, after he has joined us, we have no further need of him. Encourage him to take an active part in its exercises, both devotional and literary, not by chiding him for failing or refusing to do so, but by persuasion and by appeal to his higher sense of duty.

J. C. SHUMAKER.

Selections.

A BRIGHT HOPE.

"No stain of earth, no shadow of parting," are the suggestive words used by a popular novelist concerning the future. Nor can anything be added to them which has to do with our present earthly relations. They comprise the substance of the highest felicity from that standpoint.

But sweet as they are, the Christian has a nobler, higher and more exhilarating anticipation. He shall see Jesus, whom, having not seen, he has loved. That will be the culmination, the acme, of the Christian's joy. He shall gaze upon him, and upon him will rest the eyes of his beloved. Who can picture the ineffable sweetness of that meeting, the rapture of that interview? Then there will be exchanged confidences with which no other shall mingle, and the perfection of bliss will know no detraction from earthly stain or fear of parting, either from him our soul loveth or those to whom we have been knit here by God's own appointment.

Bright and joyous as may have been very many of our earthly experiences, over them has ever hung the fear of separation. This has been a shadow ever broadening and extending, until it has included within its gloomy pall the loved ones of our lives, saddening them by anticipation and by experience.

Then our loftiest aspirations, our most refined and exalted aims, how stained they have been, and yet are, by earthly soiling. Then we shall be delivered from contact with the body of death, and our communion with Christ shall know no drawback.—Episcopal Recorder.

My character to-day is, for the most part, simply the resultant of all the thought I have ever had, of all the feelings I have ever cherished, and all the deeds I have ever performed. It is the entirety of my previous years packed and crystallized into the present moment—so that character is the quintessence of biography; so that everybody who knows my character—and there is no keeping character under cover—knows what for forty or more years I have been doing and thinking. Character is, for the most part, simply habit become fixed.—Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst.

Melancholy spreads itself betwixt heaven and earth, like envy between man and man, and is an everlasting mist.—Lord Byron.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

(Written for the P. and H. M. Convention at Bay St. Louis.)

(Concluded.)

This picture, "which hangs on memory's wall," is presented as an illustration of the work of the Ladies' Aid in its best estate. Many pastors can rise up to call it blessed; but its sympathies and efforts were necessarily confined within the narrow limits of the circuit and station. It was simply impossible that in an age of such rapid movement, outward and upward, woman's work should remain thus restricted. The Ladies' Aid has accomplished her mission, and retires before her younger and greater sister, the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. This organization does all that was accomplished by its predecessor for the local work, while the connectional bond has so broadened the range of its vision that its beneficent efforts can be directed to the utmost limits of our ecclesiastical domain.

I have given you a picture of a model Ladies'-Aid Society. Let me now present to you a model W. P. and H. M. Society in the Bay Saint Louis auxiliary. This I can do without boasting, as I have belonged to it for so short a time, and it certainly deserves to have its praises sounded abroad. Since its organization, nine years ago, it has raised several thousand dollars for the home and connectional work. The commodious parsonage within the range of your vision is largely the product of its zeal and liberality. Hundreds of its hard-earned dollars have gone into our beautiful new church, and hundreds more into Harmon Chapel, in the northern suburbs of our city.

Within the last six months, besides meeting its regular dues at home and abroad, it has sent off the value of fifty-two dollars in a barrel of clothing and provisions to one of our needy preachers on the Western frontier, besides adding much to the furniture of our parsonage, and putting on additions and improvements. Thus the home preacher and the Western missionary have both been made to rejoice, for it has been well said that in the arithmetic of heaven our blessings multiply by division. Time would fail me to tell (if I knew them all) the many noble, self-denying deeds of this heroic band of women; so I return to the general field.

Our work is now represented in thirty-eight Conferences. Our aim is not only to provide a home for every homeless itinerant in our midst, but for those who labor in the distant Western wilds. Through our efforts the shanty and the dug-out are giving place to the neat and comfortable parsonage, while our Supply Department is constantly sending out boxes and barrels of food and clothing to the families of these heroic men on the frontier.

We have stretched out our motherly arms to the orphan and the outcast. The Home and Industrial School at Greenville, Tenn., is the first-fruit of our effort in this direction.

We are solving problems in sociology in the establishment of schools for the mountain people of Kentucky and Georgia, and for the heathen and semi-heathen children of the Chinese and Japanese in California, and the Cubans in Florida.

City mission work is rapidly developing in our hands. Homes for fallen women are opening doors of hope and opportunity for these poor, social outcasts. What hands so fit as ours to throw out the life-line to these perishing ones sinking beneath the waves of sin and the cruel scorn of a self-righteous world!

Work goes bravely on in Nashville, Dallas, San Antonio and Helena. May God bless our efforts and increase the number of our devoted home missionaries till every city in Southern Methodism shall have its Rescue Home!

The Department of Press Work is one of the strong arms of our service. Streams of light, focussed upon the problems and needs of the hour by the guiding hand of Lucinda B. Helm, have beamed from the fair pages of Our Homes upon our minds and hearts, kindling their energy and enthusiasm. Many leaflets have winged their way to us with their message of warning or of cheer. Our brethren of the tripod have accorded a generous recognition to our work, sometimes giving pages, or even a whole issue, to its advocates. It has the hearty endorsement of our Bishops and other connectional officers, and of our preachers as a body. If there is a preacher within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference so narrow and so selfish as to withhold his sympathy from our organization, we are happy in being unacquainted with him.

We are glad to report a material enlargement during the last year, both in numbers and finances.

So much for our work. It is needless for us to say that our leaders, from the president and general secretary of the Central Committee to the Conference and local officers, are among the most consecrated and talented women of Southern Methodism.

We think our decade of life shows that we have met our opportunities to the present hour. How shall we meet the increasing needs and demands of the future? We can only answer this question upon our knees, assured that He who so greatly blesses and enlarges our work will give us grace and strength to enter every opening door. Then, as harbingers of the Prince of Peace, we may face the "great to-be" and cry exultantly: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in!" THE NEW CHINESE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The following from a letter of Miss Haygood to Mrs. Butler is encouraging: "A few weeks ago I sent you a copy of the prospectus of a new school for girls, noteworthy as being the first organized effort upon the part of Chinamen to provide for the education of their daughters. In this prospectus the names of two Chinese young women who had been educated in Christian schools—having enjoyed a long period of study in a school of the M. E. Mission in China, and later several years of study under the guardianship of the same church in America, and have returned to China fully equipped as medical missionaries—were announced as teachers. They are already doing a beautiful work at Kin-Kiang, and their medical skill having attracted the attention of the officials interested in plans for the new school, they greatly desired to secure their services as teachers. The young ladies, feeling that it was a fine opportunity to help their Chinese sisters, with the cordial approval of their missionary friends, allowed their names to be used. As the plans were matured, it became evident that the Chinese officials in charge thought only of establishing a school upon a Confucian basis. . . . That they have ever had a thought of such a school for their girls is a proof of the great awakening that has already come to China, and is a new call to us to be ready to meet the ever-widening opportunities that are coming to us."

Some extracts from a letter from these brave, courageous women to the editor of the North China Daily News is commendable, and should serve as a rebuke to us for yielding to the seductions of the evil one in a land where there is so much to encourage: "If you, Mr. Editor, give such welcome to this sign of progress as is expressed in your editorial, then much more should those of our own people who may be prepared to appreciate its possibilities. Yet the joy might not be without alloy. . . . It was with the express understanding that there should be entire religious liberty that we consented to take up this work, and religious liberty would admit all who found moral and spiritual support in Confucianism to avail themselves of it. . . . Had the statement been made that twice a year days would be set apart as memorial days to these distinguished personages, upon which occasion their lives should be reviewed to us in a manner to inspire young girls by their examples, no one would join more heartily in paying honor to their memory than ourselves. But the idea of sacrifice to human beings seems too blind in the light of this nineteenth century for any participation on our part. . . . But honor to the best of human beings is not an unmixed blessing when it creats an idol and holds the eyes of the devotees down to earth. We do not think it the sentiment that will make the education of women successful or even safe. . . .

"The spirit that can mold the hearts of men has been abroad and wrought in the hearts of many, or they would not so ardently desire something progressive; but we regret to see it quenched even in a reviving flood of Confucianism. Let us entreat you, friends of China's progress, to lend your influence to the leaders of our people, that they strive not to bottle the new wine (spirit) of progress in old bottles, else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish."

MRS. E. D. JONES.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. W. Cammack, P. C., South Vicksburg charge, April 15, 1898: "I am glad to be able to report progress in this part of the city. The social meetings of the church are well attended; finances are well up to date. We have just closed a revival meeting, conducted by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of Forest, Miss., resulting in fourteen accessions and twenty, or more, conversions and restorations. To God be all the glory."

Rev. T. W. Brown, P. C., Ocean Springs, Miss., April 18, 1898: "We have just closed a meeting here which resulted in nine accessions to the church of helpful young people, and in the revival, in part, of the church. The preaching was done by Revs. J. P. Drake, C. F. Emery, and the pastor. While we feel that scarcely the surface is stirred, we thank God and take courage. Our second quarterly meeting was here yesterday and day before. Bro. Powell, P. E., was with us considerably improved in health and hopeful. Yesterday Bro. W. T. Beall, of Moss Point, gave us two good sermons."

Rev. J. L. Jordan, P. C., Ameriens circuit, Mississippi Conference: "This may be termed a land which flows with 'milk and honey,' especially at this season of the year, with fresh butter in abundance as a result of the abundant flow of milk, which good things, with other edibles, frequently find their way to the parsonage. We feel very grateful for the many kind remembrances of our people toward their pastor. 'The lines are fallen unto us in pleasant places.' May the good Lord bless them in this life and more abundantly in the life to come! The religious outlook is brightening and very encouraging; congregations (seven) are large and steadily increasing. A more attentive and appreciative people it has never been my privilege to try to preach to. We have six Sabbath-schools in operation doing good work, and expect to start another shortly. Pray for us."

Rev. D. W. Bubb, Louisville circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "The outlook for a prosperous year is encouraging. With the opening of Spring our Sunday-school work has received a new impetus. We expect a more prosperous year than last. Our people seem to be recovering from their paralyzed condition occasioned by their disappointed hopes in the price of last year's cotton crop, and are now taking hold of church work again with a commendable zeal. We have had our church at this place repainted, which is white, with no stripes, the emblem of which means something, and can never be improved upon on wood houses. While there are some exceptional cases of intoxication in our bounds, they are growing fewer and further between all the while. We have a very strong anti-whisky sentiment here. Some of it has been made at the end of bitter experience. Our Epworth Leagues are improving steadily, and especially in their devotional parts; not behind in other parts. One of the saddest things connected with our work is indifference toward taking our church papers. Our people admit they are worthy, and all that, but complain at their price. Comparing them with the leading secular papers, I tell them those papers are run off of daily type already set; consequently, cost but little. Also the difference between those papers in usefulness to us is about the difference between Jaynes' Almanac and the Bible. Send me some sample copies of our paper. We will do better yet. Our new presiding elder has been around—Bro. Oakley—who seems to be perfectly at home with his new harness on; looks after the interests of the church in detail; preaches well, mixes well. You remember he is one of our delegates to the General Conference. He will be felt while there (if he steps on anybody's toes). God bless our elder and editor!"

A few days ago we came across a letter which we wrote, but had not sent. As we read it over we were very glad that it had not been sent, and it was speedily torn up and thrown into the waste-basket. It might have hurt the feelings of the one for whom it was written, and made a breach hard to heal. It is better to think twice before speaking. It is better to think three times before writing. The spoken word may be forgotten. The written word may be laid up as a lasting witness. Many a letter would better never have been written, or, if written, never sent. We may well be careful not to hurt where it may be avoided, and it is possible to avoid it very often.—The Herald and Presbyter.

The American working man, while he works shorter hours, works harder than the working man of any other nation. He works not only with his hands but with his head. He is an intelligent worker and produces more in a given length of time than the worker of any other nation. He not only exhausts himself physically, but mentally; not only muscularly, but nervously.

The consequence is that while he is better fed and better housed, he is not, as a rule, as healthy a man as his brother working-man of European countries. Moreover, like all Americans, the American working-man is prone to disregard his health and frequently even takes pride in abusing it. It rests with American wives to protect their husbands in this respect. A little watchfulness on the part of the wife will frequently save her husband from a long spell of ill-health and possibly from some fatal illness. When a man feels "out of sorts" it is because his digestion is disordered or his liver is torpid. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will promptly correct these disorders. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It restores the appetite, makes digestion perfect and the liver active. It purifies the blood and tones the nerves. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, bronchitis, asthma, weak lungs, lingering cough, spitting of blood and disease of the throat and nasal cavities. Thousands have told the story of its wonderful merits in letters to Dr. Pierce. It may be had at any medicine dealer's.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me of a severe case of poisoning of the blood," writes Mrs. Selia Ricca, of Coast, Santa Cruz Co., Cal. "That was two years ago, and I have not had a boil or sore of any kind since."

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. Dealers in medicines sell them.

So the e'erwear'ed pilgrim, as he fares
Along life's Summer waste, at times is fanned,
Even at noontide, by the cool, sweet airs
Of a serener and a holier land,
Fresh as the morn, and as the dewfall bland.
Breath of the blessed heaven for which we pray,
Blow from the eternal hills! make glad our earthly way!

ANGLO-AMERICAN FRIENDLINESS.

One of the most gratifying signs of the times is the recent development of the most cordial relations between the English people and the citizens of our great Republic, which friendly feeling, it appears, is also shared by the governmental representatives of the two nations. This natural and outspoken friendliness has not long existed, for, only a short time ago, on both sides of the Atlantic, authors, editors, and politicians, with few exceptions, spoke slightingly and contemptuously of their British or American kinsmen, as the case might be.

The English have for generations been noted for their insolent pride and self conceit, and their conviction that nothing good could come out of America has been slow to be dispelled. The question, "Who reads an American book?" was the sly way the Britishers had half a century ago of dismissing summarily the claims of American literature. During the time of Charles Dickens, English novelists (Dickens among them), travelers and journalists constantly poked fun at the American people, and spoke contemptuously of American literature and of our manners and customs. Time, however, has wrought a mighty change. All varieties of American literature, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe," have gained the attention and even the hearty admiration of the English reading public. And both from the press, and from the leaders in Church and State, have come recently unmistakable expressions of profound sympathy with American interests and aims, and of lofty appreciation of American character and institutions.

While for some time many Americans in high life have been aping British dress, customs and forms of speech, and in derision have been fitly termed "Anglomaniacs," the bulk of our population have had little sympathy with and admiration for English traits, pretensions, and progress. This coolness on our part, however, has now well-nigh vanished, and in both nations the wonderful unity of the Anglo-Saxon peoples is more clearly recognized than ever before.

The formation of a definite alliance between England and the United States—a measure warmly advocated by some—would in all probability prove unwise and unsafe for us, for, on account of England's vast possessions, aggressive policy, and the jealousy of her power entertained by other European nations, we would ofttimes be dragged into wars and complications that we might otherwise escape. Still, the growing friendliness between the two nations ought in every way to be encouraged, and in grave emergencies it may prove of immense value to each.

There exist between us and our English cousins several strong bonds of union, which serve to make the Anglo-Saxon race the most powerful and progressive on the globe. Having descended from a common ancestry, and having the same language and, to a large extent, the same literature, laws, customs, and religion, there are the strongest possible reasons for the continued growth of friendly relations between the English and the Americans. Rightly does a well-known historian say: "Let it be granted grave issues have arisen in the past to separate us; yet, after all, our interests and our sympathies, like our national histories, have more in common than they have apart. The progress of each country now reacts for good upon the other."

English dominance in China and in Eastern affairs will prove of no small advantage to American interests in that region as well as to those of Great Britain. England exerts a tremendous influence in the East, and will not always tamely submit to Russian encroachment. The enlargement of her dominion and influence in China and in Central Africa means the speedy civilizing, enfranchising and Christianizing of those benighted and oppressed countries.

It means no little for the future of Protestantism and civilization, and the spread of pure Christianity, that the English-speaking race, comprising a population of upwards of a hundred millions of the most highly civilized, liberty-loving and progressive people on earth, control the bulk of the commerce, wealth, power and territory of the world. Whatever lands England has gained by conquest, or otherwise, she has ruled beneficially, civilizing the people, giving them a larger degree of political liberty than they ever enjoyed before, and removing all restrictions upon commerce; hence, the extension of her influence results favorably to American interests. In our complications with Spain, England has frankly manifested decided sympathy in our favor, and her attitude is of vast benefit to us. Her action in pronouncing coal an article "contraband of war" will be of incalculable service to us.

In view of these facts, how deeply significant and appropriate are the following words of Archdeacon Farrar, uttered in his address on Gen. Grant at Westminster Abbey in 1885: "Whatever there be between the two nations to forget and forgive is forgotten and forgiven. If the two peoples which are one, be true to their duty, who can doubt that the destinies of the world are in their hands?" The Anglo-American sentiment now prevailing is most beautifully expressed in a poem written but a few weeks since by Alfred Austin, the successor of Lord Tennyson as England's poet laureate, which we here present as a fitting close to what we have written:

What is the voice I hear
On the winds of the Western sea?
Sentinel, listen from out Cape Clear,
And say what the voice may be.
'Tis a proud, free people calling land to a people proud and free,
And it says to them, "Kinsmen, hail, we severed have been too long;
Now, let us have done with a worn-out tale—
The tale of an ancient wrong;
And our friendship last long as love doth last,
And be stronger than death is strong."

Another anthem, sons of the self same race
And blood of the self-same clan,
Let us speak with each other face to face
And answer as man to man,
And loyally love and trust each other
As none but free men can.

And now fling them out the breeze,
Shamrock, thistle, and rose,
And the star-spangled banner unfurl with these—
A message to friends and foes,
Wherever the sails of peace are seen and wherever the war wind blows.

A message to bond and thrall to wake,
For, wherever we come, we twain;
The throne of the tyrant shall rock and quake,
And his menace be void and vain.
For you are the lords of a strong young land;
We are lords of the main.

Yea, this is the voice of the bluff March gale,
We severed have been too long;
But now we have done with a worn-out tale,
The tale of an ancient wrong.
And ever our friendship last long as love doth last,
And be stronger than death is strong.

NEW ORLEANS CITY MISSION AND CHURCH EXTENSION SOCIETY.

The anniversary of the New Orleans City Mission and Church Extension Society was held last Sabbath night at Louisiana Avenue Church, the attendance being quite large. The presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener, occupied the chair. The address was delivered by Dr. I. W. Cooper, of the Mississippi Conference, who made a strong presentation of the obligations of all Christian people to work each in his own proper sphere for the evangelization of the world, dwelling also upon the lofty incentives to such work that are inherent in the Christian religion. The address was much enjoyed. An admirable service of song was rendered by the Louisiana Avenue choir. The usual collection was taken by the presiding elder. It is hoped that this collection, added to funds already in hand and other funds to be raised by subscription, will suffice for the erection of a suitable domicile for Tchoupitoulas Church during the present year. As soon as this is accomplished, Douglass Square Mission will be provided with a house of worship. Indeed, this work ought to be taken up as soon as possible, as the hired house now in use is entirely inadequate to the wants of the mission. McCarthy's Square Mission is another "field white unto the harvest." If our Methodist people in the city would rally to these enterprises as they should, our progress would be much more rapid than it is. The three places above designated are points where the gospel is sadly needed, and where the people are utterly unable to build houses of worship or contribute more than a mere pittance for the support of the ministry. Yet all of them, if provided with a house of worship and supplied with a minister, will, in a few years, develop into good active churches. It should be remembered in this connection that at the Sunday-school anniversary, held two or three weeks since, Douglass Square Mission, which is in its infancy, took the banner in fair competition with all the Sunday-schools of the city. We hope the men of means among us will realize the importance of this work, and give largely for its promotion, and that those less favored of fortune will also give according to ability. The truth is, that instead of ten or twelve churches in this great metropolitan city, we ought to have within a few years doubled the number.

THE MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME.

About a month has passed since the Mississippi Orphans' Home was opened. There are sixteen inmates already, and others will arrive in a very few days. A friend of ours, who visited the institution recently, says, "It is an inspiration to see how happy and well-behaved the little ones are." Just as we anticipated and predicted, Bro. Burton is proving himself the right man in the right place. His assistants also are meeting all demands. Four hours each morning are spent in study, the exercises being invariably opened with a Bible lesson. Then come dinner and "play time," and afterward some light work. A fine two-acre garden and a fifteen-acre oats-patch are valuable parts of the plant. Two good milk cows have been donated recently. Let our people everywhere remember this, the last, but not the least, of the institutions of Mississippi Methodism. Especially let no pastor forget the observance of Children's Day.

A MISTAKE.

In our last issue, by mistake, we described our "Combination Bible" as a "Family Bible." We have a "Combination Family Bible," which we will offer after our return from Baltimore. The Bible which we are now offering is not a family Bible, technically speaking, though it is far more worthy of the title than the Bibles which usually bear the name—books that are intended to be used as parlor ornaments. The Bible we sell is for use. It is a little larger than the Bourgeois Bible which we have been handling for the past two or three years. The offer, as now given, describes it exactly.

AT BALTIMORE.

On Monday next we will take our departure for the General Conference. It goes without saying that we are likely to be absent at least three weeks. During our absence those who desire to communicate with us personally should address us at Altamont Hotel, Baltimore, Md. All letters pertaining to ADVOCATE business should be sent, as usual, to 512 Camp street.

A NEW BOOK.

INTUSSUSCEPTION; OR, ILEUS SUCCESSFULLY TREATED. By E. D. Beach, M. D., New Orleans.

The above is the title of a small pamphlet which lies upon our table by courtesy of the distinguished author. It was first published in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal, and afterwards given to the public in pamphlet form. The new treatment for this exceedingly dangerous disease, which is here given to the medical fraternity and the general public, has been successful in every case in which it has been tried. If there is any better test of the value of a remedy than this, we would like to know what it is. In giving publicity to this treatment, Dr. Beach is actuated solely by philanthropic motives. Though for many years he ranked among the most successful practitioners of this city, he has now retired from practice on account of his advanced age, and has, therefore, no pecuniary interests involved, or professional ambitions to gratify. The brochure is written in language which can be easily understood by any person of ordinary intelligence.

Among the many felicitous utterances of Bishop Newman at the New England Conference, he said that he had no sympathy with presiding elders who assumed an air of inscrutable mystery with ministers concerning their probable appointments. It was the presiding elder's business, said the Bishop, to know where he intended to appoint his preachers, and he should be entirely frank and open in talking with them about the matter.—Zion's Herald.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE Y. M. C. A.

MR. EDITOR: The Christian young men of Millsaps College are earnestly striving to furnish their Y. M. C. A. room in the college building. They have met with encouragement and help, but will need much more to carry their plans to success. Nothing will so contribute to the spiritual comfort and happiness of these young men away from their homes as the furnishing and equipping of this room. This statement alone should bring a response from the parents, other relatives and friends of every Millsaps boy. Here is their appeal. Yours,

H. M. DUBOSE.

We, as a Committee of Finance, have been instructed by our Y. M. C. A. to solicit the help of friends of this institution in regard to the furnishing of our hall. Our hall does not do credit to our institution, and we have all the session been putting forth every effort to make it what it should be. We want to so furnish it that it may be the most attractive room in the college, and, in order to do this, we must necessarily have at least five hundred dollars; and knowing that you are a friend to our college, and fully appreciate our efforts, we do not hesitate in asking you to do for us all you can in this good work.

Truly your friends,

W. MCN. CAMPBELL,
Chairman,
W. W. HOLMES,
R. A. CLARK,
E. B. MARSHALL.

HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH THEM.

We would advise our readers to be on the watch for those fellows. There isn't a nook or corner in our beloved State which can afford to harbor them, far less to welcome them and bid them thrive. These "latter-day saints" are not entitled to the fellowship of true Christians. They themselves unchurch all other professed Christians, and hold that salvation is to be found alone in the Joe Smith organization. O the wretched pretense of such a thing! Again, they place the book of Mormon on a par with the Bible, and make Joseph Smith as much a prophet of God as Isaiah or Ezekiel was. They clothe their priesthood with divine power, and whosoever refuses allegiance and obedience to it is to be damned forever. They debase or obscure many of the plain teachings of the Bible and set up doctrines which are baseless, false, and monstrous. They believe in polygamy, whether they practice it or not, and have never squarely repudiated this dirty principle either openly or in secret. The best thing any decent man or woman can do is to turn the hook upon any Mormon elder that comes into the neighborhood, whether he styles himself a latter-day saint or a former-day sinner.—Michigan Advocate.

THE DENOMINATIONAL PRESS.

We believe thoroughly in the denominational press. It constitutes one of the most important agencies in the spread of religion, and it deserves the substantial support of the religious community. We need scarcely say that there is a wide range of value among these newspapers; but very few of them are so meager and trifling as to be wholly unworthy of support by the constituency which they seek to represent. Speaking as we do from a wide observation of these journals, we can say that the denominational papers, as a rule, stand for what is most spiritual and most intelligent in the religious life of to-day. Their limitations are mainly traceable to the indifference of church members to the importance of a vigorous denominational press as one element of sectarian strength and usefulness. They can not be read without animating the religious life and stimulating the church energy of the subscriber and his family. Ministers do well to encourage the circulation of these papers in their congregations.—The Church Economist.

If I were asked to name the one pitfall that Satan digs for careless feet, I would unhesitatingly say, "It is the parading of city streets after nightfall by young people—and particularly by young girls." Let the curfew bell sound its tocsin of warning and bring in these modern nomads of the street to the shelter of their homes at earlier hours.—Richmond Dispatch.

The Holston Methodist, always a high-grade paper, is eclipsing its own record since it moved its headquarters to Nashville, and fell into the hands of Barbee & Smith as publishers. If it keeps on improving, it will be nearly as good as the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE after a while.

We are pleased to learn that Sister Beall, wife of Rev. S. B. Beall, of the Louisiana Conference, has been restored to health after a serious illness of five months. Bro. Beall is in high favor with his people, and is doing fine work. The new church at Berwick has been completed at a cost of $3,000, and is spoken of as a very handsome one.

Dr. J. S. Hutchinson, of the Baltimore Advocate, having resigned, Rev. J. H. Zimmerman has taken his place. Dr. Hutchinson has filled the position admirably. Editors as bright and brainy as he are not found every day. His successor also wields a vigorous pen, and will, no doubt, keep the paper up to its former high standard.

We invite attention to the notice of Homer Training School on our fifth page in this issue. This school invites correspondence with ministers who have sons or daughters to educate. Himself the son of an itinerant minister, Prof. Johnston knows how hard it is usually for a minister to educate his children out of his meagre salary, and will do all in his power to make it possible for every minister to educate his children.

On last Sabbath morning we had the pleasure of hearing an interesting and edifying sermon from Dr. I. W. Cooper at Parker Memorial Church. We also had the pleasure of meeting the Doctor in a social way. He is in good health and spirits, and is as much in love with Moss Point as ever. We give him warning, however, that his days in Moss Point are numbered. In a little more than two years he will have to change his habitat, even though his tears fall like rain.

If you criticise your brethren, and complain of the church, and especially if you distrust your preacher, your son will conclude that you are caught in a trap and that he will avoid your error by keeping out of the church.—Arkansas Methodist.

NOTICE.

To the Presiding Elders of Mississippi and North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: I want in each district an active young Epworth Leaguer to act as district secretary. I want one who can and will push the work. Will each of you kindly send me the name and address of such a person for your district? We bespeak your co-operation in this work. Fraternally yours,

HOMER TRAINING-SCHOOL.

We are glad to find in this State such a school as the Homer Training school, at Homer, La. We have long felt the need of just such a school. Its faculty consists of university and conservatory trained men and women, who are well equipped for the work of preparing the youth of the land for entrance into the best colleges and universities. If you wish your boy prepared for Vanderbilt, Yale, Princeton or Harvard, you need no longer send him out of the State. If it is your wish to give your daughter an opportunity to obtain a real education, such as can be had at Bryn Mawr, Vassar or Wellesley, she can now be prepared for same within the borders of Louisiana.

The Homer Training-school is the product of careful thought; its curriculum is in accordance with the recommendation of the committee of ten. Under the efficient management of Mr. J. S. Johnston, who was graduated at Centenary College in 1890, and who received the degree of Master of Arts at Vanderbilt University in 1894, this school is enjoying a well deserved and surprising success. Mr. Johnston has had experience in the best training-schools of the land, having been instructor of mathematics in the University School at Nashville, Tenn., and he has demonstrated the fact that a good preparatory school can be a success in Louisiana.

"WHERE LIES THE MUSIC?"

Some years ago when he had reached the zenith of his fame, and the matchless music of his violin was thrilling the souls of thousands in the Old World, Paganini was advertised to give a recital in Paris. The night of the concert arrived. Within the building myriads of gas jets shone upon the faces of the fairest ladies and noblest courtiers of the day, and reflected the sparkle of priceless jewels. The glittering horse shoe was a gorgeous sight, as it curved from box to box, its tiers laden with an expectant multitude ready to smile or sob with the music that was to float from Paganini's enchanting touch.

A storm of applause, and the tall figure of the great impressario, slender and graceful as a young pine tree, stood bowing low before the auditory. Paganini raised his hand, and a sudden hush fell over the house while he said: "My violin has been removed, and a coarser instrument substituted. Now I will show you that the music is not in any violin, but in me." He turned, and sweetly, grandly, at his call the richest music swelled from the instrument, filling the theatre from stage to dome with melodies so heavenly they seemed to vibrate from angel harps. Wherein lay the music? Surely not in the battered instrument of meaner mold than wont; no, the power was in the touch that swayed the strings. Those chords of melody came from the soul of the violinist, no matter what the quality of the instrument.

In life's audience of restless souls God is the master musician, and his touch upon the soul of man makes earth's sweetest music; makes the harmony needed in life.

That God brings the music into lives in his own way, and not in the way we had planned, has been forcibly impressed upon me by a circumstance connected with the Mississippi Epworth League Conference, now in session in our city. I had planned "to take the Conference in;" to find sweet "music" in their enthusiastic singing, and to thrill with the harmony that prevails in large religious gatherings. But a severe illness just before the Conference convened has made it impossible for me to go to the meetings, and I have missed the "music" I had thought to get from the Epworth Leaguers. But God has sent music into my life through another channel, and because he has done so and because of the sweet melody that rings in my soul, I realize afresh that he knows the music our souls need better than we, ourselves. Instead of the rich melody of many voices in an Epworth rally song and the bright glances of many faces, God has sent my "music" through one voice sweetly telling the joy of his Christ-awakened soul; my brightness through a face recently illumined by his grace.

This was music so soft, so heavenly that it fell like balm on my convalescent nerves, and I realized the beauty of answered prayer. Oh! indeed, "there is joy that never can be told, when a soul that long has wandered, comes within the Savior's fold."

So, though Jesus did not send my "music" in the way I had planned, he sent it in another way, and as I write I am as happy as is nature in this perfect April day and as the leaguers are in the splendid Conference they are having.

MARTHA ANDREWS.

Meridian, Miss., April 16, 1898.

WHAT IT SHOULD NOT DO.

Many brethren have essayed the task of advising what our General Conference "ought to do." I will endeavor to suggest some things it should not do. It should not increase the number of charges in a district. A quarterly meeting without a Sabbath in it is about as near a nonentity as any church meeting can be. If we have presiding elders at all, let them have a chance of helping to win souls to Christ, as well as ask the twenty-eight questions of a Quarterly Conference and have the pastor answer them in the presence of about two or three stewards. I think a presiding elder should have time to do some pastoral work and assist in protracted meetings at each Quarterly Conference he holds. My experience satisfies me that a presiding elder is better help for the pastor than the evangelist, or a brother from another charge. Twelve charges should be the maximum number in a presiding elder's district. Forty-eight Quarterly Conferences, in twelve months, leave a Sabbath each for District Conference, Annual Conference, Sabbath-school Conference and Epworth League Conference, and he should have the privilege of attending these very important gatherings.

The General Conference should not increase the number of Bishops. We should only have six or seven Bishops, until our Annual Conferences increase to the number of fifty to sixty. Let us have a Bishop for every nine Annual Conferences in the States. We can annually send one to the foreign field, and six can hold sixty Conferences with ease, and have ample time to hold the various other meetings encumbent on them, visit our institutions of learning, and meet other usual demands. A tour of ten weeks, with intervals of rest intervening, covering, say, fifteen weeks, leaves thirty-seven weeks for other general and incidental calls, and a nice period for rest and recuperation. I do not wish to impose on our Bishops as much work as on our other brethren of the itinerancy.

The General Conference need not change the laws governing pastors in their relations to our local preachers. The law is plain and simple; and anyone competent to preach the gospel is competent to understand them. The General Conference ought not refuse to unite with the other branches of the great Methodist family in all foreign mission work, and to provide a hymn book, to be used by all of English-speaking Methodism.

I feel free to write thus, as a genuine lover of the Methodist Church; as one of the fathers, being threescore and ten, and raised at Methodist headquarters, and having received instruction from a Soule, McFerrin, Green, Bascomb, and a score more of such lights; and am to-day the oldest effective member of my Conference. RECTUS.

DR. EVANS' LECTURE IN VICKSBURG.

Dr. Charles F. Evans, formerly of New Orleans, now of Lexington, Ky., delivered his lecture on "Tact as an Element of Success," on the evening of April 19, in the city of Vicksburg, under the auspices of the Epworth League of Crawford Street Church. For more than an hour he held the attention of his audience undivided, and the verdict, discriminating and unanimous, was one of cordial approval. Dr. Evans is not content to fill the lower role of a rhetorician, but the philosophic mind is manifest throughout.

Tact was shown to be a most valuable quality, worth more practically than unusual mental abilities, or wealth, or power, or social position, or learning, or even genius.

The varied learning, the wide and discriminating reading, of the lecturer, all were observed in this production.

Dr. Evans is a master of assemblies. He strikes all chords "from grave to gay, from lively to severe." Humor blends with substantial wisdom, and gives it grace and ornament. As you listen there is a playful gleam, a flash of mild surprise, and then a deeper, broader wave. He catches the varied minds and moods of his hearers. In the Doctor's speech, as Wordsworth sings of the Scottish river,

> "For busy thoughts the stream flowed on
> In foaming agitation,
> And slept in many a crystal pool
> For quiet contemplation."

Occasionally the true actor is before you as he renders some quaint and mirth moving incident. Then the heroic things of history, those that glorify human life, are summoned to stir your heart. The lecture should be widely heard. It will give to any public an hour's true enjoyment, an hour's profit, and it is destined to become famous.

A CORRECTION.

MR. EDITOR: Since I wrote you the letter published in your last issue, the Committee of Arrangements for the General Conference at Baltimore has published a statement regarding the sale of seats, which materially alters the situation. I have also received personal information which warrants the statement that the seats to be sold are in the gallery, and not on the main floor; that it is expected the seats will be sold only to Baltimore people who buy them to assist in meeting the expenses of the General Conference, and that there will be abundant room on the main floor for all visitors. I am glad to make this explanation and to recall what I said regarding the arrangements being "very unfortunate."

Yours truly, M. B. CHAPMAN.

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to April, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

A GENTLEMAN.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

I knew him for a gentleman,
By signs that never fail;
His coat was rough and rather worn,
His cheeks were thin and pale—
A lad who had his way to make,
With little time for play—
I knew him for a gentleman
By certain signs to-day.

He met his mother on the street;
Off came his little cap.
My door was shut; he waited there
Until I heard his rap.
He took the bundle from my hand,
And when I dropped my pen,
He sprang to pick it up for me,
This gentleman of ten.

He does not push the crowd along;
His voice is gently pitched;
He does not fling his hooks about
As if he were bewitched.
He stands aside to let you pass;
He always shuts the door;
He runs on errands willingly
To forge and mill and store.

He thinks of you before himself;
He serves you if he can;
For in whatever company
The manners makes the man.
At ten or forty 'tis the same,
The manners tell the tale;
And I discern the gentleman
By signs that never fail.

Harper's Young People.

THE WIVES OF GREAT MEN.

In the recently published Family Letters of the Rossettis, the editor, Mr. William G. Rossetti, takes occasion to pay a filial tribute to the mother who filled a large place in his love. As the wife of an artist and the mother of a family of artists and poets, this lady was encumbered with care, for though brains in plenty were in the circle, they were not largely endowed with practical talents. A remark attributed to her, to the effect that she had longed for intellectual keenness in her husband and children, but sometimes wished that they had also had more common sense, reminded me of the pithy expression of an American lady, whose daughter had married a well-to-do merchant. She said: "We have never had anything but genius in the family. It will be a change to have a little money, too."

The biographer of Doctor Holmes calls attention to the tact, charm, ability and exquisite unselfishness of Mrs. Holmes, who, during a long and happy married life, made her husband's success possible by the constancy with which she kept the home atmosphere radiant and serene, the comfort she maintained in the household, and the ease with which she enabled her husband to pursue his own occupations. Not long ago, in a drawing-room meeting composed of elegant society women, I heard an eminent clergyman say of his wife: "She has always stood between me and the world. She has made it possible for me to be a public teacher. A thousand interruptions, a thousand difficulties are every week removed from my path by her gentle and efficient aid."

It would seem that a great man, more than any other, needs a loving and unselfish comrade in his wife. Princess Bismarck thus aided her husband by loyal companionship and self-sacrificing support. Mrs. Gladstone has been as a ministering angel to the "Grand Old Man," since the years when he and she were young together. The theory of the "new woman" would put aside the lovely old-fashioned ideal of wifehood which is founded in the primitive needs of the race. But theories aside, in plain daily life, men require the comforting, sustaining and stimulating companionship of congenial natures in their wives, and both great men and commonplace men seem alike in this.

"W has been writing his book," said a friend to me, "and I have been mounting guard before the door. I have seen the visitors, quieted the children, given him the sort of breakfasts and dinners he likes best, played the music he prefers, kept the machinery from creaking. I have a large share in W's books, though nobody ever knows what it is."

"Mr. D was at the turning-point of his career," said Mr. D's partner, speaking of a man who had recently died in very sad circumstances, "but he never held up his head after his wife was taken away. He lost ambition, and things slipped away from his grasp. If she had lived, D would have been known far and wide as a successful man. But he really ceased growing and stopped caring for things when he lost her."

It is an interesting study, this of the relations of men and women. And it may almost be taken for granted that a truly successful man in any line must have an able, but a very unselfish wife.—Christian Intelligencer.

QUESTIONS FOR YOUNG MEN.

If you have any ambition to bear yourself well, to succeed in life in all ways as well as in the financial way, which is commonly understood when "success" is mentioned, you must become aware of the fact that you can not live any kind of life you may like for years and still have the highest character. It is the little incidents from day to day which make a man's character, and perhaps the strongest of these little incidents are those which concern the treatment of women and girls by men and boys. The habit of being constantly with women sometimes cultivates the habit of paying little attention to them, of not recollecting that they are to be treated with never-failing courtesy. This is but a step in the direction leading to such incidents as one sees in Europe, where young brothers sit about the house in their uniforms paid for by their sisters' sewing or teaching, and let these same sisters bring their shoes, or coats, or glasses of water, and what not.

And yet we must not behold the mote in our brother's eye unless we consider the beam in our own. We must not criticise others unless we can at least say that our own men have a clear idea of their proper course in such a matter.

Furthermore, when you are dealing with the other sex it is wise to bear in mind that as you treat them, so are you building up character in yourself. If you do not bear in mind the courtesies of all kinds which are woman's due, you can not retain for any length of time a pride in yourself, a satisfaction with your behavior, which is commonly called self-respect; and without self-respect you will have a hard time of it in the world.—Harper's Round Table.

MEMORIES OF CHILDHOOD.

Childhood reminiscence makes us young when we are old, and helps to keep us pure and fresh with the Springtime that was in us a score or a generation of years ago. A boy can never become utterly bad so long as there remains with him a memory of his father and mother in the act of prayer. The time may come with the hardening and chilling process of the years when he will himself cease to pray, but, from the canvas long ago painted, there will never fade the figures of those, now asleep, whose heads were seen day by day bent in worship, and who in inspired priestliness laid the morning sacrifice upon the family altar; and the memory helps, at any rate, to keep alive in us our own possibilities of prayer.

The most natural years of our lives we live while we are children, and there are always rest and purification in getting back into touch with them. When the burdens press a little heavily, and the future is thick with uncertainties, the wish will sometimes shape itself that we might be back again among our free, fresh, childish days. We do not understand it very well, but there is something gone that we would dearly love to have back. Those may seem to have been rather unproductive afternoons that we used to spend up in the garret, listening in the pauses of our merrymaking to the rain pattering on the roof, and we so dry and sheltered underneath, but our life means more even to-day because of them and because of our memory of them.—Rev. Chas. L. Parkhurst.

FIFTY YEARS OF PREPARATION.

"It is marvelous, Monsieur le President," said the Paris correspondent of the London Times to Thiers, "how you deliver long, improvised speeches about which you have not had time to reflect." "You are not paying me a compliment," replied the President of the French republic; "it is criminal in a statesman to improvise speeches on public affairs. The speeches you call improvised—why, for fifty years I have been rising at 5 A. M. to prepare them!"

A man's work shows whether he has expended the last ounce of his strength upon any achievement, or has a reserve back of him. His conversation sooner or later betrays an empty or a full reservoir. Every victory won, every obstacle overcome, every passion controlled, adds a new strand to our reserve cable. Every defeat, every loss of self-control, breaks or strains a strand, and weakens the cable.

Do not mistake acquirement, or mere knowledge, for power. Like food, these things must be digested and assimilated to become life or force. Learning is not wisdom; knowledge is not necessarily vital energy. The student who has to cram through a school or a college course, who has made himself merely a receptacle for the teacher's thoughts and ideas, is not educated; he has not gained much. He is a reservoir, not a fountain. One retains, the other gives forth. Unless his knowledge is converted into wisdom, into faculty, it will become stagnant like still water. His knowledge must be drawn from the reservoir of memory, be worked over by the practical faculties, and become vitalized, before it can become a real power in the world.—Selected.

FAME.

In the fullness of youth, wealth, beauty and love were hers. Yet all her dreams were of fame.

"I will write a great book," she said, "and my name shall be upon every lip, and my praises sung thoughout the land."

So, in the joy and vanity of youth, she wrote her book. But fame stood a long way off. Then, as time passed, sorrow came into her life. Grief blotted out ambition and dreams of fame were forgotten.

But once more she took up her pen.

"I will write a book," she said again, "and it shall be not for the multitude, but for the few who have suffered as I have suffered. It shall speak to them as a sister speaks, and give counsel and courage and cheer."

So she wrote her book. And it was a book not for the few, but for the multitude. For all had suffered. And her name was upon every lip and her praises sung throughout the land. And, lo! fame had come.—Ladies' Home Journal.

FEELING HURRIED.

Probably nothing tires one so much as feeling hurried. When in the early morning the day's affairs press on one's attention beforehand, and there comes the wonder how in the world everything is to be accomplished; when every interruption is received impatiently, and the clock is watched in distress as its moments flit past—then the mind tires the body.

We are wrong to drive ourselves with whip and spur in this way. Each of us is promised strength for the day, and we must not wear ourselves out by crowding two days' task into one. If we can only keep cool and calm, not allowing ourselves to be flustered, we shall be less wearied when we have reached the eventide. The children may be fractious, the servants trying, the friend we love may fail to visit us, the letter we expect may not arrive; but if we can preserve our tranquility of soul and of demeanor, we shall get through everything creditably.—Exchange.

A SOBER LIFE.

I should be glad to be of service to those who are born with a good constitution, and presuming upon it, lead a disorderly life; when it comes to pass that, on their attaining the age of about sixty years, they are attacked with various pains and diseases; some with the gout, some with pains in the side, and others with pains in the stomach, and the like, to which they would not be subject, were they to embrace a sober life; and, as most of them die before they attain their eightieth year, they would live a hundred, the time allowed by God and nature. And it is but reasonable to believe that we should all attain that term, in order that we might all taste the sweets of every state of life. But then she (nature) hopes that man, being endowed with reason and understanding, may of himself, compensate, by dint of art and by means of a sober life, continue to mend his infirm constitution, live to a great age, and always enjoy good health.—Louis Cornaro.

CHILDREN SHOULD SLEEP IN DARK ROOMS.

Children should be accustomed as soon as possible to sleep in a dark room. Unless they have learned to be afraid of it the darkness is soothing to the nerves, and the rest is more profound and refreshing than when there is the unconscious stimulation of light. It is particularly desirable for children of a nervous temperament that light should be excluded, yet it is most often the nervous, sensitive child whose imagination has been filled with fears of the shapes the dark may hide.—Ladies' Home Journal.

REV. M. J. BLACKWELL.

He was a prince in Israel. His splendid physique, noble bearing and cultured appearance marked him as a leader. He would attract attention in any crowd. Dignity and propriety were habitual to him. A trifle reserved, his manners were those of a cultivated gentleman. A prepossessing appearance raised expectation of more than ordinary performances. A longer acquaintance confirmed and deepened these favorable impressions. The fact grew upon us that he was one of nature's noblemen; one in whom the forces of life were all blended into a beautifully rounded manhood.

Michael Joseph Blackwell was born in Georgetown district, S. C., Aug. 30, 1806. Under the ministry of Rev. Samuel Dunwody he was converted in 1826. For twelve years he resisted the call to preach, and not until he was full forty years old did he take upon himself the duties of a minister in the Methodist Church. During these twelve years there were many spiritual struggles and but little religious enjoyment. By a Quarterly Conference of the Marshall circuit in 1840, Malcolm McPherson presiding, he was licensed to preach. His ministry being the result of such mastering convictions, he became one of the most consecrated men. November, 1841, Mr. Blackwell was admitted on trial in the Memphis Conference, and in due course was ordained deacon by Bishop Soule in 1843 and elder by Bishop Andrew in 1846. Two years on the Hernando circuit, two on the Holly Springs circuit, one in Holly Springs station, and one on Salem circuit, brings us to 1848, when he was appointed to Wesley Chapel, Memphis, Tenn. One year in this charge, and then one year each on the following circuits: Belmont, Holly Springs, Chulahoma and Hernando, and we have reached the Fall of 1853, when Mr. Blackwell was made presiding elder on the Grenada district. From that time on to the great Civil War—nine years—he continued in this high office on the following districts in order: Grenada, two years; Holly Springs, two; Ripley, one, and Aberdeen, four. As presiding elder, he reached his greatest usefulness. He looked closely after all the interests of the church, and gave himself concern about the welfare of his preachers. Sympathetic and kind, with firm convictions of duty as to himself and all other officers of the church, he kept the work well in hand, and the church prospered under his administration. His preaching was intensely scriptural. He studied the Bible to good purpose. His sermons were full of scriptural texts, always quoted to the exact language of the Book. His ministry was broad in the sense of covering the whole range of theology. It was his purpose to declare all the counsel of God. His sermons all evinced good preparation. He was never trivial, never preached nonsense. Earnest, serious, exact, and sufficiently animated to hold the strictest attention of his audience, he was a model of pulpit propriety.

Mr. Blackwell always manifested a great concern for the religious instruction of the slaves. No Quarterly Conference was willingly allowed to pass without special services for them. As is well known, they were very emotional. It was his settled belief that most of our preachers who ministered to them erred in stirring up an excitement. I noticed this, true to this impression, he always lost in animation and gained in didactic quality when ever he preached to the slaves. I never knew him to fail in putting a large number of them to sleep. Some of our older preachers no doubt remember how difficult it was to preach to the colored people in those days without, on the one hand, exciting them to shouts, or, on the other, putting them to sleep. We all regarded it as a part of our work to instruct the slaves, and I remember well how hard it was to keep their constant attention. To hold the balance between shouting and sleeping was like running the gauntlet between Scylla and Charybdis. It took a shrewd trimmer to skirt that boundary. The very few times out of the many efforts in which I succeeded in keeping their wakeful and calm attention from the beginning to the end of the sermon I regard as the finest achievements I ever reached in pulpit oratory.

Mr. Blackwell lived for a short time near the little village of Cockrum, in DeSoto county. The Legislature had granted the town a charter of incorporation, and officers had been duly elected. One ordinance imposed a fine for riding on the pavement. The pavement, by the way, was about forty yards long in front of the two or three stores of the town. One morning Bro. Blackwell, starting on an appointment, rode up in front of one of the stores to make some small purchase. While waiting for the clerk to bring what he wanted the horse stood with his front feet on the pavement. The marshal, "clothed with a little brief authority," cited the preacher to appear before the mayor's court to answer for the violation of the law. The fine, I believe, was two dollars. The very next Legislature repealed the charter, and that fine has the unique distinction of being the only one ever imposed by the town of Cockrum.

Mr. Blackwell was several times elected to the General Conference, and was always a faithful and painstaking representative. The interest of the church was his paramount concern, and in her councils or doing her work he was ever the same faithful Christian.

In 1861 our Conference met at Grenada. Owing to the uncertainty of everything except the grim-visaged war which was desolating our country, we had no Bishop to preside. All eyes turned to M. J. Blackwell as the most suitable man for president. No Bishop could have presided with more impartiality and general satisfaction.

For the next four years—the terrible years of war—Mr. Blackwell held a supernumerary relation. He did effective work one year only after the war. That was on the Aberdeen district. His health now steadily declined till his death at his home in Marshall county, Miss., Dec. 22, 1869.

His was a noble character. A more conscientious Christian gentleman I have never met. He was a man of prayer. He believed in its efficacy. It was his custom, when any important question was propounded to him, to defer answer till he had taken the matter in his closet to God. He always scrupulously, according to the law of the church, observed the Friday before each Quarterly Conference as a day of fasting. When he became presiding elder the Quarterly Conferences came so frequently that he adopted the rule of fasting every Friday.

Thus lived and labored M. J. Blackwell, a true minister of the gospel, faithful, studious, consistent, prayerful, kind in his family, considerate of the feelings and interests of all his brethren; a man of God, loving his church and laboring for the upbuilding of his race. Such a life is a great blessing to the church and the world, and the memory of it should be preserved as a rich legacy for all time.

FENVILLE.—The subject of this sketch, W. R. FENVILLE, was born in Attalla county, Miss., Jan. 9, 1852. He moved with his parents to Shelby county, Texas, where he was happily married to Cynthia Stephens. To them were born one son. On the fourteenth of Jan., 1879, she died, leaving her husband and child to mourn her loss. On the fourteenth of February, 1882, he was happily married to Miss Melissa Pots, of Shelby county, Texas, and unto them were born six children, five of which are still living, with their mother, to mourn the loss of our beloved brother.

Bro. Fenville professed faith in Christ when about twenty years old, and joined the M. E. Church, South, and has been faithful to God and the church. He was liberal, always ready to respond to the church and other charitable institutions. His home was the home of the weary preacher. He always had some word of them, and we will miss him, for on the twenty-second of March his spirit took flight to mansions of bliss.

May the grace of the Lord sustain the bereaved family, and help them follow in the footprints of the Savior, so that they can meet their dear one in heaven! is the prayer of his pastor, O. M. POSEY.

Logansport, La.

MILLER.—The subject of this sketch, MARTHA A. SEARS, was born in DeSoto parish, La., Feb. 15, 1839, and was happily married to Mr. William Miller, Feb. 26, 1856, and unto them were born nine children, six of which are living to mourn the loss of their mother.

Sister Miller has been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for about forty years. It was my privilege to talk with her before she died. She said that she was just waiting for the Lord's own good time. She said, while suffering, that the Lord was with her in the power of his Spirit. She bore her afflictions with patience and Christian fortitude, and on the fourth of April she fell on sleep in the arms of the Savior to await the resurrection.

May the Lord bless the bereaved children and friends of the deceased, and help us to meet in the home of the blest, where parting will be no more! O. M. POSEY, P. C.

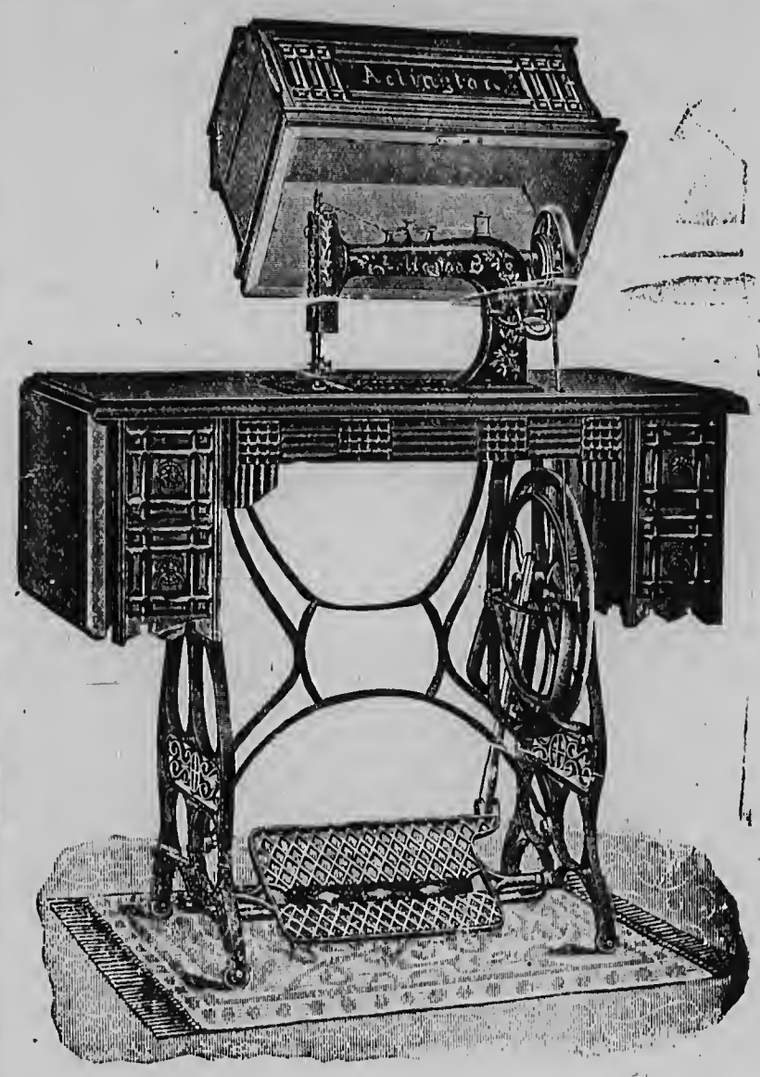
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the look stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A $400,000 boot and shoe factory will be opened in Atlanta next month, and Georgia will begin to compete with another of the great industries of Massachusetts.

The rejection of the ultimatum sent by President McKinley, by the Spanish government, and the breaking off of diplomatic relations by giving Minister Woodford his passports, has been accepted by the government at Washington as a practical declaration of war. Such being the interpretation placed on the present status of affairs, the entire energy of the administration has been devoted to strategic plans.

In answer to the call issued by Naval Officer Henry Demas and other colored citizens and ex-Union soldiers, inviting the men of their race to assemble at Grand Army Hall in this city to discuss the war situation and arrive at some plan for the purpose of volunteering their services to the national government as American citizens, ready and eager to go to the front and uphold the flag of the United States, an immense number of colored men were present on Friday night.

The passage of the law providing for the calling of volunteers and militia into service has been followed promptly by the issue of a call for 125,000 volunteers. This call is coupled with the condition that the volunteers must consist of the organized militia or National Guard. Although nominally the call will provide for each State furnishing a quota on the basis of population, the restriction of the enlistments to the regular National Guard makes it binding upon nearly all the States to turn over practically their entire force of organized troops to the general government.

At Washington the most interesting events of Monday were the President's call upon the governors of States for their respective quotas of military toward making-up the first war-levy of 125,000 men; his message to Congress, urging upon that body the expediency of issuing a formal declaration of war; the passage by Congress of a resolution declaring that a state of war has existed since Thursday, April 21; the resignation by Secretary of State Sherman of his portfolio and the transference of that portfolio to Assistant-Secretary Day; and the resignation of Assistant-Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt that he may lead a regiment of cowboys.

Our Gulf squadron fleet has blockaded Havana; several of the enemy's merchant ships have been captured. The Spanish forces have been firing upon the fleet at long range, with no damage. The enemy in Havana is frantically enthusiastic, and we are at home calmly determined in our proposed action. Our North Atlantic squadron is stripped to fight, ready to sail. It awaits the movement, no doubt, of the formidable Spanish fleet concentrated at the Cape De Verde Islands; its position is central, and it can move to intercept at any moment and in any direction. Our land forces already organized are being rapidly mobilized at strong objective points. Chickamauga and New Orleans are the principal centres for massing at this moment. The President has called for 125,000 volunteers, to serve for two years or to the end of the war. They are being rapidly enlisted. The enemy's movements are not known. Spain is enthusiastic for war, and Europe seems dazed at the sudden turn of affairs from ten days since.

FOREIGN.

A world's exposition is to be opened at Buenos Ayres in the year 1899, the idea of which has been started by a European syndicate having its seat at Paris. It is said that promoters will alone find the requisite funds, so that the state will incur no expenses.

TOPIC FOR MAY 1.—"THE GRACE OF HOSPITALITY." Gen. xviii, 1 10; Heb. xiii, 2.

1. Three strangers—possibly the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit—drew nigh to Abraham's tent one warm day in the plains of Mamre. The Syrian sun was blazing down; Abraham sat in the door of his tent under the shade of some wide-spreading tree. The moment his eyes fell upon the three angels in the distance, he hastened to welcome them. We behold him fetching them water for their feet according to the oriental custom. We see Sarah, his wife, kneading the flour and baking the cakes on the hearth. The "young man" is dressing the best and tenderest calf for the occasion. Presently the butter and the milk, with the rest of the repast, are set before the visitors. While we are contemplating this scene, we are thinking of what Jesus once said to his disciples: "I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in."

2. The Bible exhorts us to hospitality. One of the graces that should commend a man to the office of bishop is, that he should be "given to hospitality" (I. Tim. iii, 2). He should be a lover of this kindly grace and practice (Titus i, 7, 8).

3. There is a spiritual side to hospitality. Ever since the introduction of sin into the hearts of men this world has been an inhospitable abode for mankind. Men have been outcasts from God. The spirit of wandering has seized upon them. Restless millions are seeking peace here, there, everywhere. They are seeking some Eden which they can never find. We may, therefore, understand why the Holy Spirit knocks so ardently and persistently at the door of our hearts. He is himself a stranger seeking hospitality. He comes to you, to me, to all. Shall we let him in? Shall we entertain him, as did Abraham, setting before him the best we have? Shall he be a visitor simply, or shall we open our hearts to him fully that he may abide with us forever? The Holy Ghost is the Holy Guest. Let us bid him enter. He alone can teach us how to be truly hospitable. He can make this cold world worth living in. We will then know how to extend hospitality to poor lost sinners—moral outcasts. He will tell us to give them a helping hand, a kind word, a warm embrace. They have received cuffs, kicks, coldness, from the world. Now they will receive a welcome from us, from Jesus, with the cheering word: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." A shelter at last for them, a shelter for sinners. This is hospitality. Oh, come, Holy Spirit, guest divine, teach us how to entertain in our homes, in our churches, in our Leagues, in our daily walk and conversation!

CHILDREN'S DAY.

To Pastors and Superintendents of Mississippi Conference Sunday-Schools:

I have sent the supplies of Children's Day programs for which you applied; and, in addition to those applied for, I have either sent from Meridian or ordered sent from Nashville a packet of them to each pastor, to be used as he may think most judiciously on his charge. Our Board was rather late taking hold of this matter; but I trust that the scholars will have ample time to prepare the parts by the third Sunday of May, and that it will be a glorious, inspiring occasion.

Send promptly the money raised on the day to the treasurer of the Sunday-school Board, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Carthage, Miss. For help to needy schools apply to Rev. J. Wilson Brown, Terry, Miss.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ROUTE TO BALTIMORE VIA WASHINGTON CITY.

The Chesapeake and Ohio railway with its connections offers by far the most interesting route to the Conference in Baltimore in May. The route from Louisville is through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, passing Frankfort, the State Capital Lexington, and the home of Henry Clay. At Ashland the line from Cincinnati is joined; the route from Cincinnati being along the banks of the beautiful Ohio river for 165 miles. Shortly after entering West Virginia the banks of the Kanawha river are followed, Kanawha Falls is passed and the canons of New River are penetrated. After skirting the picturesque Greenbrier for 50 miles, the heights of the Alleghenies are reached, and next comes the Shenandoah Valley, the Blue Ridge Mountains and Piedmont section, the most beautiful of the Appalachain Valley. After passing through Charlottsville and Gordonsville, the route is through the most memorable battle-fields of the Civil War, among them Cedar Mountain, Culpepper, Rappahannock, Warrenton Junction, Manasses and Bull Run.

For complete description of the C. & O. Route address C. B. Ryan, G. P. A., Cincinnati, Ohio.

We are anxious to build up Western Texas, and commencing at once and continuing until April 30, we will sell to all comers from Fort Worth and stations east, including Alexandria, La., round-trip tickets to Abilene, Pecos, and stations intermediate, and to Eddy and Roswell, New Mexico, at rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip; tickets good thirty days from date of sale.

This will be the best time of the year to see Western Texas, and you ought to take advantage of the opportunity.

BEYOND THE STARS.

BY ADELIA S. MARTIN.

Sometimes the very hopes we cherish most
But seem the further distant, sooner lost;
We do not ask our cross to understand—
But only trusting, try to find the way,
And think the joys missed on earth to-day
Shall be found in that far-distant land.

Earth glories die—a precious life fades out.
We ask not why such things are brought about;
We only know a light once faithful fond,
Shedding upon us its warm, tender glow—
Went out from this cold, weary world below,
To shine more brilliant in the "Sweet Beyond."

We gaze in wonder at yon shining blue—
A vapor hiding heaven from our view;
Through faith we see between the golden bars.
But do not seek to grasp the meaning there.
We only wait the answer to our prayer,
And hear the "all is well" "Beyond the Stars."

HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

BY PROF. J. W. BEESON,

President East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss.

(Concluded.)

In the United States, according to the census of 1890, sixty-three per cent. of the women are unmarried—that is to say, without a natural support, to say nothing of the thousands who marry and have to support themselves, their families, and worthless husbands. But even this doubtful experiment of marrying for support is often unavailable, if ever desirable. In many parts of the United States the women largely outnumber the men. Then we readily see that a large percentage of our women must support themselves, while a still larger per cent.—be it said to their honor—prefer to be self-supporting, independent of any man. Shall we not, then, give them at least an equal opportunity with the stronger sex?

What if it does crowd the professions some to let woman in? What if it lowers wages some when she enters the race for gain? Has she not rights as well as men? Did not God create us "male and female" in his image? If the occupations for man are crowded, so much the more are those for women.

But there is another reason why woman should receive a higher education. I refer to her influence upon the coming man. It is a notable fact that of all the public-school teachers of the United States, sixty-three per cent. are women, and of the city-school teachers, ninety per cent. are women. Then, putting it upon this lower plain of reasoning, is it not proper to provide for her a most thorough education for the sake of the man whom she is training for citizenship?

But, apart from schools, there is still a great need for broad-minded, thoroughly educated women. It was Napoleon who, in the midst of a bloody revolution, said, "The great need of France is mothers." The last words of Henry Clay were, "Mother, mother, mother," as his spirit, perchance, caught sight of her through the rifting clouds. Abraham Lincoln said, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my mother." Benjamin West said, "A kiss from my mother made me a painter." Raphael's madonnas were pictures of his mother. Augustine was converted from heathenism by the persistent efforts and prayers of a noble mother. Some one has said, "A mother's love is like a thread of heaven spun through our lives."

"There are
Hundreds of stars in the beautiful sky,
Hundreds of shells in the ocean together,
Hundreds of birds that go singing by,
Hundreds of bees in sunny weather,
Hundreds of dewdrops to greet the dawn,
Hundreds of lambs in the purple clover,
Hundreds of buttorflies on the lawn,
But only one mother the wide world over."

John Adams once said, "I never hear of a great man that I do not enquire who was his mother."

If the mother is to have such a deep and lasting influence upon character and success in life, how important it is that she reach the highest possible attainments in physical, mental, and moral culture!

But you tell me that it makes a woman masculine to educate her? Far be it from such a result as that. Let it be written in letters of living light. The legitimate function of the higher education of woman is not to make her man-like, but it is to make her woman-like. It is indeed to develop strength in her, but the strength of a woman, not the strength of a man. It should intensify all her womanly qualities, and give point and emphasis to all her fine and more delicate sensibilities, which has proved to be the case with those who have received this higher education.

It was my good fortune to sit, a few years ago, in the halls of the Johns Hopkins University, perhaps the highest institution of learning in the land, and see the first woman, Miss Florence Bascome, take her Ph.D. degree from that university. I also had the pleasure of attending the first graduating exercises of the great Chicago University, and saw there women take the same degrees with the men in all the departments. They had scaled the heights of learning side by side with the men, and, notwithstanding theories to the contrary, they were women still. The womanly qualities of their natures were more strongly developed, and they stood as living witnesses against the accusation that it unsexes woman to give her higher education. If you find here and there a masculine woman, it is a freak of nature or lack of proper training, and not the fault of true education.

Nor does this higher education unfit her for home duties and wifely qualities, but rather it prepares her the better for this or for any other sphere in which she chooses to move. Nor need men fear that there will be a scarcity of wives on this account. There are always some noble, unselfish women in every station of life ready to sacrifice themselves for the good and pleasure of the "dear men." It might be a consolation to some to know that ninety per cent. of the alumnæ of Vassar are married, and about an equal percentage of those of Girton, Newnham, and other higher institutions in England and America. They marry men high in Church and State, and are able to sympathize with and to aid them in their work, thus making the happiest union possible. Many a home to-day would be happier were the wife so educated as to be able to live in the same intellectual atmosphere with her husband. (It was a great American statesman who was so ashamed of his wife's ignorance that he never carried her to Washington. Could that home be a happy one?) Then, if we would have our women to shine in the highest ranks of culture; if we would have their names to grace the pages of history; if we would have their thoughts to sparkle as gems in literature; if we would point with pride to their high intellectual attainments as well as to their far-famed beauty and gentleness; if we would have them to be helpmeets to us in deed and in truth, let her education be as high and as thorough as that of man.

We are living in an age when mighty questions in social and political life are to be solved. (The serious, as well as the minor, problems of civilization and culture are becoming more numerous and complicated.) Hitherto only half the human race—the male sex—has worked at their solution; hence that solution has been in many cases insufficient and one-sided. The time has come in which the other half, equal in intellectual power and supplementing the former, should assist in solving them.

Our women should arouse from their lethargy, their sleep of centuries, and equip themselves for life's battles. They should equip themselves physically, intellectually, and spiritually, for we battle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world; therefore, we need on the whole armor of God; we need the highest possible development in every line. Especially do we need this higher education of our women to be under purely religious influence. If we develop the intellectual side of the nature without developing the spiritual, we not only have a one-sided nature, but we divert the life from the purposes for which the Master intended it. Each life here on earth is for some purpose. Each woman has a definite place to fill. And what is education for if it is not that we may be better prepared to do the Father's will? This being true, the real end of an education is partially, if not entirely, lost without the proper spiritual development along with the mental and physical. Then let the church prepare the means for the higher education of her women. The State is making strides in this direction, as can be seen by a glance at the educational field. Let us open our higher institutions of learning to women, or prepare some equally high for the ill-favored sex. Let the Church not fall behind the State in her generosity to her women. It is to the women that we must look for Christianizing the world. Then let us give her the highest possible training, physically, intellectually, and spiritually.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the evangelist, and agent of the Grenada Collegiate Institute, held a meeting of seven days in Minter City, and preached thirteen times. Bro. McIntosh grows in grace, in preaching ability, in unction, and in spiritual power. So it ought to be in every case. This meeting resulted in a great revival for this place. Every Christian man and woman in the community was greatly revived in religious life, and in zeal for God and souls. All the sinners who attended the meeting manifested some concern for personal salvation except two. Two were added to the church by letter, and four on profession of faith and by baptism. Four infants were dedicated to God by baptism. Money enough was raised to buy a new organ for the church. One hundred and thirty dollars were paid in for the several interests presented. Bro. McIntosh greatly endeared himself to the people, and his good wife advanced the cause among our women. Rev. J. W. Price and his daughter aided greatly in the music.

I think the General Conference may safely leave the evangelistic question to take care of itself. Our law is flexible enough to meet the present needs and conditions of the work. The evangelists can do some kinds of work that can not be as well done by the pastors. Bro. McIntosh set up a nut here, and drove in a nail there, and opened a blister yonder, as need for the same was indicated to him by the pastor. In one way or another Methodism has always had these "rovers" on the field in our church, and they have done much good. I am sure I have not the gifts to do the work Bro. McIntosh does. It is not at all a question of grace, but purely one of gifts. Men of like grace do not have gifts for the same kinds of work. Methodism encourages great grace in all, and would utilize the gifts of each in the spread of scriptural holiness over these lands. Bro. McIntosh preaches a pithy, pointed, and pungent gospel sermon every time he gets on his feet before an audience. There is nothing shoddy in his work, nor questionable in his methods. He preaches holiness of heart and life in every sermon, and in a way that is very destructive to Antinomianism. He makes no compromise with sin, either original or actual, and presents active and practical righteousness as opposed to passive and imputed righteousness. He believes in living a righteous life instead of receiving credit for the righteous living of our Lord more than eighteen hundred years ago. Men must keep the law of God instead of depending upon the law-keeping of one who lived long ago. Holy living is the best proof of having a holy heart. The slain of the Lord were not so many, but the wounded of the Lord were numerous. This must be followed by close pastoral attention, work, and nursing. In this way the awakened may come to life and to full salvation.

We have had a season of refreshing from the Lord. GILDEROY.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

The Register of Vanderbilt University and Announcement for the year 1898-99, just issued, is a volume of 155 pages, including an appendix giving specimens of entrance examination questions. Attached in front to the fly-leaf is a map of the campus on fine linen paper, showing the location of the public buildings, the residences of the professors, the dormitories of West Side Row, the various avenues, and the athletic field. The campus comprises seventy-six acres, well kept, beautifully laid out in walks and drives, and ornamented with many varieties of shade trees. A bronze statue of Cornelius Vanderbilt, the founder, has recently been erected in front of the main building by citizens of Nashville. The endowment of the university is $1,100,000, and the value of the grounds, buildings and equipments is estimated at $950,000.

The university is organized in seven departments, affording instruction in philosophy, science, and literature, theology, law, medicine, engineering, pharmacy, and dentistry. The faculty consists of forty-two full professors and adjunct professors, and fifty instructors, fellows and assistants, and other officers. The number of students this year (1897-98) is 800, the greatest in the history of the university—an increase over last year of 126. The number of graduates is 138.

The Academic Department has the university, or graduate, work distinctly separated from the undergraduate, or collegiate, instruction.

The collegiate instruction embraces four years' work, and leads to the degree of Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science. Forty-six courses of instruction, each continuing through one year, embracing one hundred and thirty-six hours of recitation or equivalent laboratory work per week, are offered under the twelve main subjects: Latin, Greek, French, German, English, elocution, history and economics, mental and moral philosophy, mathematics and astronomy, physics, chemistry, and natural history and geology. Sixty-three hours are required for either baccalaureate degree, from which it appears that the studies are to some extent elective. They are entirely elective in the Senior year, and largely so in the Junior year. In 1897 the B. A. degree was conferred on sixteen, the B. S. degree on six students.

The university work, as distinct from the collegiate, is arranged under twelve schools, offering in all about twenty-five different courses of study. One year of university work is required for the degree of Master of Arts or Master of Science; three years for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy or Doctor of Science. University degrees were conferred upon fourteen persons in 1897—a larger number than in any previous year. Of these, one received the Ph.D., eleven the M. A., and two the M. S. degree. As a special incentive to advanced study, ten scholastic fellowships, each of the value of $200, are awarded annually to graduates of any institution prepared to enter upon university work.

The necessary expenses of attending Vanderbilt University are surprisingly small. They are stated in the catalogue to be, for the scholastic year, exclusive of books, washing, and other incidentals, very little over $200. Tuition being free in the Biblical Department, the necessary expenses of theological students are only about $130.

One of the most noteworthy statements in the part of the catalogue devoted to the Biblical Department is to the effect that, to be admitted to this department, the applicant must be sufficiently advanced to enter the Junior class in a college of good standing. This requirement accounts for the fact that all of the forty-six students of the Biblical Department are college men. They come from twenty-seven different colleges and universities, and thirty-nine of the number have taken either the baccalaureate or master's degree. In addition to the regular students of the department, there are thirty four "theological candidates." These are students who are taking work in the Academic Department preparatory to entering the Biblical Department.

The faculty of the Law Department suffered a great loss near the beginning of the session in the death of Prof. McPhail Smith. His place during the remainder of the session was filled by Judge J. M. Dickinson. The faculty has lately been reorganized, and now consists of Thomas H. Malone, former chancellor of the Sixth Chancery Division of Tennessee, dean of the faculty; Horace H. Lurton, judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, sixth circuit; J. M. Dickinson, former Assistant Attorney-General of the United States; Edward Baxter, emeritus professor, in charge of the Moot Court work, and Charles N. Burch, Assistant United States District Attorney, secretary.

The Department of Engineering is one of the best equipped in the South. Two large buildings are devoted to the technical work of the department. Instruction is given in civil, mining, mechanical, and electric engineering. A high standard is maintained, a five years' course of study being required for either of the degrees: Civil Engineer (C. E.), Mechanical Engineer (M. E.), or Mining Engineer (E. M.).

The Medical Department of the university was reorganized three years ago, and a new building erected at a cost of $80,000. The number of students the first year after the reorganization was 134, the second year 165, and this year 247. With a strong faculty, and with an equipment meeting the highest requirements of advanced medical education, the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University bids fair to become, before many years, the largest medical school that the South has ever known.

Those desiring to fit themselves for the profession of pharmacy will find at Vanderbilt University a department affording ample facilities for thorough preparation. An educational qualification for admission, and a longer course of study than that of any other school in the South and of most of the schools of pharmacy in the North, have prevented a large attendance, but on the other hand have secured an excellent quality of students. The course of study includes a very large amount of practical work in the laboratory; but this scientific training soon brings its own reward, as is evidenced by the rapid promotion and eminent success of a large proportion of the graduates.

The Department of Dentistry has been attended this year by 180 students, which makes it probably the largest dental school in the South. The course of study is graded, and embraces three sessions of six months each. Practical work in the laboratory and infirmary is considered a very important part of the course. The popularity of the school is doubtless due in large part to the excellent opportunity afforded for such work. The supply of patients in the infirmary is so great that some of the students are said to have inserted more than one hundred gold fillings.

THE HOLY PASSION OF ENTHUSIASM.

The men and women who have been greatly used of God in the conflict with evil and in the extension of his kingdom have not always been the talented, the intellectual, the educated, the trained, the strong; but they have been souls aglow with Christian enthusiasm. Whatever else they may have had or not had, they did have this one thing. The Christian worker who lacks this enthusiasm will have a hard time of it. He must fail of attaining the best possible results of service.

Enthusiasm is not a rare thing among men. It is manifested wherever men toil and strive and contend in all departments of human ambition and effort. But the enthusiasm that is Christian is not so common. If we inquire for a definition of Christian enthusiasm, it is easy to find it in a thousand exemplifications in heroic lives of men and women in the service of God and humanity. Christian enthusiasm is a high and holy passion. It is divine life in motion. It is pure love on fire. It is faith inspired. It is hope triumphant. It is faith, hope and love at concert pitch, in the swell of a mighty harmony. It is knowledge driven by zeal. It is a soul at full stretch under high and holy inspiration.

Christian enthusiasm kindles, warms and burns like flame. It flashes and strikes like lightning. It pours like great showers. It rushes like mighty rivers. It moves onward resistlessly. It pierces the darkness, bridges the rivers, climbs or tunnels the mountains, shatters the barricades of hell. It presses toward the mark and reaches it.—The Evangelical.

When you laid the white flowers upon the coffin, and listened to the dull thud of earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust, and bent eagerly forward to catch a last glimpse of that which enshrined the loved one, hidden from sight, with pale lips and breaking heart you asked once more, "If a man die, shall he live again?" What proof have we, what evidences "the dead are not dead, but alive?" May not immortality be, after all, only "a beautiful dream," only "a lofty aspiration of the human heart," doomed to disappointment? Generation after generation has come and gone, but not one of the myriads who have passed into the silent land has ever been permitted to return and tell us the great secret that lies beyond the grave. But through all that deep, unbroken silence of ages men and women have never lost their faith in a future life. In every age, in every country, men and women have had some belief in a life beyond the grave.—Rev. S. G. Fielding.

The hope of a larger extension of missions in the near future chiefly rests upon the co-operation of the student class; academic life contains influences which are likely to give direction to the tastes and sympathies of later life; the predominant influences in college life and in the theological seminary is not that which would naturally direct the mind to the world-wide work of evangelization; larger opportunities for the study of missions in college and the seminary should therefore be provided.—Cuthbert Hall, D. D.

HE KNOWS.

BY MISS VIROIT CASPARI.

The sweetest thought that on me dawns,
Through all life's cruel strife,
Is this: the dear Christ understands
[illegible] life.

The friends who dearly love me now,
Misjudge the things they see,
But Christ from out my inmost heart
Unveils the mystery.

For stooping low, I know he sees
The poor attempts I make,
To shield some little one from harm,
Only for Jesus' sake.

His pitying smile falls sweet on me,
Though all my efforts fail,
For strength is his and weakness mine,
While bitter griefs assail.

He knows full well. I need not fear,
The crooked will come straight;
To scorn the wrong—to do the right,
This done, and then—to wait.

MR. VARDEMAN'S REPLY ANSWERED.

(Concluded.)

Bro. V, although he has baptized a great many more people than Paul, does not remember a single household baptism in all his ministry, and refers us to only one that he has heard of in modern times, and that one his "next door neighbor." As he would refuse to baptize a household where there are children, it is very probable he will never baptize a household, as this writer has done on several occasions, but never yet without baptizing children.

To further show how Bro V mixes up matters, look at this: "Mr. P. also objects to the answer given to the question, 'How many baptisms are there?' 'One Lord, one faith, one baptism.' (Eph. iv, 5.) If this does not answer the question, will he please give the Scripture that does answer it? Surely, we are not left in darkness about this command of our Savior."

It is no part of my business to help Bro. V. out of his voluntary entanglements, but I will go so far as to suggest a thought or two on this, to him, most perplexing subject. I think, my dear brother, that no one passage can answer your question, "How many baptisms are there?" But suppose you try these: Matt. iii, 11, a baptism with water; Luke iii, 16, a baptism with the Holy Ghost and fire; Mark x, 38, a baptism of suffering; 1. Cor. xii, 13, a baptism of the Spirit "into one body."

Now, in return, I would like to know how Bro. V. is going to reconcile these various baptisms to his idea of only one baptism, and that by water. St. Paul says, "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." John said he "indeed" baptized "with water," but that Jesus would baptize "with the Holy Ghost and with fire;" while Jesus told some of the apostles that they would be baptized "with the baptism that I am baptized with"—i. e., of suffering. I want that baptism by which I am baptized into Jesus Christ—that which is by "one spirit"—for my "one baptism," and care little for any other, except as a form in the Christian Church.

One of the strangest things in this correspondence is, that Bro. V. should base all his stress of baptism on John's baptisms. After frequently referring to John's baptism as the foundation of his own, he excoriates me for referring to a baptism which, by many years, antedates John's baptism, and was a baptism "in the cloud and in the sea." So far as I know, no one ever insisted that the baptism "unto Moses, in the cloud and in the sea," was a "real, literal Christian baptism." Still, it is quite as much "real" Christian baptism as that of John "in Elam, near to Salem;" or "in Bethabara beyond Jordan," where "John at first baptized," or "in Jordan." John's baptism was repudiated by Paul at Ephesus, who replaced it with another baptism (Acts xix, 1-5) in a more worthy name than "repentance."

To be consistent, Bro. V. must also repudiate it, for he believes in "believer's baptism," but "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after him—that is, on Jesus Christ" (Acts xix, 4). John's baptism was not a "believer's baptism" in the sense that they had already believed on Jesus, but the highest grace associated with it was "repentance"—not faith, as Bro. V. insists. John gave baptism, not only to those who had believed, but as a pledge that they would accept the Messiah when he came; "that they should" (not that they did) "believe on . . . Jesus Christ."

If this non-believer's baptism of John which St. Paul ignored and displaced by a baptism "in the name of Jesus Christ" is any more a "real, literal Christian baptism" than that "unto Moses," it is strange that it should have been thus discarded by St. Paul, while the other was endorsed by him as illustrating a great truth.

Bro. V. waxes dogmatic towards the close of his defense, as the following shows: "Finally, Mr. P. says 'immersion' was never in a New Testament 'until Mr. V.'s people put it there.' The correctness of this statement I very much doubt. I will say, however, that if the Greek word for baptize had been translated, instead of transferred, to our language, that every English New Testament in the world would have had 'immerse' instead of 'baptize.' That the Greek word for 'baptize' is properly translated by the English word 'immerse,' the learned men of all creeds and nations agree, and among them such great Methodist leaders as John Wesley, Adam Clark, C. W. Bennett, George R. Crooks, and Bishop Hurst."

He expresses a doubt as to "the correctness" of my statement that immersion was never in an English New Testament till our Baptist brethren put it there. He does not deny it, nor will he attempt to do so. His declaration, "If the Greek word for baptism had been translated, instead of transferred, that every English New Testament would have had 'immerse' instead of 'baptize,'" knocks the literati of the past out of the controversy.

Prof. Richard M. Smith, in "Studies of the Greek New Testament," under the work "Baptizo," says, page 153, "Its meaning I do not know." Prof. Smith is a graduate of the University of Virginia and Leipzig, Germany; is thoroughly familiar with both classic and Hellenistic Greek, and finds so many different things expressed by "the word for baptism," that he does not know what it does mean. Prof. Smith points out that in Luke xi, 38, it is used to express the washing of hands before eating (this was done by pouring water on the hands). In Mark vii, 4, it is used to express what the revisers, as well as Westcott and Hart and Tischeudorf, translates 'sprinkle"—applied to those coming from the market. Bro. V. knows, or ought to know, that nine-tenths of the Greek lexicons, including the great standard work of Liddell and Scott, which lies before me as I write, are much less confident as to the meaning of "the Greek word used for baptism" than he seems to be. Of all the lexicons I ever saw—and I have seen several—only one of the number seemed to know as much about it as Bro. V. thinks he knows, and that from an author "sui generis." Liddell and Scott say this word means "to dip, to bathe, to soak in wine, over head and ears in debt, to overwhelm with questions, to draw water." Of six definitions, three of them refer to things done without water, or liquids of any sort, in which immersion, in the Baptist sense, is impossible. We know the Scriptures use it to express pouring water on the hands. If Bro. V. takes from the word all its meanings save that one which suits his views, he will exhibit a vast amount of the cruder element of human nature.

As to the "learned men of all creeds and nations" believing "that the Greek word for baptize is properly rendered by the word 'immerse,'" I am not in position to speak; but that "learned men" of some "creeds and nations" do not so agree, I know to be a fact. John Wesley, Adam Clark, and Bishop Hurst do not so believe. Perhaps Bro. V. thinks so because Mr. Pendleton, one of his standards, has said so before him. These great men all admit, as all sensible men must admit, that one use of the "Greek word for baptize" is "to dip;" but they do not believe that word, or "immerse" would properly translate the Greek word. It is time to stop this rot about Wesley, Clark, et al., endorsing immersion as equal to baptize. They do not.

Evidently Bro. V. endorses the rendering of "the Greek word for baptize" by the word "immerse," as found in the revision of the New Testament, gotten up and published by Bro. V.'s church some years ago. It was necessary, from their point of view, that the New Testament be changed so as to conform the gospel of the Son of God to the practice of the Baptist Church. The two were out of harmony, and it would never do to change the Baptist Church to suit the gospel; hence the gospel must be changed to suit the Baptist Church.

"In those days came John the immerser, . . . immersing," etc.; "He will immerse you in the Holy Ghost and in fire;" "By one Spirit are we all immersed into one body;" "One Lord, one faith, one immersion;" "Are ye able . . . to be immersed with the immersion that I am immersed with?" "John truly immersed with water, but ye shall be immersed with the Holy Ghost."

These are a few samples of the sort of translation Bro. V. wants, and this sort of translation he has as the product of the enterprise of his church. If my practice gets out of harmony with the gospel, I will change my practice and let the gospel stand as God gave it.

Respectfully, J. A. PARKER.

A SUMMATION OF CHURCH HISTORY FOR THE CLASS OF THE FOURTH YEAR.

The history of the Christian Church since the advent of Christ is the history of the world. In fact, there are no great movements recorded among the enlightened nations of Europe that were not inseparably connected with Christianity. All were either for or against the church; else were great civic and ecclesiastic problems and questions within her pale, agitating her citizenship, and demanding solution. So, if one makes any pretensions at all to liberal education or wishes to adorn any profession, a casual knowledge of this branch of learning is indispensable. A churchman, above all others, should have this knowledge. Our leaders are wise in placing church history in the category of studies given our young ministers. I give here a brief resume of some of the important events for the guidance and assistance of those interested in pursuing this study. By a careful study of the order of events as herein arranged, one may get a systematized view of the subject that is invaluable.

Church history naturally divides itself into four great periods.

Period 1—From the advent of Christ (B. C. 4, A. D. 1) to the conversion of Constantine, A. D. 312.

Briefly, we may subdivide this period of nearly three hundred years into three minor periods: (1) The ministry of Christ, (2) of the apostles, (3) of the fathers. The first sub-period is treated in the New Testament, especially in the four Gospels and Acts of the Apostles. Canon Farrar's "Life of Christ" is a good book to read in connection with the events recorded during the first century of the Christian era. I think a good plan is to fix the time in the memory, and then replenish the mind with the chief events of the epoch by a kind of hedging process.

Period 2—From the conversion of Constantine to the crowning of Charlemagne, Emperor of the Romans, A. D. 800.

The chief events of this half millennium were: (1) The rise of Arianism, the fierce antagonisms that rent the church until the Trinitarian doctrine was established by the Council of Nice, A. D. 312, and gradually, but not without bitter protests, adopted by the entire church. (2) The nominal conversion of the peoples of Europe to the Christian faith. The fall of the Western Empire in Italy during the fifth century almost dissolved the civil power, and hordes of ruthless barbarians devastated the fair domain of the church, but she was equal to the crisis, and was ultimately enabled to convert the barbarous nations to the Christian faith. The glory of this final subjugation belongs to Charlemagne and his wise ecclesiastical counselors. (3) The rise of Mahommedanism, A. D. 611, and the rapid spread of this false religion until it threatened finally the subversion of Christianity. (4) The conferring of temporal power upon the Pope by Pepin, A. D. 756, and more fully confirmed by Charlemagne in 774. (5) This period closes with the separation between the Eastern and Western Churches. (6) In 780 the worship of images was first introduced into the church.

Period 3—From the crowning of Charlemagne to the Reformation, 1517.

(1) During the early part of this third period the church was sorely trampled down by the Mahommedans. This was the time of the Crusades, and the fierce struggle of the two great cults for world domination, centering at Jerusalem about the Savior's sepulchre, engaged the minds and energies of the then civilized world. (2) During this, the darkest period of the church's history, men were greater slaves to civil and ecclesiastical power, perhaps, than ever before or since. It was the age of romance, chivalry, superstition, ignorance, and fear. The dawn broke at its close. During the fourteenth century the Papacy was declining, during the fifteenth it was engaged in putting down evidently imminent revolt by cruel persecution, and in the sixteenth the crisis of its fate came.

Period 4—From the Reformation to the present time.

(1) The first two centuries of this era were devoted to the establishment of Protestantism in Germany, France, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and Great Britain. Only in France did it fail to secure a permanent and lasting hold. Protestantism, after undergoing many bitter persecutions, culminating in the frightful massacre of St. Bartholomew's day, was driven from this fair land. During the eighteenth century a period of comparative inaction obtained in the churches, until rudely awakened by the French Revolution (1789). Since that time there has been a most decided reaction against the skepticism and irreligion of those unhappy times, and all the churches have moved forward on broader lines of philanthropic and missionary plans and purposes.

AN ENDOWED COLLEGE FOR THE GIRLS OF MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: The subject of better facilities for the higher education of the girls of Mississippi, under the management of our church, is justly claiming the attention of both Conferences. As was expressed by Bro. T. W. Lewis in writing on this subject some time ago, "The day for doing something for our female colleges has fully come." New conditions are making new demands, and if the Church hopes to share with the State in the education of her daughters, it must meet and supply the demands.

Mississippi stands in the very front in her provisions for the high collegiate training of her girls. The establishment of the I. I. and C., with its curriculum only slightly inferior to that of the university, together with co-education in the university, makes it imperative upon the church to provide better facilities than at present afforded. There should be no unfriendly rivalry whatever between the Church and State in education, but rather a spirit of mutual emulation; but so long as the church female educational forces of the State are so scattered, we can not hope to maintain a successful competition. Hence it appears to my mind that the first step for the church to take in this matter would be to concentrate the forces of both Conferences, and instead of trying to support three or four colleges with short curriculums and no endowment fund, centralize them into one, and thus we will be able to give our girls advantages equal to those afforded our boys.

The property belonging to the female colleges of our church in this State, as now located, is worth near, or quite, $100,000, out of which might be realized an amount sufficient to furnish a building in every modern and adequate style, with a large surplus left as an endowment fund. Then put the enterprise into the hands of some Morrison of the State, and ere long not only Methodism, but the entire people, would feel a deep pride in a girl's college that would meet the demands of the highest mental, moral, and Christian culture. LAYMAN.

Kosciusko, Miss., April 23, 1898.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS!

At our State League Conference, held at Meridian, April 14-17, twelve hundred dollars was pledged by the Leagues of the State for the year '98-'99, one-half of which goes to our Water Valley Orphans' Home, and the other half to the support of a missionary. Shares of ten dollars each were taken to the amount of six hundred dollars by the Leagues represented at the Conference, and I'm very sure the other Leagues of the State will respond promptly to the call. League presidents throughout the State are requested to present the matter to their Leagues at once, and report to me the number of shares taken by them. Let us attend to this matter, and see that Mississippi does not fall behind. Some of the States are supporting three missionaries. All funds collected for this purpose must be forwarded to me. I trust the entire amount will be forthcoming within the next few months. East End League, at Meridian, of which Miss Minnie Buntyn is president, has already paid one share, which fact entitles said League to be called the "Banner League" of the State. Now, what League will respond next? The district League secretaries of the State for last year are requested to give prompt attention to my communications to them, as it is imperative that I have the desired information as soon as possible.

MISS VIC THOMPSON,
Cor. Sec. and Treas. of State Epworth League.

"THE MOST RELIGIOUS," "THE BEST ALL-ROUND COLLEGE IN THE GULF STATES."

These expressions in the advertisement of President Beeson, of East Mississippi Female College, stand in need of explanation. It is an injustice to the people, if they believe it. It is an injustice to all other institutions for female education, whether it is believed or not.

I am fully aware that it appears badly for me to write this article. I am aware that there are some who will take it as an attack upon a Methodist institution. To all such I make the plain, simple statement that these expressions of President Beeson are an attack upon the Christian integrity of every female college in the Gulf States. What he says is either true, or not true, and so far as my personal knowledge of East Mississippi Female College goes, comparing it with four other institutions personally known to me, it is neither "the most religious" nor "the best all-round college in the Gulf States." If President Beeson has any facts or figures to prove his naked assertions, let him produce them. I, in common with the presidents of at least four other colleges, deny:

1. That East Mississippi Female College offers any opportunity for religious advancement, or does anything which tends to make her pupils superior, religiously, to the pupils of any other institution.

2. That the claim of a "high curriculum" is unfounded in fact. There are other institutions doing more work and with better equipments.

3. That at East Mississippi Female College there are to be found the best musical advantages in the Gulf States.

4. That it is the cheapest institution, considering the advantages. There are institutions granting diplomas who have no higher course than East Mississippi Female College, but they are cheaper.

Of course, this last denial is based on the printed rates of President Beeson, and on his assurance that he does not cut his rates.

Whitworth College is open to President Beeson and any other interested party. We invite criticism of our buildings, our grounds, our furnishings, our course of study, and class-room work. We are not perfect, but we are pressing towards the mark.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS,
Pres. Whitworth College.

CHURCH VS. STATE SCHOOL.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading with no little interest what Bros. Featherstun, Malone and Lewis have been writing about our church schools. To all they have suggested I say "Amen!" if it can be done. But these brethren are going to find it a long and hard pull to get our people to give money to endow our church schools, so long as they are taxed, not only to build and furnish the houses for State schools, but to pay the tuition of those who prefer to send there. This unrighteous taxation will close every church school in the State which is not well endowed, and it will cripple them.

With no axe to grind, as I will soon be out of college work forever, I must say that it is unjust for the Christian people of Mississippi to be taxed to pay the tuition of those who prefer the State school in which to give their children the higher education. I have no war to make on our State schools, except in self-defense, as a man would fight to save his own life, and this we have got to do, or die. This unfair taxation must stop, or it is only a question of time when the church schools of Mississippi must close forever. Are we prepared for this?

Why should the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics and Episcopalians, who all have church schools in the State and own nine-tenths of the property, be required, after furnishing nine-tenths of the material necessary for these State schools, to pay nine-tenths of the tuition of those who prefer to send their children to the State school? This is just what we are doing now, and we warn the advocates of the State school that they had better be satisfied, with a reasonable portion, or they may lose all. The muttering thunders of dissatisfaction with this oppression is to be heard in the distance, and it is only necessary for the friends of church schools to unite their forces to sweep everything before them.

Let us have both. This we can have if those who prefer the State school will pay their tuition. We are willing to give them the free use of these well-furnished buildings, and build our own houses, if they will only pay their own tuition; and how any reasonable man could ask more of nine tenths of the people, is beyond my comprehension. Of the advantages of church schools, I shall have somewhat to say at the proper time. J. W. HONNOLL.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS.

The first Conference of Sunday-school workers of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, was held in the lecture-room of Central Church, April 12-14. The Conference had been called by order of the Sunday-school Board. In the absence of Rev. J. W. Brown, president of the Board, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, secretary, was master of ceremonies.

The Conference was called to order by Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews, presiding elder of the Meridian district. Miss Annie Cassell, of Canton, was elected temporary secretary. Dr. Andrews gave us a short, but very impressive discourse on "What We Ought to Do at This Convention."

A very cordial address of welcome was delivered by Miss Sallie Smylie in behalf, not only of Methodism, but also of the 20,000 inhabitants of Meridian. Owing to the non-arrival of Mrs. A. F. Watkins, the response was made by the Rev. J. T. Nicholson.

Committees were appointed to draft a constitution and to nominate permanent officers.

A well-prepared paper on "The Intellectual Qualifications of a Teacher" was read by Rev. R. H. Barr, and this was followed by an interesting paper on "What Methods the Sunday-school Might Adopt from the Day-school Systems," by Prof. J. C. Fant, principle of the Meridian Graded Schools.

Announcements were made, the long-meter Doxology sung, and the Conference was adjourned to the next morning with the benediction by Rev. John A. B. Jones.

Wednesday morning the Conference was again called to order by Dr. C. G. Andrews. The devotional exercises were led by Rev. J. A. Randolph, of the North Mississippi Conference.

The Committee on Constitution, through Rev. H. G. Hawkins, chairman, reported, and after a slight amendment was unanimously adopted. The Committee on Nominations reported as follows: For president, Rev. F. M. Keen; for secretary, Miss Annie Cassell; for first vice-president, the president of the Conference Sunday-school Board; for vice-president of the Jackson district, W. G. Barnes, of Brandon; for Vicksburg district, Rev. J. G. Galloway, of Edwards; for Natchez district, Rev. J. F. Abney, of Natchez; for Brookhaven district, Rev. Jno. A. Moore, of Bogue Chitto; for Forest district, W. M. Thornton, of Lake; for Meridian district, J. Heard Ledyard, of Meridian; for Seashore district, H. S. Gunn, of Ellisville. The report was adopted without dissent, but Miss Cassell declined to accept the office of secretary, and Miss Annie Mellen, of Canton, was elected to fill the vacancy.

H. S. Harmon, superintendent of the West End Sunday-school, read a suggestive paper on "The Advantages of the Loyal Sunday-school Army Plan," which provoked some inquiries and discussion.

A paper on "The Work of the Sunday-school Board," well written and concise, was read by Rev. F. M. Keen. This was followed by some remarks by Rev. J. A. Randolph explanatory of the work of the Sunday-school Board of the North Mississippi Conference.

A paper prepared by R. M. Cameron, superintendent of the DeSoto Sunday-school, on "Children's Day Last Year and This Year," was read by Rev. H. G. Hawkins. This paper elicited hearty commendation.

"The Importance of the District Sunday-school Conference" was admirably presented by Rev. G. S. Harmon, of Lauderdale.

A "Question-Box" was established and announcements made for afternoon session. Then followed an address by Rev. T. L. Mellen on "The Influence of the Sunday-school on the Home, the Church, and the World."

After benediction by Rev. Geo. H. Galloway, a recess was taken till 3 o'clock P. M.

The Conference was called to order by the new president, and the devotional service was conducted by Jno. Watts, superintendent of East End Sunday-school.

"How to Make the Sunday-school Attractive" was the subject of a thoughtful and attractive discourse by Rev. J. T. Nicholson, of Shubuta. After this came a carefully prepared and very suggestive paper on "Habits of Lesson Study at Odd Moments, and How Formed," written by Miss Lula Hawkins, was impressively read by Miss Mary Hawkins, of Hattiesburg. Mrs. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, read an excellent paper on "How the Art of Talking to Children May Be Cultivated." This was followed by a twenty-minutes' practical demonstration of "How to Conduct a Teachers' Meeting," by L. P. Brown, of Meridian, using Mark xvi, 1-8, as the lesson, and "The Resurrection of Our Lord" as the subject.

R. H. Barr, C. M. Crossley and W. D. Hawkins were appointed to prepare a roll of the Conference.

The papers read by Miss Mary Hawkins and by Mrs. A. F. Watkins were requested to be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

A memorial to the General Conference, offered by Dr. Featherstun, was unanimously adopted. It asks that paragraph 211 of the Book of Discipline be amended by substituting the word "Conference" for "Convention," and other changes in the wording.

Rev. J. T. Nicholson pronounced the benediction, and a recess was taken till 7:30 P. M.

Wednesday night the Conference was duly called to order. Devotions were led by Rev. J. T. Abney, of Natchez.

"How to Get the Pupils to Study the Lesson" was answered in ten-minute talks by Hon. S. B. Watts and Geo. W. Monroe, of Meridian. "How to Get All the Children to Sing" was a paper well written and well read by P. A. Lindrose, of Wesson, who confessed that he had never succeeded in his efforts in that direction.

After Hymn No. 5 of the "Young People's Hymnal" had been sung, a large congregation had the pleasure of listening to an elaborate address by Dr. H. M. DuBose, of Jackson, whose subject was, "Jesus, the Model Teacher."

Dr. Featherstun pronounced the benediction.

Thursday morning, April 14, the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. T. Horsey, of the North Mississippi Conference.

Certain resolutions, offered by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, were adopted and ordered referred to the Conference Sunday-school Board for further action.

"The System of the Jewish Sabbath-school in Meridian" was presented at some length by Rabbi Willner. "What We Can Do to Improve the Country Sunday-schools" was earnestly presented by Rev. J. C. Ellis, of Middleton.

A black-board exercise by W. H. Hawkins, of South Side, showed careful preparation.

In the absence of Rev. Dr. Murrah, of Jackson, President Beeson, of E. M. F. College, was called on to explain the work of "The Home Department," and did so in his usual clear and succinct manner. This called forth some interest and discussion.

The usual resolution of thanks was presented and adopted by a rising vote. The selection of a place for the meeting next year was left to the Executive Committee. The president was elected our fraternal delegate to the State Interdenominational Sunday-school Association, to meet in Oxford, May 3-5.

The "Question-Box" was opened and questions answered by different members of the Conference.

The secretary was instructed to report proceedings to the ADVOCATE.

The Committee on Enrollment reported a very gratifying attendance from many parts of our Conference. It is hoped that a full attendance will be had next year. The Discipline requires the holding of such a Conference yearly, and every Sunday-school ought to be well represented.

FROM THE WORK.

J. L. Moore: "The first Quarterly Conference of the Gansville charge, Arcadia district, Louisiana Conference, was held at Siloam Church, April 9 and 10; Rev. H. T. Crews, P. E., in the chair. A goodly number of the official members were on hand. This is Rev. J. H. Brown's fourth year on this charge, and from his report it bids fair to be the most fruitful year of all. He reported a Sabbath-school organized at each of his appointments, and I don't think there was a Sabbath-school on the charge when he came here three years ago. Bro. Crews gave us one of the finest sermons. I pray that God may give Bro. Crews long and fruitful years in His vineyard. On Sunday morning, by eleven o'clock, the church could not hold the people. Bro. Crews preached a most thrilling sermon. The drouth has come and gone, but it has shown the true Christian character in every grade of life."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., April 23, 1898: "We have just closed a revival meeting of great success and power. The church was much revived, and about twenty conversions and reclamations. We have eight applicants for membership, and others to follow. The conversions were of the clearest type. They would stand up in the congregation and testify to their conversion with bright faces that indicated a heart full of joy. We were assisted from time to time by Bros. H. O. White, W. W. Drake, A. S. J. Neill, J. G. Sloane, and Sister Rogers. All these faithful helpers did good work, for which we are thankful."

Rev. R. A. Davis, P. C.: "My work is still advancing. Our second Quarterly Conference, which convened on March 26 and 27 (at Waterproof), was a success. The presiding elder came on Tuesday, March 22, and preached every night during the week. His sermons were strong and impressive, the congregations increasing until on Sunday morning, the twenty-seventh, there was a crowded house and the presiding elder seemed at his best in preaching. The Lord's Supper was administered to a large number of deeply impressed communicants. It was a blessed time. On Easter Sunday the happy children acquitted themselves splendidly. The church was handsomely decorated with lovely flowers, the chancel beautifully arranged, with the grey moss and variety of roses and flowers interspersed, overhead and back of the pulpit were the words in large green letters, 'The Lord Is Risen.' I, of course, preached on the resurrection to quite a large and attentive audience. My congregations are increasing at every appointment, which are Waterproof, St. Joseph, Wesley, and L'Argent. On March 27 the presiding elder reorganized the Epworth League with 16 members. We now have over thirty. Pray for us, that the work may continue to improve."

A REVIVAL IN PICKENS, MISS.

Rev. J. C. Lowe, pastor of our church at Pickens, North Mississippi Conference, closed a meeting of great power last week. He called me to his assistance. We continued eleven days. The Lord poured his Spirit upon all the people, and great good was accomplished. There were but few in the town that did not belong to some denomination; hence we only had but eighteen to join the Methodist Church. The greater part of the work was done in the church. It has never been my pleasure to help a better, a more intelligent and painstaking pastor than Bro. Lowe, and Sister Lowe, his consecrated wife, is indeed his helpmeet in the work of the church. Their people love them. It would be difficult to find language to express my love for the people of the beautiful little town of Pickens. God bless them all! is my prayer. W. D. BASS.

HELPFULNESS.

The Scriptures teach that we should not live for ourselves alone, but for others' good as well. A selfish life is a false and sinful one. Christ, who exhibited manhood in its best estate, has left us an example of helpfulness which we should earnestly strive to imitate. He said of himself that he came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life in service to others.

If we would be like him, we must strive to make other lives useful and happy. This is not only our duty, but becomes our happy privilege. And remember that we can succeed in this good work far better than Satan would have us believe. He would call us off by suggesting our unfitness and the uselessness of any attempt, on our part, to benefit others. Christ has promised to be with us and bless our efforts. With his help we can not fail.

Would we be happy? Then we must learn that real happiness is to be found only through helpfulness. Any search for it elsewhere or by other means will surely end in bitter disappointment. Do we want sunshine and peace to come into our own lives? Then "every morning let us build a booth to shelter some one from life's fierce heat. Every noon let us dig some life spring for thirsty lips. Every night let us be food for the hungry and shelter for the cold and naked."—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

There is always hope for the young man or young woman who has an affinity for the light; an upward aspiration like some trees which have such an innate longing for the sunlight, that they crowd past everything which impedes their progress, bending in their course around trees or any other obstruction, reaching up and up and up, until they get above the surrounding forest and bathe their proud heads in the bright free air and sunlight.—Success.

Few men understand women. When a woman is weak, sickly, nervous, fretful, irritable and despondent, the average husband imagines that she is simply out of temper. An average husband will probably simply go out and leave her alone for awhile, "to have it out with herself." A bad husband is liable to go off and get drunk. The fact is that the poor wife is suffering from illness of a description that breaks a woman down sooner than anything else. Her back is weak and aches. Her "sides stitch." She has pains and a dragging sensation in the abdomen. Her appetite is touchy and she suffers from nausea. She has sick headaches, giddiness, dizziness, cold chills, flushings of heat, shortness of breath, palpitation, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, irregularities and nervous and trembling sensations. Her pain-racked nerves are a continual torture.

A woman in this condition is suffering from weakness and disease of the delicate and important organs concerned in wifehood and motherhood. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes these organs strong and well. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It has transformed thousands of sickly, nervous, petulant, childless and unhappy women into happy, healthy, helpful, amiable wives and mothers. It banishes the discomforts of the period of prospective maternity and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. Good medicine dealers sell it and an honest druggist does not try to urge upon you an inferior substitute for a little extra profit.

If you want a 1008-page home doctor-book, send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover mailing only, for a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. French cloth binding 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Doubt not but that in the worlds above,
There must be other offices of love;
What other tasks and ministries there are,
Since it is promised that His servants there Shall serve Him still.
—Archbishop Trench.

Who shall set limits to the power of the human will?

We trust as we love and where we love. If we love Christ much, surely we shall trust him much.—T. Brooks Service to our fellow-men should be made not a substitute for piety, but an expression of it.—Josiah Strong.

The man "who knows it all," knows much that isn't so. Men are finding this out.—Southern Christian Advocate.

A man may walk with a very high head, while his soul crawls unobserved in the dust at his feet.—Baltimore Advocate.

In order to achieve the highest success, a man must love his calling; but it should not be forgotten that he may learn to do this.

A world without a Sabbath would be like a man without a smile, like a Summer without flowers, and like a household without a garden.—Beecher.

There is no happiness in having and getting, but only in giving; half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness.—Henry Drummond.

If, instead of a gem or even a flower, we could cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give.—Macdonald.

Men imagine that they communicate their virtue or vice only by overt actions, and do not see that virtue or vice emits a breath every moment.—R. W. Emerson.

Where God becomes a donor, man becomes a debtor. The debt of sin is mercifully discharged for him, that the debt of service might be willingly discharged by him.—Thomas Secker.

When you feel like barking because the world don't roll as you think it ought, ask yourself if you ever saw the moon quit shining because some silly canine spent a large share of his time in barking at it.

Nothing is so completely beyond the power of death as a noble love. Parting can shatter only its outward shell. Under that strange touch, love in its inmost recesses kindles and glows with a divine fire.—George S. Merriam.

The present time—youngest born of eternity, child and heir of the past times with their good and evil, and parent of all the future—is ever a "new era" to the thinking man. To know it, and what it bids us do, is ever the sum of knowledge for all of us.—Thomas Carlyle.

THE SECRET OF MAKING THE GOSPEL EFFECTIVE.

The pessimistic view is entertained by some Christians that the gospel is not as effective as it once was, and hence that other agencies are of equal importance with it for the elevation of mankind and the eradication of the many evils now existent. That the gospel has lost its power to transform the lives of men and to accomplish the renovation of society we do not believe. Many of the greatest triumphs of the cross have occurred within the present century, and never before in all its history has Christianity been so influential or so extensive in its sway. Ours is the only religion that is making new conquests, that has survived change after change of civilization and government. Christianity has made more conquests during the last hundred years than in all the 1800 years before. This being the case, it is the height of folly to prate about a general decline of the power of the gospel.

It is true, however, that in some sections and in certain classes of society the preaching of the gospel seems barren of results and of power to arrest the attention of men. There is much of religious effort that accomplishes very little in comparison with what the agencies employed would naturally lead us to expect. A considerable number of professing Christians, it appears, have drifted into a lamentable skepticism as to the prime necessity and marvelous potency of the gospel. Hence while they believe it ought to be disseminated, they regard it as only one—and, perhaps, a comparatively unimportant one—of a large number of beneficent agencies for the moral uplifting of mankind. Some of the higher critics and certain scientists of the Herbert Spencer type attach little importance to the preaching of the gospel, which, though foolishness to some, is the God ordained means of purifying a fallen race.

Rev. Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll, of London, the brilliant editor of the British Weekly, in a recent address before a notable gathering of Methodists in the great English metropolis, spoke the following pertinent words anent the tendency just mentioned:

"Some are of opinion that in certain stages of culture the direct preaching of the gospel is useless. There are missionaries to the heathen, for example, who devote themselves to teaching and to the work of civilization for whom the preaching of the evangel is in the meantime a secondary occupation, if indeed it is an occupation at all. There are settlements under the auspices of evangelical churches where the evening of the Lord's day is systematically devoted to lectures on secular subjects, lectures delivered often by persons who reject Christianity. It is said in explanation of this that people will come more readily to hear addresses, say, about Robert Browning than to hear about Jesus Christ. The gospel in the meantime is a failure."

Whenever Christians, and especially ministers, lose confidence in the supreme mission of the religion of Christ, their efforts are sure to be shorn of power and efficiency. If the gospel has really lost its power anywhere, it is because Christian workers have come to trust overmuch in church machinery, human ability and worldly wisdom. We heartily agree with the noted preacher who recently said, "The drunkard who has been permanently reformed without the power of the gospel is a rare bird." Nor will any better success attend other attempts to dethrone vice and build up sound character without the aid of divine grace.

Many, it seems, are expecting far more beneficial results from the dissemination of culture, legislative reforms, improved environment, and the more equal distribution of wealth than from Christianity. This is an egregious error. From the beginning until now Christianity has proved itself to be the most potent agency for the uplifting of mankind. Remarkable indeed is the testimony of Samuel Marsden, the pioneer missionary to New Zealand, who early in his career said, "Civilization must work in preparation for conversion." After twenty years he reached the startling conclusion that civilization is not necessary before Christianity, but that it invariably follows Christianity rather than conversely.

While we would not discount in the least the importance and value of scholarship, of education, of moral and legislative reform, of improved environment, etc., we must not forget that the chief duty of the church is to bring men to know and love God. Wisdom, eloquence, genius, tact, energy and other human gifts and attainments have their place, and a very important place in the propagation of the gospel, but of themselves they avail little. Human means and forces must be supplemented by divine power, else the preaching of the Word will be a vain and meaningless thing. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Dr. Nicoll, in the remarkable address quoted from above, strongly emphasized this point. Said he: "Let me recall the cardinal and mighty difference between addresses and sermons, between essays on literary and social themes, and the preaching of the gospel of Christ. It is not so much that one subject is nobler than all others, as one Name is above every name. There is no power in the Christian gospel, however fully and correctly declared, to change the heart. The difference is this: that when we preach the gospel we may, if we will, have bestowed upon us the power of the Holy Ghost. The Christian pulpit is no solitude if the Holy Ghost be there. When we receive of the things of Christ and declare them, he is near us and he works with us. Then it is, and only then, that the centre of the life of man is broken into; then it is, and then only, that the heart is supernaturally changed. In a certain sense we may be doing Christian work when we communicate useful information, when we help people to spend their evenings pleasantly in listening to interesting speeches. But the supreme and characteristic work of the Christian ministry is never done without the direct co operation of the Holy Ghost, who has but one theme—he takes of the things of Christ."

It is hardly possible for us to realize too deeply that the regeneration of the individual and of society is to be accomplished by the agency of the Spirit in connection with the Word.

Let us not, however, make the mistake that some do of decrying learning, eloquence, organized effort, tact, etc., under the supposition that the Spirit is as ready to bless stupidity and sloth as he is the opposite qualities. We have no warrant for believing that God puts a premium upon either ignorance or indolence. Foolish indeed are they who imagine that reliance upon the Spirit will atone for all short-comings and deficiencies in Christian work.

Some also who loudly emphasize the necessity of depending upon the aid of the Holy Spirit, make little or no allowance for diversities of gifts. To hear them talk one would think that every preacher ought to be as successful as a Moody or a Spurgeon. When results are small and discouraging, they raise the oft-times unwarrantable charge that the Holy Spirit has not been duly sought and honored. Large success is not always a possibility. Even our Savior could do no marvelous works in some places because of the prevalent infidelity of the people, and the same condition oftentimes prevails at the present day. Now, as in his day, human free agency counts for something. Moreover, it should be remembered that God expects fruit only according to ability and opportunity. He does not expect two talents to accomplish as much as ten.

Another essential element in the proclamation of the truth is sympathy on the part of the messenger. The gospel to be most effective must be preached by men who are in touch with the masses—who mingle with them, and know their needs. Where such is not the case, the Word will fail of its proper effect, even though the aid of the Spirit be earnestly invoked.

Having, then, supreme confidence in the truth of his message, in the grandeur and success of his mission, and in the adaptation of the gospel to the wants and woes of men, the preacher of truth should exhibit a zeal, faith and singleness of purpose that no temptations can divert and no difficulties can discourage. Everywhere let the cry be heard: Christ alone is the hope of a lost and despairing world.

THE MULTIPLICATION TABLE.

"Oh! Two dollars is such a small sum that it does not make any difference to the publisher whether I pay it now or wait until next year." So says a subscriber. This would all be very well if it were the utterance of only one, but when two or three thousand subscribers think the same way, where will the money come from to pay the printers? Put the multiplication table to work.

PAST-TENSE REFORMERS.

It is a curious fact that after a revolution has been effected, however violent and bitter may have been the conflict through which it was accomplished, everybody approves it, and points back to it as one of the great achievements of the race. The overthrow of feudalism, the Lutheran reformation, the downfall of slavery—we all glory in those things now. We are proud of the human race that it has ever had men in the crises of history brave enough and noble enough to face the wrongs which had become intrenched in law, and institutions, supported by popular sentiment and protected by temporal power.

It is so easy and delightful and safe to be heroic in the past! It is so inspiring to be reformers and take high part in the great achievements of the world—by reading books! It is no hard task to be martyrs, so long as martyrdom is kept in the past tense. Hail to Savonarola! hail to Wyclif! hail to Knox and Cromwell, to Garrison and Phillips! Yes, we are all of us with the reformers of the past. We lay the flattering unction to our souls that if we had lived in their day, we would have taken our places by their sides in the battles which they fought and in the martyrdoms which they suffered. Perhaps we would, but—perhaps not. What are we doing with regard to the reformations of the present day? How do we feel when we see some man trying to pull down the sin-reeking fabrics of present iniquities about our ears? On which side do we now stand with reference to the men against whom is directed the same old hiss of hate that was heard about the cross of Christ? Can we be heroic in the present tense as well as in the past? Do we exult in the prospect of the cross as a personal contingency in the near future, as we do when we view it at the safe distance of many centuries, and as the instrument upon which other men were crucified? It is much to be feared that if Jesus should suddenly come among us, he might say to some of us as he said to the Jews of his day: "Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them."—Central Advocate.

WHEN?

If we would be tactful, we must be timely. The man who "sizes up" the entire situation—his friend's state of mind, his own state of temper and willingness to be fair, the place and the surroundings—and then, seizing a time when all these things are in best accord, offers criticism or advice, or even rebuke, in carefully preconsidered words, is said to have "tact;" and what he says on such an occasion is likely to have the effect that he would wish it to have. He has tact, for he has studied to put himself considerately into touch with everything that bears upon the case in hand—most of all with his friend's feelings at the time. A word of criticism or advice uttered by me to-day may only serve to ruffle still more my friend's feelings, already ruffled over another matter; to-morrow that same word may accomplish all that I could wish, and at no cost of disturbed feelings or strained relations between us. If this time is not the best time for me to act, in view of all the circumstances with which I am familiar, or ought to be, then it is wrong for me to do now what may be right at some later time. "When?" is not a less important question than "What?" in determining our duty.—Sunday-School Times.

CRITICISM.

Why are we so sensitive about criticism? Can it be that we count ourselves perfect? Or is it that we love our imperfections? If not, let us welcome the kindly words that show us our faults, or even the unkindly words, for all the more effectually, perhaps, will they pierce the armor of proud reserve with which we unwisely surround ourselves. We never shall be better until we are ready to treat our critics more cordially. The chief usefulness of friends is neutralized by our stupid refusal to let them even suggest that we have fallen into some objectionable ways. When they venture on this piece of helpfulness we make it so uncomfortable for them that they are very shy of repeating the effort. It is the certain mark of a fool to hate correction and wrap oneself up in an obtuse and obstinate ignorance. The true man wants to know the truth about himself even if it hurts, for then and thus he will take steps to become more of a man.—Zion's Herald.

SADLY TRUE.

The Washington Post, a leading secular paper, records a fact with which too many of our pastors are sadly familiar, and which ought to be quickly remedied. It says: "If there is one thing in which churches, as a rule, need to be more careful, it is in this matter of pastors' salaries. With an indifference and an insensibility which we can not understand, many churches seem to think that a contract between themselves and their ministers is no contract at all. They promise him a definite salary, and then pay him whatever is convenient. The gas man, the coal man, and even the sexton, must be paid, but the debt owing to the minister is looked upon as altogether righteous and proper."—Religious Telescope.

That Religious Telescope sees and brings to the view of common people a great many good things, and it does a great work in that way. But it does seem that the truth in the above paragraph ought to be seen with the natural eye without the aid of a telescope, religious or other, or without the aid of a Post, Washington, Uncle Sam's, or other. Is not honesty the same thing everywhere, and in every relation where intelligent man is concerned? Can not the natural eye see that whatever is honest for one man is equally honest for a body of men? Perhaps it would take a telescope or microscope to discover that it was dishonest for a preacher not to pay his debts, and yet quite honest and reputable for a congregation not to pay the preacher. The truth there is so far off or so exceedingly small that no natural eye can ever see it. Nevertheless, it is just as dishonest for a congregation not to pay their preacher as it is for one of them not to pay his merchant.—Wesleyan Advocate.

CATCH THEM.

A friend of mine visited a trout stream last Summer. In reporting his experiences, he said that hundreds of trout saw him, were disturbed by him, and were very conscious of his presence, but not one of them was caught. Sabbath-school classes may be conscious of a teacher's presence and be impressed; but he is not accomplishing the real work of a teacher unless some of the members of the class are converted. The true fisherman must do more than entertain the fish; he must catch them.—C. R. Stouffer, in the Standard.

THE CURFEW DECREASES CRIME.

The curfew tolls the knell of passing hoodlumism. Over three hundred towns and cities, chiefly in the Middle West, have passed the curfew ordinance, requiring children under fifteen, without leave of absence, to be at home by eight o'clock in Winter and nine o'clock in Summer. This restoration of an old-time custom has diminished youthful arrests 75 per cent. in some cities, and fully 50 per cent. in others.—Christian Register.

If one would realize how thoroughly the Bible permeates our modern thought, one should undertake to speak without making use of a scriptural fact, figure or sentiment. It may seem an easy thing to do, but there is probably not an American-born citizen who could keep his tongue going five minutes without invading the Bible at some point, though he may never have read a single chapter of it.—Bible Reader.

The Publishing House at Nashville has increased its capital $185,000 since the last General Conference. Its present value is $700,000.

Joseph F. Louhat has given Columbia University, New York, $1,000,000 for a library endowment in memory of his parents.

Southern Methodists generally will take great delight in reading the following paragraph from a recent contribution to the Independent on China by Rev. S. L. Baldwin, D. D.: "One of the greatest educational influences is the Wang Kwok Kung Pao, or Universal Gazette, so long published by Young J. Allen, LL.D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shanghai. It is eagerly read by intelligent mandarins and gentry in all the great centers of China, and even finds its way into the imperial palace. It has poured floods of light into thousands of receptive minds. Dr. Allen also did great service in publishing a history of the war with Japan, the last chapter of which dealt with the need of an entire reconstruction of Chinese civilization. This also has been read in the palace and in all the chief yamens of the nation, and is everywhere the theme of conversation among mandarins and intelligent leaders of the gentry. An edition has been published under native auspices, with the last chapter left out. But that chapter is already in the hands of those who have the greatest influence."—Central Methodist.

The courage we desire and prize is not the courage to die decently, but to live manfully.—Thomas Carlyle.

ARCADIA DISTRICT.

I have finished my first round of Quarterly Conferences on the Arcadia district. I am so much encouraged at the outlook for this year that I must speak out through the ADVOCATE.

The preachers of the district were soon at their posts after Conference, and went to work like the true men of God that I believe them to be. Some of them have done a great deal of pastoral work; others have done more than in the same length of time in the past. I am so glad that the brethren are seeing that pastoral work from house to house begets the confidence and love of the people, and largely increases their congregations. It is not only a blessing to the people, but a means of grace to the pastors in nearly all the charges. The stewards have made adequate assessments for the support of their pastors, and there has been a large increase in finances over the first quarter last year, also a large increase in Sunday-school work and attendance upon public worship. Some of the preachers have already secured all their collections in cash and pledges.

The Lainesville circuit, under the faithful pastorate of C. F. Staples, has built a nice five-room parsonage, furnished out and out, except painting, and that will be done, and it furnished; and I am glad that there will be no debt against it. The Woman's Home and Parsonage Society gave $100 to help build it. God bless the dear good women in their work and labor of love in trying to secure a home in every charge to shelter the preachers and their family! Brethren, help them. There ought to be societies organized in all our charges. The building of this parsonage shows what can be done when a preacher takes hold by faith with the determination, by God's help, to succeed. The Lainesville circuit is not a very strong one. The people said to Bro. Staples when he undertook the work that he could not do it; but he gave no heed to their opinions and moved right on, and as a result of energy and faith he has one of the best parsonages in the district. May God bless all the people in the building of that parsonage!

This North Louisiana has suffered from dronth in the past so that most of our people are poor; but they are as true and loyal people to their church and Christ as can be found anywhere.

I am now making some vigorous speeches at all my quarterly meetings in the interest of the ADVOCATE—rather in the interest of the people, for it is to their interest to take it and read it.

I am working, praying and expecting gracious revivals in every charge. May the good Lord grant it, and may the Holy Spirit guide the Annual Conference in all its work!

CHILDREN'S DAY.

To the Pastors and Sunday-school Superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference:

Our motto this year is "Children's Day observance at every church in the Conference," according to paragraph 248, Discipline, 1894. From this we note that the observance of the day, including the collection, is not optional, but a requirement of the law of the church; therefore, no pains should be spared for its fulfillment by all of our 464 Sunday-schools. Last year we made a gratifying advance beyond any previous record. There were reports from 112 pastoral charges; only 29 failed to report. This year let us make it unanimous.

From the reports of last year we note as follows: Every pastoral charge in Grenada district reported. The banner district in the Conference was the Columbus; the bannor charge was Brooksville circuit. In general, the collections were better on the circuits than the stations. In each district the banner charge was a circuit. Which district and which charge shall bear the Conference banner, and which charge shall bear the banner in each district for 1898?

The programme for this year is excellent and educative, and if properly rendered, will prove both interesting and instructive.

By order of our Sunday-school Board, the programmes have been sent, in due time, to the pastors presumably enough for each pastoral charge. If, however, anyone needs more, he can be supplied by applying to the undersigned. They are furnished free of charge.

We fail to see any good reason why the children and all the people of every church should not have the privilege and benefits of Children's Day service "on the third Sunday in May, or as near thereto as practicable," even if the pastor or superintendent should have to read or rehearse the programme himself.

And now, brethren of the pastorate and Sunday-school work, let us unite our very best efforts for the most general and best Children's Day observance that we have ever had.

Yours in the work,

G. W. BACHMAN,
S. S. Agent.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL MAGAZINE.

If the style is the man, Dr. Jas. Atkins is elegant. There is so much carelessness and woful ignorance of the ordinary principles of composition evinced by most of the leaders one reads, that something pure and chaste is refreshing.

The article on the Transfiguration, in the April number of the magazine, is grand. "The Great Memorial," in the May issue, is sublime.

Such purity of diction, clear expression of thought, and orderly arrangement, one does not encounter every day. S. J. DAVIES.

Clinton, La., April 26, 1898.

As it is a well-established fact that catarrh is a blood disease, medical men are quite generally prescribing Ayer's Sarsaparilla for this most loathsome and dangerous complaint. Where this treatment is perseveringly followed, a thorough cure is invariably the result.

REV E. B. FOUST.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce in the ADVOCATE the death of our dear brother, Rev. E. B. Foust, at his home in Rayne, La., on Tuesday night, April 26, between 8 and 9 o'clock. He was taken very suddenly with neuralgia of the heart, and died in a few minutes. On Wednesday, the twenty-seventh, we took his remains to the church. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers by his warm friends. Rev. I. T. Reames and Rev. M. C. Manly were present, and we performed the funeral service. From Rayne we took the corpse to Crowley, La., and there we laid his body in the cemetery, but his soul is in heaven. May the Lord bless his wife and little children that he has left behind! is my prayer.

BY H. N. HARRISON.

TOPIC FOR MAY 8.—"TAKING THINGS PATIENTLY." I PET. ii, 20; LUKE xxi, 19; ROM v, 3.

1. The lesson of patient endurance must be learned by daily experience. We must remember that "tribulation worketh patience." We do not think that God can, in answer to one's prayers, impart to the soul a certain measure or degree of patience off-hand. If a poor heathen should pray to God for an education, would not the Lord answer by schooling him? We, too, must take a course in spiritual athletics and training if we would be patient. (Acts v, 41; Matt. v, 11, 12.)

2. We are often more distressed or harassed by little trials than by great troubles or disappointments. Some of us have known of men who could sustain a loss of thousands of property in a day without a murmur, and yet their souls would be vexed beyond endurance by some petty annoyance at home. In the one case they were fortified against the trouble; in the other they were not.

3. There are many disagreeable things and disagreeable people to be encountered every day. They cross our paths and oppose our hearts' desires on every side. Nevertheless, Jesus loves disagreeable people, and we, too, as he did, may endure kindly and patiently the contradiction of sinners, and even of Christians, against ourselves. A heart full of love will solve this difficulty.

4. We are commanded not only to love our friends, but to love our enemies. We must bear and forbear. It is a high-grade religion that can be patient with those who misrepresent, slander, or misjudge us. In doctrinal matters let us be patient with each other. Let us not put other folks out of the church, or drive them out of the pulpit or the Conference because they differ from us. (Rom. xiii, 9, 10; John ix, 34 38.)

5. If it should be the time of the Annual Conference, and the Bishop has sent you a preacher you did not want, take it patiently. Do not fly off the handle. Remember that Nineveh did not send for Jonah, neither did Jonah desire Nineveh; yet it was a good appointment all round. (Rom. xv, 2-7.)

6. Let us not regard the petty trials of daily life as "crosses." Every Christian has just one cross—no more. Jesus carried only one. When our patience is sorely taxed by many trials, we have the unspeakable privilege of going aside into the solitary place of prayer. In the secret place we shall transform these things into blessings. If we flee from them, they will overtake us; if we fight them, they will overwhelm us; but if we be closeted with them, we shall conquer. (James i, 2-4, 12.)

The pastor who moves heaven and earth to get people into his church so that he can report the largest membership finds it hard to understand the spirit of the Master who could decline the offers of some people to follow him. Best Edition of the World's Best Book,
—THE—
"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. WHEN I AM A MAN.

BY MRS. LUZIE DE ARMOND.

"When I am a man, I'll not worry and scold,
Or growl at the weather if too hot or cold;
I'll not use tobacco, nor drink wine or beer,
And o' everything bad I'll be sure to keep clear.
I'll try for the good of others to plan,
And be a brave soldier, when I am a man.

"When I am a man, I'll let little boys
Have fun, if they do make plenty of noise.
I'll feed the beggars who stop at my door,
And give of my wealth to the ailing and poor;
I'll strive to be honest, and do what I can
To make the world better, when I'm a man."

Said grandma: "Why wait till you're grown?
Right away
Commence your reform. Begin with to-day;
You may never be old, nor rich, nor yet great,
And many a blessing you'll lose while you wait.
Strive to be and to do the best that you can,
And life will be sweeter when you are a man."

—Temperance Banner.

SYSTEMATIC BENEVOLENCE.

I am encouraged in the belief that there is a growing number among us who conscientiously put aside the Lord's portion and dispose of it for his cause according to their best judgment. This good scriptural method is by no means general, not even among those who are well able to give. Careless, spasmodic giving; giving what is left, if anything be left; giving if circumstances of our own selfish making permit, is not of faith, is not Christian giving. Christian giving is an act of principle, of faith, of prayer, of worship. It is a service which of right makes claim on God's blessing, and never fails to secure it. Faulty, unscriptural giving is an empty formality, often profaned by a grudging mind, and will always be inadequate to the need. The Lord's claims are never met, nor is his blessing ever secured in that way. Such giving has no fixed object, and failing to serve the cause, it fails as much to benefit the individual. I venture the assertion, and am confident it can be sustained by ample proof, that if the rich and the poor in our General Synod would, with faith in God, with humble trust in his promises, and as an act of Christian devotion, set aside a fixed portion from all sources of income for the Lord, two things would happen:

First, there is not a congregation or synod in the church that would not exceed its apportionment; every Board would be amply supplied, and the blessing of God on every pastorate would become a thing of mention, thanksgiving and praise. This is no wild nor sentimental conjecture; it is the assurance of God's Word and the testimony of his faithful stewards.

Second, every man and woman, every legitimate enterprise, every home, would be advantaged. The poor would not be distressed, but would be relieved, while the rich would rejoice in God's increased favor.

Obedience, love for and trust in God—these are not the things that bring us adversity and hindrance; they are the things that assure a larger and better prosperity. Would God that our present embarrassed condition, with the appeal of an ever-widening opportunity coming from every quarter, might move the whole church—every minister, man, woman and child—to so recognize their stewardship as would make the scriptural law of giving among us a characteristic of our church and Christian life. That would mean all indebtedness provided for, all treasuries full, and a much-needed blessing of God on our beloved church.—M. Rhodes, D. D., in Lutheran Observer.

THE BRAVEST THING.

To stand by one's principles at all times and under all circumstances, calls for the highest quality of courage. Colonel T. W. Higginson, when asked to describe the bravest deed that ever came to his notice, told the following:

On mature reflection, passing by some hair-breadth escapes, I should award the palm to something done by a young assistant surgeon of mine, not quite twenty-one years old, Dr. Thomas T. Miner, then of Hartford, Conn. It was at an exceedingly convivial supper party of officers, to which a few of my younger subalterns had been invited. I saw them go with some regret, since whisky was rarely used in my regiment, and I had reason to think that it would circulate pretty freely at this entertainment. About Doctor Miner I had no solicitude, for he never drank it.

They sat late, and the fun grew fast and furious. Some of the guests tried to get away, but could not; and those who attempted it were required to furnish in each case a song, a story or a toast. Miner was called upon for his share, and there was a little hush as he rose up. He had a singularly pure and boyish face, and his manliness of character was known to all. He said:

"Gentlemen, I can not give you a song or a story, but I will offer a toast, which I will drink in water, and you shall drink as you please. That toast is, 'Our mothers.'"

Of course, an atom of self-consciousness would have spoiled the whole suggestion. No such quality was visible. The shot told; the party quieted down from that moment, and soon broke up. The next morning no less than three officers from different regiments rode out to my camp, all older men than Doctor Miner, and of higher rank, to thank him for the simplicity and courage of his rebuke.

It cost more courage to do what he did than to ride up to the cannon's mouth.—Selected.

MOTHER'S MOODS.

The household barometer is always to be studied in the mother's face. Others in the home may have moods, but she can not afford to indulge in such a luxury; for her province is to regulate not alone the weather, but to fix the climate, and ordain the atmosphere which shall prevail in the nursery, at the table, in the parlor and over the whole house. "What is mother about?" inquired a big boy of his sister, as he came home from the shop where he was learning how to be a business man. "Making sunshine for everybody, as usual," was the reply. When we think how the mother's looks and tones affect the babies, how early the little ones begin to reflect her in that soul-likeness which shines out in the face, we can not overestimate the importance of her self-control. She must be amiable, whoever else frets. She must be brave, whoever else is cowardly. She must be tender, though others are brusque. Because she is a mother, and, therefore, the arbiter, under God, of her children's destinies, the former of their characters, she must abide with Christ, deriving daily strength from communion with him.—Christian Intelligencer.

The day of diligence, duty, and devotion leaves us richer than it found us.—W. E. Gladstone.

THE MAN WHO LIVED.

He should have been dead.

But he wasn't, because——

"There's nothing succeeds like success." There is no withstanding the living argument of the man who should be dead, who isn't dead, but who would be dead, but for a preserving medicine. That's about the way it seemed to strike Editor Lawrence, of the Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, Ohio. He was afflicted with one of those colds that have, thousands of times over, culminated in consumption, when not promptly cured. In this condition he met a friend, a consumptive, whom he had not expected to see alive. The consumptive friend recommended Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for the editor's cold, on the ground that it had "helped him wonderfully." It helped the editor just as wonderfully, giving "almost instant relief." But read his letter:

"About two months ago, I was afflicted with a bad cold, and, meeting a friend, he advised the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which, he claimed, had helped him wonderfully. As he was a consumptive, whom I had not expected to see alive for several years, I concluded there must be merit in this preparation. I accordingly bought a couple of bottles, one of which I keep on my desk all the time. This is certainly the best remedy for a cold I ever used. It gives almost instant relief, and the J. C. Ayer Co. are to be congratulated on possessing the formula for such a very valuable remedy."—W. H. LAWRENCE, Editor, The Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, Ohio.

Keep a bottle of Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral handy, on the desk, in the office, on the shelf or in the closet at home, and you will have at hand a remedy that is capable at any time of saving you suffering, money, and even life. There is no malady so prolific of evil results as a neglected cold. There is no medicine so promptly effective in curing a cold and absolutely eradicating its effects, as Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Every traveller should carry it. Every household should keep it. It cures every variety of cough, and all forms of lung and throat trouble. Asthma, bronchitis, croup, and whooping cough, are promptly cured by it, and it has in many cases overcome pulmonary diseases in aggravated forms, when all other remedies failed to help and physicians gave no hope of cure. Those who for convenience have wanted a smaller sized bottle of Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, can now obtain it of their dealer in half size bottles, at half price—50 cents. Send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook, and read more of the cures effected by this remedy. The book contains 100 pages, and is sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

THE ART OF BEING PATIENT.

A wise man in an address to young men advised them to learn the hardest lesson in the world—the art of being patient. He said:

"Do your duty and leave success to take care of itself, and then you will see the wisdom of the old proverb, 'Everything comes to the man that can wait.' You know, for instance, how hard it is to learn a difficult subject. All the ideas are unfamiliar, all the words are unfamiliar. We go on laboring and seem to make no way. Now this disheartens nine students out of ten—the nine out of ten that will always be obscure people—but the tenth man goes on. He works harder and harder, he lets his mind play around the subject, he lets the ideas of that subject soak into his brain, he is determined that nothing can possibly resist persistent effort, and one fine day a great flood of light comes in—he suddenly sees all about it. His work is easy, his work is delightful. Everybody says of him: 'What an amazing amount of ability that young man has!' No, it was not ability, it was patient perseverance. The man had learned to labor and to wait."—Richmond Advocate.

WHAT IS HOME?

A prize which was offered by a London paper for the best definition of a home brought about five thousand answers. Some of the best were the following:

"A world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in. Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit."

"The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity."

"The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world."

"Where you are treated best, and grumble most."

"A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world, where we can be shielded from its cares and annoyances."—The Presbyterian.

POOR GIRLS.

The poorest girls in the world are those not taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them, and they have been taught to despise labor and to depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. The most forlorn women belong to this class. Every daughter should learn to earn her own living, the rich as well as the poor. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly around; the rich are likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Skill added to labor is no disadvantage to the rich, and is indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do girls should learn to work. No reform is more imperative than this.—London Gentlewoman.

Truth is quite beyond the reach of satire. There is so brave a simplicity in her that she can no more be made ridiculous than an oak or a pine.—J. R. Lowell.

Hygiene.

FOR TIRED FEET.

When the feet are tired and tender after much walking or standing during the day, there is nothing that will afford them so much relief as a good warm foot-bath. Take as warm water as can be borne, and throw into it a handful of sea-salt. Bathe the feet and legs with this for from five to eight minutes, and then rub briskly with a dry towel. The effect is most refreshing. It is a useful thing to know, too, that bathing the feet in this way before retiring, is an excellent remedy for insomnia.—Selected.

SLEEP, NATURE'S MEDICINE.

Menander said that all diseases were curable by sleep—a broad statement, in which, nevertheless, there may be something that is true, for good sleepers are ever, as I think, the most curable patients; and I would always rather hear a sick person had slept than had taken regularly the prescribed medicine during sleeping hours.—Sir Benj. Richardson.

SAVE THE EYES.

A medical journal recommends as a means of saving the eyes from the effects of continuous use in sewing, typesetting, reading, etc., a habit of looking up from the work at short intervals, and glancing about the room. This, practiced every ten or fifteen minutes, relieves the muscular tension, rests the eyes, and makes the blood supply much better.

A simple hygienic fact for many people yet to learn is, that the skin of a fruit is no part of the fruit itself, dietically considered. The bloom of the peach is a luxuriant growth of microbes, and unwashed grapes, eaten skins and all, will show 500,000 microbes for each fluid ounce of stomach fluid. These facts are proof positive of the necessity for thoroughly washing all raw fruit before it is eaten.

A TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF BRO. TUCKER.

Early in my ministry (now nearly seventeen years ago), at a District Conference held at Verona, Miss., I was first associated, in a special way, with our now-sainted brother. The spirit of the Conference was such that the pastor, Rev. R. G. Porter, decided that it would be an opportune time for a revival effort, and hence the meeting was protracted. Rev. Amos Kendall (who was presiding elder at the time), and Rev. J. H. Adair (now of the North Texas Conference), and Bro. Tucker and the writer were invited to remain and assist in the work. During this time Bro. Tucker and I spent most of the afternoons together, and would generally stroll to the woods east of the town, where we would engage in religious conversation and prayer. Here I began to learn something of the inner life of this man of God—his deep piety and earnest consecration to the Lord and the work. Two years later we met at West Point, where we had been sent to assist Bro. C. Y. Ramsey in a meeting. Bro. Tucker had spent the first week of the meeting there, and I came in for the second week. Bro. Tucker remaining a day or two after my arrival, so that I could get the run of the meeting.

One afternoon we were together in a room at the home of Dr. R. F. Scott, of that place, and while engaged in a season of prayer we were both greatly blessed of God, and left the room shouting God's praises, and on leaving the home walked the railroad to the business part of the town, still praising God aloud for the great blessing he had given us. I never met Bro. Tucker after this that he did not mention the occasion.

Our next meeting was at Sturges, at another District Conference. On Sunday, Bro. Tucker was appointed to preach at the C. P. Church. I went to hear him. His text was, 'I shall be satisfied when I awake in His likeness.' He preached himself happy. The power of the Lord was upon him; others got happy. There was much rejoicing. Indeed, Bro. Tucker could not finish his sermon, owing to the great stir among the people. After this it was not my pleasure to be with him any more until last Fall, when I met him at Aberdeen, where I conducted a meeting for Bro. Kendall. Bro. Tucker came down from his home at Corinth, and spent three days with us. During this time I was drawn to him more than ever. I felt convinced that there had been no mistake made when he was appointed presiding elder of a district. We will meet no more in this world. I feel personally bereaved, but then we can meet in heaven. We commend to the grief-stricken family the consolations of the gospel he so long preached. The grace of God is sufficient for them.

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HARDY.—The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society have lost one of their most loved and useful members. Mrs. MARY HARDY died in February last, aged seventy-four years. She was a native Louisianian, born in Ouachita parish. Her maiden name was Duty. She first married Mr. John Little, of Minden, La. After his death she married Mr. Hardy. Her death was very sudden. Not only the sick and the church societies miss her blessed influence, but many a household in Ruston will feel the heartache of a vacant chair. Everyone felt at home with her and loved her. Like the blessed Master, she spent her time in going about doing good. Her message to these societies was, "that all should live in love and unity, and work for the salvation of souls." Also a special message for us to care for the minister and his family. She was always a true friend to her pastor; always ready in the right time and place to speak a kind word of encouragement. Her unselfish interest for others' welfare manifested itself even amid her sufferings. In her pain no murmur escaped her. She was tenderly cared for in the home of her step-son, Mr. Robert Hardy, with whom she resided, and was to the family a loved mother and grandmother.

Such lives are a blessing to the world. Language is inadequate to describe her lovely Christian character. The most of her life was spent in the church of God, which, as we do, will miss her presence, but her memory leaves a sacred influence.

PRICE.—Judge WILLIAM PRICE died April 3, 1898, at his home in Louisville, Miss. He had been afflicted about six years, but was not confined to his room until six months ago. As the end drew near his trust in God grew surer. He had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, at this place some fifteen years, or more. He was born in Chester district, S. C., Aug. 5, 1839, but came to Noxubee county, Miss., while quite a boy, where he was raised and lived (except during the late war he spent four years in the Confederate Army in Virginia) until twenty-three years ago he came to this place Louisville, where he was happily married to Miss Mamie Miller, of this place, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was a typical Southerner; a lawyer, by profession, of no mean standing; had a wonderful brain. His powers of description and memory were simply marvelous. He was a brother of one of Noxubee's distinguished sons, Senator Walter Price. No man was truer to his friends, and especially was he the friend of those in trouble, regardless of color.

Two days before he died he called his family and many friends who were present, and gave them his dying blessing; also the family servants came in for a rich share. Messages of love were sent to many relatives and friends far away. At this time he exclaimed, "I am so happy; there is not a fleck of cloud in my sky." Two days later he fell gently on sleep, leaving a weeping widow at his bedside, one child, and many other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. D. W. BANN.

YURR.—JUNIUS C. YURR was born in Woodson, Lafayette county, Miss., near Oxford, March 25, 1842, and died at his home in Memphis, Tenn., March 31, 1898. He was converted April, 1853, and joined the Presbyterian Church in Toccopola, Miss. On his removal to Memphis he connected himself with the Pennsylvania Avenue Methodist Church, July, 1884, of which he was a member until his death. Soon after joining he was elected a trustee, a steward, and made the treasurer of the Board, and also of the Sunday-school, in which positions he was most faithful and prompt. He loved his Master, his church, his cause, and found his greatest pleasure in His service. He was a constant attendant upon preaching, Sunday-school, and Epworth League. He loved his Bible. He was loved by everyone. He was an affectionate husband, a kind father, a good neighbor, and a consistent Christian. Two years ago he professed sanctification, and ever afterward exemplified the doctrine of perfect love. He volunteered in '61, and followed Gen. R. E. Lee until his surrender at Appomattox. He was married to Miss R. Dunn, Aug. 17, 1865, by which union he had a son and daughter, who survive him. She died May 6, 1882. On March 26, 1885, he was married to Miss Florence L. Tucker, with whom he lived happily until death. He died trusting in his Savior. May God comfort and bless the sorrowing wife and children! M. F. LEAKE.

FLOWERS.—G. H. FLOWERS was called from his earthly home to dwell in that bright world above on March 21, 1898, aged seventy-four years three months and two days.

He served his time out here on earth a consistent member of the Methodist Church. While in his last days his disease would not admit his going to church, he would have prayer meeting and preaching at his home. He had been married three times. He raised a large family. Two wives and eight children had preceded him home. He leaves a wife, seven children, a host of grandchildren, and a number of other relatives and friends, to mourn his departure. Oh, how we miss him! His vacant chair, his presence and his voice no more on this earth to be seen or heard; but we can think how sweet it will be when we meet him in that bright land, and what a happy meeting that will be to meet our grandpa, who petted us so much. God giveth life, and he taketh it away; blessed be the name of the Lord!

Sleep on, grandpa, and take thy rest;
We know thou art in the land of the blest.

His granddaughter, LUIS.

COWART.—The following resolutions were adopted by the first Quarterly Conference, Pleasant Grove charge, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, In the providence of our Father our brother and co-laborer, Dr. E. COWART, has been called from the church on earth to enter into the rest that remains to the people of God; therefore, be it to use up clothes—rubbing them on a washboard, and washing them with harmful things. Unless you want to waste money, don't do either. Use Pearline. Use Pearline rightly, and there's no washboard needed. No rubbing to speak of. No wear. No hard work. As for the safety and utter harmlessness of Pearline, let its twenty years of uninterrupted and constantly-growing success talk. Anything that hurts or weakens the clothes couldn't be used, year in and year out, by millions of careful women. 555

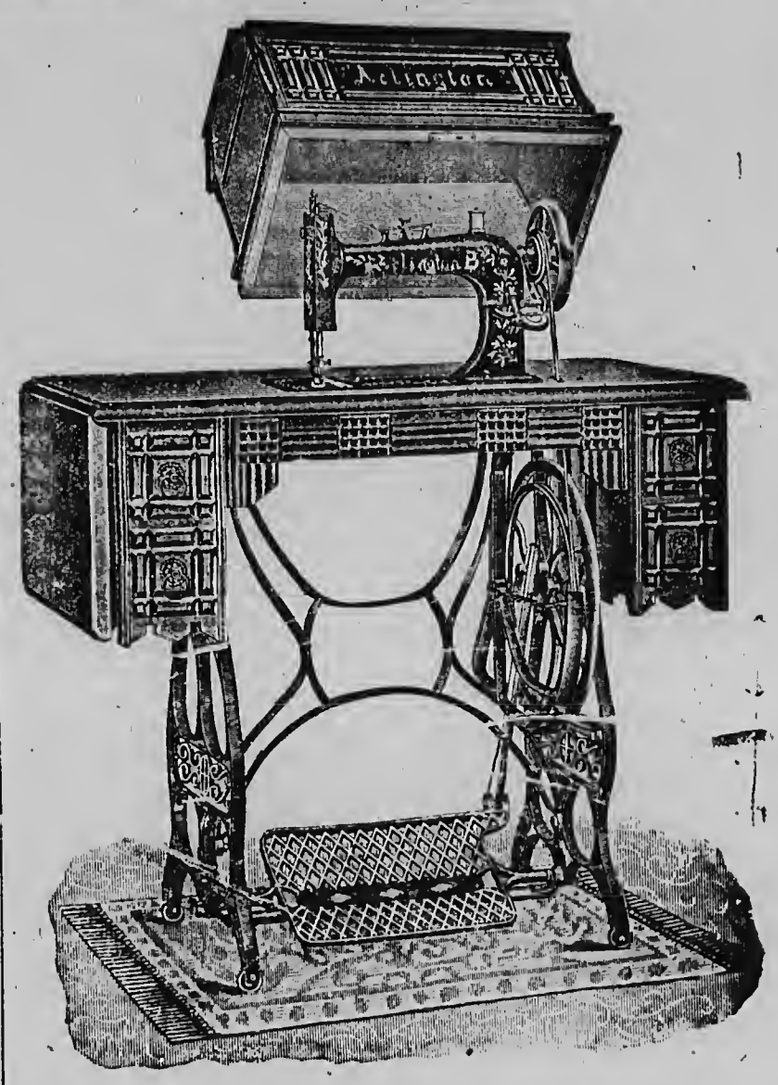
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm. Its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has six faw bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A chorus of forty Chinamen was a feature of a recent service in a Baptist Church in Baltimore.

To old Sixth Battalion belongs the honor of having been the first company of volunteers to enter camp at this point. The Sixth is now the second battalion of the First Regiment.

The northern coast of Cuba has been blocked by the squadron under Admiral Sampson, and a number of Spanish merchant vessels have been captured. Just how successful the blockade has been is not known.

With only a few of the Methodist (North) Conferences to be heard from, the vote on the question of equal representation of laymen with clergymen in the General Conference is 3134 for and 929 against.

At 8:15 o'clock, on Sunday, the train bearing the State troops from Lake Charles and New Iberia rolled into the Southern Pacific depot. There was a large crowd of curious sight-seers gathered at the railroad station, and when the soldier boys alighted they were given a hearty cheer.

A skirmish occurred between the Matanzas batteries and a few of Admiral Sampson's ships on Thursday, and the exchange of a few shots between the flagship "New York" and a small battery along the coast near Havana on Saturday. It is believed that the Matanzas forts were badly damaged; but it is probable that the damage was not so severe that it could not be easily repaired.

The State Department has given out a list of all governments that have declared neutrality, viz.: Italy, Netherlands, Sweden and Norway, Switzerland, Colombia, Mexico, Russia, France, Corea, Argentine Republic, Portugal, Japan and Uruguay. It will be noticed that the department list does not include Great Britain, although she was the first to proclaim neutrality, for the reason that no official notice has been given.

It is now certain that the present war with Spain will cost a very large sum of money, and, as there is no possible hope of collecting an indemnity, the entire cost must be paid eventually by the American people. Those who believed that the contest would not last longer than a few weeks are likely to be disappointed, as it is clear that Spain will not yield until compelled to do so by the exhaustion of her resources. She certainly will not yield Cuba until an American army has been landed on Cuban shores and has driven the Spanish army from its principal strongholds.

It is the intention of the Republican leaders in Congress to raise an extra sum of $35,000,000 from fermented liquors, an extra sum of $25,000,000 from tobacco and cigars and cigar licenses, a sum of $30,000,000 from taxes on stamped paper, etc., the whole additional taxation to amount to close upon $100,000,000. In order, moreover, to obtain money for immediate expenses, the bill will authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow at any time not to exceed $100,000,000, to be represented by certificates of indebtedness bearing 3 per cent. interest, to be payable within a year from date of issue. Then, to have full resources with which to carry on the war, it is proposed that the government should be authorized to raise a big sum of money, probably $500,000,000, through an issue of short-time, 3 per cent. bonds, repayable in coin.

The expected conflict between the Asiatic Squadron of the United States Navy, under Admiral Dewey, and the Spanish Philippine Squadron took place Sunday in the harbor of Manila, in the East Indies, and the result was a great victory for American arms. The fact that the Spanish fleet was vastly inferior in size of ships and weight of guns no-wise detracts from the importance of the victory, nor were the odds in our favor so great when it is considered that the Spanish vessels fought under the protection of the guns of their shore batteries. Admiral Dewey's fleet attacked the Spanish in their stronghold, Manila, where the Spanish fleet had the aid of the heavy shore batteries. The engagement lasted for a considerable time. It is not possible that the American ships can have escaped considerable injury, but it is evident, from the failure of the Spaniards to claim the destruction of a single one, that none were disabled or destroyed. One after the other the Spanish vessels were silenced, and three caught fire, including Admiral Montejo's flagship, the Reina Maria Cristina, from an explosion caused by a shell from one of our vessels. The admiral at once transferred his flag to the Isla de Cuba. One Spanish vessel was sunk and several were run ashore to escape capture. Commodore Dewey's attention was now directed to the land batteries, which he silenced, after a brief and energetic bombardment. Manila surrendered to the American fleet on Tuesday.

WOMAN.

"Weep with them that weep." Perhaps we have all done this. But there is a class over whom we ought to weep who shed no tears for themselves. Think of the poverty and desolation of a woman's life who has never reverenced the kingly qualities in father, brother, husband, or friend, so as to feel men were all-sufficient for the needs of Church and State, but that she must take up the burden. Reverence for fine manhood seems next to our religion. The culminating bliss of motherhood is when the mother-love mingles with reverence for the man who was once her baby. It is a matter of history that when woman's influence, outside of home, was greatest in Greece and Rome and France, these nations reached their greatest degradation, which ended in ruin. That England prospers under her gracious Queen is due to the fact that she has been more of mother and wife and womanly woman than ruler. Do those who clamor for woman's suffrage really believe every woman will use her vote for the good and the right? A lady inclined to woman suffrage, after canvassing for names to a petition for Sunday observance, said, "I thought they would all sign, but I find them just like men—considering expediency and not the right." Sam Jones favors this, too, when beseeching an audience of women not to offer wine to guests. Some refused to promise not to do it. Dr. Smith, of Georgia, gives a sad picture of scenes in Atlanta. Women could not vote, but used their influence to make men vote against prohibition. His words recall a passage from a sermon of Dr. Winans, "It took a woman to show the depths of degradation to which human nature can fall, as it took an archangel to make a devil." Every avenue of usefulness is open to women. Statistics show she is in every avocation except the army. If she votes, she should not shrink from this. But she ought rather to be a Florence Nightingale than a Napoleon or a Grant. In the New Testament the record of woman is service in a womanly way, and what more could we ask than the Master's approving words, "She hath done what she could"?

INTEMPERATE SILENCE.

One may be as intemperate in his silence as in his speech. The man who discovers the house afire, and holds his tongue, is wickedly intemperate in his silence. The man who hears a false rumor, and, knowing it to be false, does not correct it, is hurtfully intemperate in his silence. It requires occasional speech to mine the gold out of occasional silence. We are to put a watch upon our tongues, not a padlock. There are prayer meetings which have suffered woefully because Christian people have indulged themselves in the dissipation of an intemperate silence. He who speaks beyond the point of truth or courtesy, is intemperate in his speech, but he who is silent beyond the point of helpfulness or kindness, is intemperate in his silence. —Sunday School Times.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

You will find our offer of the "Combination" Bible on the fifth page; the other on the third.

BISHOP WILSON

In speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ROUTE TO BALTIMORE VIA WASHINGTON CITY.

The Chesapeake and Ohio railway with its connections offers by far the most interesting route to the Conference in Baltimore in May. The route from Louisville is through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, passing Frankfort, the State Capital Lexington, and the home of Henry Clay. At Ashland the line from Cincinnati is joined; the route from Cincinnati being along the banks of the beautiful Ohio river for 165 miles. Shortly after entering West Virginia the banks of the Kanawha river are followed, Kanawha Falls is passed and the canons of New River are penetrated. After skirting the picturesque Greenbrier for 50 miles, the heights of the Alleghenies are reached, and next comes the Shenandoah Valley, the Blue Ridge Mountains and Piedmont section, the most beautiful of the Appalachain Valley. After passing through Charlottsville and Gordonsville, the route is through the most memorable battle-fields of the Civil War, among them Cedar Mountain, Culpepper, Rappahannock, Warrenton Junction, Manassas and Bull Run.

For complete description of the C. & O. Route address C. B. Ryan, A. G. P. A., Cincinnati, Ohio.

"VICI" IS A CONQUEROR.

The largest leather factory in the world is in Philadelphia. It is largest because it has greater demand upon it for the finished product than any other factory, and is often unable, even with an army of trained workmen, to keep up with the demand. This is the only factory where Vici kid is made. When Robert H. Foerderer invented the complicated process by which Vici kid is made from goat skins, he worked a revolution in the glazed kid trade. The beautiful finish of the new leather, its softness and its durability all marked it as a distinct advance, and orders poured in on him from all over the world. Even the odd name hit the popular fancy, for when he had gained the secret of making the leather Mr. Foerderer exclaimed with Cæsar, "Vici," ——I conquered. The praise of Vici kid rang in the ears of everyone, even Li Hung Chang, and that comfort loving statesmen had several pairs of boots made from it for his personal use. Shoes for men, women and children are made from Vici kid; and in strength, lightness, beauty and durability the leather has fully met every demand upon it. A leather dressing has been prepared by Mr. Foerderer which is as much better than other dressings as Vici kid is better than other leathers. This dressing was intended to keep up the high standard of Vici kid, but the Vici dressing is equally good for other leathers, making them soft and keeping them from cracking in all kinds of weather. It is worth while to write to Mr. Robt. H. Foerderer, Philadelphia, and ask him for a free copy of "Shoeology." It is beautifully illustrated, and crammed full of interesting facts.

The Texas and Pacific give you choice of routes, via Memphis, Shreveport, or New Orleans.

THERE'LL COME A DAY.

BY M. J. PRESTON.

There'll come a day when the supremest splendor
Of earth, or sky, or sea,
Whate'er their miracles sublime or tender,
Will wake no joy in me.

There'll come a day when all the aspiration,
Now with such fervor fraught
As lifts to heights of breathless exaltation,
Will seem a thing of naught.

There'll come a day when riches, honor, glory,
Music and song and art,
Will look like puppets in a worn-out story,
Where each has played his part.

There'll come a day when human love, the sweetest
Gift that includes the whole
Of God's grand giving—sovereignest, completest—
Shall fail to fill my soul.

There'll come a day—I shall not care how passes
The cloud across my sight,
If only, lark-like, from earth's neated grasses,
I spring to meet its light.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

At the General Conference of the M. E Church, South, which began in Baltimore, May 5, the features were the addresses of Bishops and the request of Bishop John C. Keener, of New Orleans, the senior Bishop, to be relieved of his duties. Bishop Keener called the Conference to order. Opening exercises followed. The Rev. Dr. J. J. Tigert, of Nashville, was elected secretary, and he appointed the following assistants: Gross Alexander, of Louisville; A. F. Watkins, of Mississippi; J. McF. Barkus, of Texas, and W. T. McClure, of Missouri.

The rules of the last Conference were adopted.

Routine business was transacted, and Bishop Keener was succeeded as chairman by Bishop Wilson, of Baltimore.

The address of Bishops was read by Bishop Hargrove, of Nashville, and then came the surprise of the day in the request of Bishop Keener to be relieved of his duties. Bishop Keener's voice broke a number of times, and members of the Conference were in tears.

Bishop Galloway responded. He paid a high tribute to the retiring Bishop on behalf of his colleagues. The resignation was referred to the Committee on Episcopacy.

As to lay delegates, the following was said: "Is not the vital relations of the lay delegates of a District Conference to those selected for an Annual and General Conference a sufficient reason to fix a uniform principle and method of direction in all the Conferences?"

The union between the Northern and Southern branches was spoken of. A report will be made on the subject.

A reception was tendered the delegates in the Fourth Regiment Armory, which was attended by 1500 persons. An address of welcome was delivered by Gov. Lowndes, who welcomed the delegates on the part of the people of the State, and by Bishop A. W. Wilson, who spoke for the city churches. Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City, responded for the delegates.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference was opened by devotional exercises conducted by Rev. J. C. Simmons, of California. After the routine of roll-call, reading of the Minutes, the Standing Committees for the session were announced. The Louisiana delegates will serve on the committees as follows: Dr. C. W. Carter on Committees on Episcopacy and Church Extension; Dr. W. H. LaPrade on Committee on Itinerancy, Publishing Interests and Colportage; Rev. F. N. Parker on the Committee on Missions and Appeals; S. B McCutchen on the Committees on Revisals and Temperance; W. B. Thomson on the Committees on Education and Finance; J N. Pharr on the Committees on Sunday-schools, Boundaries and Epworth League.

The members of the Mississippi delegation were assigned to the several standing committees as follows: Dr. C. G. Andrews on the Committees on Episcopacy and Boundaries; Dr. W. C. Black on Committees on Publishing Interests, Sunday-schools and Temperance; Rev. A. F. Watkins on Committees on Missions and Appeals; S. B. Watts on Revisals and Colportage; Edward Mayes on Church Extension and Finance; H. B. McGehee on Itineranoy, Education and Epworth League.

The North Mississippi delegation has been assigned as follows: Dr. W. B. Murrah on Committees on Episcopacy and Appeals; Dr Jno. W. Boswell on Revisals and Temperance; Rev. T. W. Lewis on Missions and Epworth League; Rev. J. S. Oakley on Itineranoy and Boundaries; R. W. Jones on Education and Finance; A. H. George on Publishing Interests and Colportage; G. J. Leftwich on Sunday-schools; W. R. Trigg on Church Extension.

The Conference was called, and memorials, appeals and resolutions were reported and referred to appropriate committees without reading.

Prof. Collins Denny presented the Conference with a gavel made from the wood of the old Sam's Creek Meeting-house. In presenting the gavel Prof. Denny made a delightful speech, in which he brought forth conclusive evidence to show that the little log church just a few miles east of this city, built by Strawbridge in 1762, is not only entitled to the honor of being the first Methodist Church built in Maryland, but in America as well. Bishop Wilson accepted the gavel for the Conference, and the Conference accepted Prof. Denny's arguments.

The Conference adjourned.

THIRD DAY.

The third day of the Conference proved to be but a small improvement upon the preceding days. Since the opening of the session it had been raining almost continuously. The mist persistently evaded the umbrellas of those delegates who were fortunate to be possessed of such an article. The temperature ranged low down, much like a South Louisiana Winter day.

The Conference was promptly called to order by Bishop A. W. Wilson at the appointed time. Rev. R. H. Mahan, of Memphis, conducted the devotional exercises. After the reading of the Minutes, Bishop Wilson vacated the chair, and Bishop J. C. Granbery assumed the presidency. Regular routine work occupied the attention of the Conference, viz: the call of the Conferences for memorials, appeals, and resolutions. The papers were referred by title, without reading, to appropriate committees. This, with a few matters of local importance, occupied the time of the morning session.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

The air is full of war talk now. Some think we have cause to fight, and some think not. A few—very few—seem anxious for war to come. They are going to drink all the blood that will be shed, and whip Spain, and set Cuba free some morning before breakfast. I heard plenty of that kind of talk in sixty and sixty-one. The big talkers were not good fighters then, and I fear they will not be if war comes now. A big blow soon blows over. War is an awful thing, at any time and for any cause, however good it may be. I got my fill of it from the beginning to the end of the conflict between the States. There is no fun, and but little profit and small glory in war. I wish Cuba were free from Spain, and could get her freedom without any more bloodshed. My heart has been sad over the sufferings of the inhabitants of that oppressed and war-cursed island. They are our next-door neighbors. I am glad our country and people have sent them help; have poured in "the oil and wine." I can't blame Spain to want to hold on to Cuba. Just why they oppress the Cubans as they do, I can not understand. I never could understand how a man could be mean and cruel to his wife, and still want to live with her. It makes a hell of one's home. Spain ought to have been good to the Cubans, ought to have lightened their burdens of taxation, ought to have made friends and allies of them. It is foolish to kill the hen that lays golden eggs, or to kick the cow that gives the most and best milk. The Egyptians overtaxed and overtasked the Israelites. This went on till infinite mercy could stand it no longer. God swore in his wrath, and the hosts of the Egyptians were drowned in the depths of the sea. In an effort to gain all they lost all.

It pains me to hear the President of the United States so unmercifully criticised and abused by some people as he is. He has a big job on his hands, and I am sorry for him. I would not try to carry his load for ten thousand times all the honor and money he gets. He is the President of my country, my President, and I do not like to hear people speak ill of him. True, he did not belong to my party, and I did not vote for him, but for all that he is my President, fairly and honorably elected to this exalted position. I am bound, as a good and loyal citizen and as a Christian, to stand by him, to pray for him, and not to speak evil of him. It is against the Word of God and the rules of my church to speak evil of magistrates, or to inveigh against the powers that be. I firmly believe Mr. McKinley is doing his level best to do the right and the wise thing. When I think of this question I think of only one or two things, but Mr. McKinley has to think of one thousand things. It is a wonder to me how his skull and heart bear the strain now upon them. In my family I have to think now for only four persons, and in my charge for only seventy, and this load oppresses me. Mr. McKinley has to think for more than seventy millions of souls. I don't want to swap jobs with him; no, sir, I don't. I have all I can say grace over. If I were where I had to declare war, or to say what meant war and would be sure to bring it, I would hesitate long, ponder well and pray much before I signed the paper. War is no holiday pastime. Some people talk about it so lightly and so foolishly, so wickedly. The very thought of it sobers me, saddens me, and fills me with penitence and prayer. I think of dead men, of wounded men, of men maimed for life, of broken hearts, of widows and orphan children, of desolate and ruined homes, of men hurried before God unprepared, of ruined industries, of stagnant trade, of untold millions of money wasted. I could not possibly speak lightly about it. I do not know enough to say whether we have just cause for war now. All the facts are not before me, and I am not competent to weigh them if they were. State craft and questions of national duty and honor are too big for me. My President and his advisers, and my representatives in Congress charged with these awful responsibilities, will have to decide all these matters for me. Their decision is my decision, and their act is my act; and if they make a mistake, it is my mistake, and I will have to abide the consequences of it. I am not set to govern, but I am bound to be loyal. If loyal to the best of my ability, I have done my whole duty as a citizen. It were folly in me to fret and chafe and kick merely because my party were not in power. In that case I would be a partisan, and not a citizen. It is difficult for an intense partisan to be loyal in either Church or State. He is wanting in connectional and national spirit. The root of the matter is not in him. He is set for his party even against the public weal. It is then a question of

"Me and my wife,
My son John and his wife,
Us four and no more."

May God save us from littleness, narrowness and bigotry of this kind in both Church and State!

THE FUTURE.

The future! Hitherto are directed our hopes; hitherto lead our supremest efforts. The star of destiny beams on the path we have trod, and sheds its glittering rays athwart the course of the future. The circumstances and surroundings of life, the shades and the shadows, the troubles thereat—in the midst of it all we are in doubt. We grope in the dark; we look to the future; we can not see; but hope, eternal hope, springs up in the heart, and we know that God Almighty rules and reigns among the armies of heaven and the inhabitants of earth, and that he guides the counsels of nations, while at the same time he marks the sparrow's fall, and we are content. On this we may rest, whatever betide.

The history of our beloved South for many years has been a checkered past. The stars, in their courses, have fought against us. Once a prosperous and happy land, rich in all material resources, our cotton fields white with the fleecy staple, and corn fields fragrant with the yellow corn, fairer women and braver men never graced a more joyous people. We revelled in the excess of our happy estate; but lynx-eyed envy, from its gloomy retreat, looked on, and growled and carped, and with malignant falsehood characterized a domestic institution as a traffic in human life and blood, and straightway denied our constitutional rights, and backed that denial with military force. Goaded to desperation, we staked all on the bloody arbitrament of battle. We lost, and the victor is now the judge. We were left to work out our destiny in a land blasted, and every green thing withered by the holocaust of civil war; but it was still our land, our native land, and kissing our dead, we laid them to rest, there to sleep until the resurrection morn, when, summoned by the archangel's trumpet, the victor and the vanquished will stand face to face, and God himself shall decide the issue between them.

Any land can more or less quickly recover from the devastation of war, provided only its institutions remain, and this is where our land received its most grievous wound—our institutions were destroyed. The forms, usages and customs which attended those institutions remain, but the thing itself is gone, and gone forever. The result is, that to-day the South is in a transitory stage. We are passing from the old to the new, and just what the new will be only God knows.

The past lives with us in its memories. They are cherished memories. As we walk through the silent halls of memory sweet voices whisper to us. They talk with us of those who for long years have slept in the grave. They call these loved ones back and place them against our side. We see them in all the strength and glow of manly beauty. The high impress of dauntless courage beams in the eye, and their martial bearing betokens the high record which they carved on the scroll of fame. They are calling, calling to their old comrades. Wait a little, ye heroes of the past, and your comrades will be with you. The sands of their lives have nearly run; the days of their earthly pilgrimage are almost ended, when they will greet you again.

We would feign linger here, but the voice of progress admonishes us, "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" We must move on. Our necessities, the needs of ourselves and families, demand that we should assimilate ourselves to existing conditions; that we should go into and become a part of the active life around us. But here I would not be mistaken. I am a Southern man, bred and born such, with the heart and feeling of a Southern man, and I am of the Old South. I would not forget the memory of gallant men who laid down their lives for a cause which to them was dear. I will ever cherish their fame, and of all who went forth in the defense of strict constitutional government. To me this cause was a faith, and these men brethren. And this I can do and feel, and at the same time be a true, loyal American citizen, because this issue, having been settled, it is settled once for all; therefore, no man's present loyalty can be judged of by anything then done or said, or by any view he may entertain with reference to things then occurring; and I would doubt the present loyalty of any Southern-born man to the existing government who failed to cherish the memory of the heroes of the South. He should do this, and at the same time be a loyal American citizen.

Our section, in recovering from the devastation of the past, will develop according to the influences by which we are surrounded, and it being a fact of history that the conqueror impresses himself on the conquered, we may well expect that this development will take place along lines of the conquering institutions. This change is said to be first manifested in the change in the language of the conquered, and just this is taking place with us. In the Old South our divisions of time were morning, evening, and night, as in the Bible. Now we have it forenoon, noon, afternoon, evening, and night. Also many of our young people say "guess" for think or suppose, and also, "He has gone to some place else," for, "He has gone to some other place," and many other similar expressions—all this showing that our vernacular is being changed from Southern to that of the North.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Holly Springs District Conference was held at Holly Springs, April 21-24. There was but a small representation of the laity. The pastors were all present except Rev. B. C. Gray, who was sick. Rev. B. P. Jaco was taken sick on arrival, and was not able to leave his room during the meeting.

We exceedingly regretted to see our long-time fellow-laborer, Rev. J. B. Harris, so broken down in health. May he soon so recover as to be able to resume his work!

Bro. Shipman is in good favor and doing good work in Holly Springs. The brethren generally were in good spirits and hope.

The church in Pontotoc is being repaired and remodeled.

Dr. Cameron and family are occupying the recently purchased and paid-for district parsonage in Holly Springs. It is a commodious and comfortable residence, and in every respect a desirable preacher's home. This leaves but one district in the Conference without a parsonage, and that want may be supplied ere another annual report is made.

Bro. McIntosh has recently held a tent meeting in Grenada, with good results. Particulars not yet received by this scribe.

Bro. Gibbs is engaged in a meeting at Main Street, Water Valley, assisted by Bro. Savage. They go into a tent meeting next week, assisted by Bro. Culpepper.

Bro. Bowen has been in Alabama two weeks visiting relatives with his family, and assisting in revival meetings. He will return in a few days.

Bro. Duke has with his own labor greatly improved and beautified the parsonage at Waterford.

This writer has recently visited Spring Hill, Grenada circuit; Grenada, Water Valley, Holly Springs, Waterford, Potts Camp, Myrtle, New Albany, Union Hill, New Albany circuit; Abbeville and Oxford. At all of which places he did service in his line of work, preaching, talking, selling books, etc. Song books were put in some churches, libraries in some Sunday-schools, and books and papers in some homes.

Expect me at the District Conferences. Do not wait for me to write that I am coming. If I am not there, it will be for good reason.

CHILDS, THE GIVER.

Mr. Childs offers an example almost unique of the daily consistent application of great business ability to the task of distributing as well as of acquiring wealth. It is no exaggeration, perhaps the reverse, to say that Mr. Childs, for the last half of his life, put more time, labor and pains into the work of giving than he did into making money. His gifts began in his business. In his composing-room he paid five cents a thousand above the "Union" price. He continued his own rate of wages when the Union reduced its scale. Those called into close connection with the Ledger chapel testify that this was a good business investment. It gave the Ledger, for the first twenty or twenty-five years of his ownership, picked printers. Pay was high, cases were permanent, and chapel rules easy. Mr. Childs could take the pick of the trade. He put one woman at the case, almost the only one ever heard of in a big daily morning paper—as he could do, having the absolute control high wages gave—and her presence banished the foul language, the oaths and the personal slovenliness into which all men, educated and uneducated, gentle and simple, professional men and mechanics, degenerate without women. The danger of this system of permanence and pay was that, as the years went on, the old and incompetent would be left. This was met by pensions. How early these began is best shown by the fact that while Mr. Childs owned the Ledger but thirty years, he had paid one of these pensions for twenty-six. The waste of careless work was almost eliminated by this system of selection and the enormous advantage secured of willing work in the many emergencies of a daily newspaper. At the same time one must add that among other printers there has been of late years a belief that as the force in the Ledger aged it was not as efficient as it once had been. When the introduction of type-setting machines raised the most difficult of all industrial problems, the ethical duty of an employer to those displaced by new methods—of good to the community, of dire disaster to men past forty, too old to learn a new trade or profit by the general uplift of another milestone in the labor-saving march—Mr. Childs met this, after conference, by retaining all the married men in the new work and referring introduction for a year, in which other men could find new places, while the men reduced their pay so as to divide the loss of the postponement of cheaper methods.—From "Childs, the Giver," by Talcott Williams, in the March Review of Reviews.

Much is said about the need of the work of the Salvation Army in the slums of the cities. There is as much need of the work of a salvation army of some sort in the parlors of the gay and the rich. It is easier to save the wretches that reek in filth than to save the giddy, giggling, dancing, amoring crowd which constitutes what is these days called "society."—Exchange.

THE HOMELESS.

BY EDNA DEAN PROCTOR.

God help the homeless! wanderers on the earth
For whom no roof-inclines its sheltering eaves,
No fireside glows; no voice of love or mirth
Calls to the garden flowers, the hillside sheaves.
'Tis theirs to see the gleam in cottage panes;
The happy groups about the hearth at eve;
While they must cross the moors through chilling rains,
And hide in hut or hedge as twilight wanes,
With but the wind for all their woes to grieve.

Sad hearts! the wayside and the wilderness
Are near to heaven as any fire-lit room!
Despairing Hagar angels stoop to bless;
God talks with Moses in the desert gloom;
And life is but a path to his repose,
Whether we walk through meads of joy and love,
Or in lone wastes where every tempest blows;
Some peerless morn we reach our journey's close,
And, lo! the rapture of the home above!

LOUISIANA STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

This has been a helpful meeting. It has developed sources of strength and has manifested points of weakness in the State organization. As to the machinery of the Conference, all was lacking—State officers, records, and whatever else might have been deemed necessary. Mr. H. H. White, State president, was detained by duties at the Constitutional Convention. Committees of arrangement, printed programs, choir, etc., were also lacking. Of 1,661 League members reported, about 25 were in attendance. The absence of several of our most hearty League workers—notably Drs. LaPrade and Sawyer, Messrs. Henry and Wynn—was felt. At the last moment Rev. A F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, who was to have filled an important place on the program, was detained by circumstances.

The readers of the ADVOCATE may question whether my opening statement can consist with these after details, but I assume them that there is no discrepancy. In the first place, the hospitality of Alexandria was at its best. Then, to compensate for the absence of our League leaders, Revs. T. J. Upton, J. D. Harper, and S. J. Davies, with others, were present, and aiding with prayer, suggestion, and the helpful attitude of older men who are sincerely interested in the great movement of the younger life of the church. Revs. P. L Cobb, representing the Board of Missions, and W. J. Perry, of Chattanooga, were present by invitation, and doing excellent service in the paramount cause of missions. These brethren endeared themselves to all, and went away made happy by success. Vacancies in the program were most happily filled, notably in the discussion of "The League and the Needs of the Church," by Mrs. R. H. Wynn, and "The League a Mode and Means of Christian Effort," by Miss Birdie Edwards, of Mansfield. These superb essays, with another on "The League and the Intellectual Life of To-day," by Miss Lizzie May Sligh, of Mansfield, were commended to the editor of the ADVOCATE for publication. They may lose something of the effect of exquisite elocution when presented in print, but can not be without value to the reader.

The enthusiasm of numbers was not felt, but the strength of earnest purpose and zeal for the kingdom were present. The real work and far-reaching plans of work originating in this plucky little assemblage of leaguers will make this the most notable of the four State League Conferences that have been held in Louisiana. But numbers are to be sought. One of the prominent features of the young people's movement is the vast numbers it has enlisted. We go next year to Crowley by special invitation. Let us go there at least three hundred strong.

The State officers for the present year are: H. H. Ahrens, president; Thad. M. Salter, vice-president; Ada Black, secretary; P. O. Lowry (Farmerville, La.), treasurer. District secretaries: New Orleans, R. H. Wynn; Shreveport, W. H LaPrade; Opelousas, J. M. Henry; Baton Rouge, F. N. Parker; Alexandria, W. J. Roberts; Arcadia, A J. Notestine; Delhi, E. N. Evans. R. H. Wynn was constituted Missionary Secretary. These district secretaryships are a new feature, and grow out of the plan of work adopted by the Conference. This plan contemplates a forward movement in the missionary cause. The Leagues are pledged to the maintenance of a woman missionary—that is, to raising the additional salary of a missionary already in the field who is to become a "benedict." A campaign of education is to be opened by a system of visitation of the Leagues under the auspices of the Board of Missions. Rev. J. M. Henry and Mr. John Wilkinson are a committee to carry out this plan.

Revs. W. H. LaPrade and J. T. Sawyer were named as a committee to organize a missionary institute, to be held in New Orleans next Winter or Spring.

Sunday evening $325.70 was raised in cash and pledges for the missionary work of the Leagues. The balance needed is to be raised by the local chapters through the district secretaries.

A State Literary Department, consisting of Rev. F. N. Parker and Professor Morgan, of Baton Rouge, and Rev. J. L. Pierce, of New Orleans, was organized. A plan was formed for traveling circulating libraries, to be at the disposal of any Leagues that will pay for transportation of the books. The purpose of these libraries is to disseminate missionary and general literature.

A joint editorship for the ADVOCATE League Department was arranged in co-operation with the Mississippi Leagues. It was regretted that the present editor of the department, Mr. H. N. Harrison, could not be retained, owing to action on the part of the Mississippi State Conference in naming the editor.

The spiritual tone of the Conference was deep and strong. We were glad that we had assembled, and parted, having been strengthened in heart and mind, satisfied that something had been done to advance the cause of the Lord.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

Our District Conferences have all been held. As Conference Secretary of Missions, it was my privilege to attend three out of the five. The attendance was above the average. All were harmonious. The cause of missions received a fair share of attention. One devoted a whole day to the subject, two an afternoon and evening, one an entire morning, and the fifth did not fall far behind. We expect good fruit from these discussions of this great cause. Inquiries brought out the fact that opposition to foreign missions is not so common as formerly. The cause is gaining ground; yet there is much indifference, owing mainly, I am persuaded, to lack of information. Pastors are largely to blame. A missionary pastor makes a missionary people. This is proven to be the case by examining the statistical tables for several successive years. Try it.

There have been no great revivals among us, but conversions and accessions at several points. In this respect it is gratifying to state that Dr. C. B. Riddick, of Centenary, San Francisco, makes the best showing. He has accessions nearly every week; has taken in about fifty since Conference. It is to be hoped that he will be kept there as long as the law allows, and then succeeded by as efficient a worker. It is time we had a foothold in this metropolis of the West. Our congregations through out the Conference, perhaps, aggregate as large a number of persons as at any time in our history, if not larger. There is but little friction. The new men are all satisfactory, and generally satisfied. Something has been done in the way of building. The new church in Fresno has been so far completed as to be used for the services. It is a magnificent brick structure, which will have cost, when completed, about $12,000. The auditorium will seat 550, and Dr. Carpenter preaches to very few empty pews. Two new parsonages have been built in the same district, and the church at Bakersfield moved to a more eligible site. The remains of the church in Modesto, Merced district, ruined by earthquake, has been sold and removed, and the contract let for a new building. I am specially interested in this charge, as it was my first pastorate after my return from Mississippi. Considering what I am now about to relate, the above facts are exceedingly gratifying.

Almost every year that I have spent in the State dry-weather prophets have been in the field. They have insisted that we must have a dry year about ever so often. Well, this time they have not prophesied in vain. It has surpassed their most (shall I say sanguine?) expectations. It surpasses '77, in that the drouth is more general. Crops are almost a total failure. Considerable grain will be harvested on the low lands between Stockton and Sacramento, where there is usually a surplus of water, and the harvester will find a few other patches here and there deserving of attention, but only a few. A very small proportion of the area sown to grain will yield any hay even. The early fruit was killed by frost. The supply of water for irrigation is not half sufficient. Except in a few places, irrigation is only resorted to for orchards and vineyards and alfalfa. To save the alfalfa many are sinking wells and putting in pumps. Pasture lands are bare. Many horses and cattle have been shipped to the extreme northern counties and without the State. Many are dying, or being killed by their owners. They make good chicken feed. The worst of it is, that it has been so long since the last real drouth that very few were prepared for it. In past years many made it a rule to have on hand hay and seed for two years, but this precaution was almost universally neglected last Fall. Still, I believe "the Lord will provide."

Our delegates are on their way to Baltimore. I do not know what they have in their heads (they are all good men), but California Methodists generally, I believe, have come to the conclusion that very little legislation is needed, even on the evangelist question. I trust we will have no more than is absolutely necessary.

"THE COMMITTEES UNDER FIRE."

MR. EDITOR: Having caught the spirit of the day and gotten my fighting blood up, I desire to join the pop gun fusilade that is now being discharged over the question of Conference examinations. Of course, the word "pop gun" is not to be applied to Dr. Rickey, nor to his recent article; but let it be distinctly understood that since such heavyweight divines as he and I have entered the field, all others are to retire, for we will settle the question, and settle it right.

Allow me to begin by saying that I have no personal complaints to make against the committees. They always treated me fairly. But when I say that for the last two or three years some of them have been too strict in their examinations, I am but mildly expressing an honest conviction. Here is an example: The class was notified to meet the committee at 9 A. M. They were on hand, but it was 11 A. M. before the first committeeman showed up. He gave them the questions on Wesley's Sermons, and told them that they had an hour to answer them, "for," said he, "you must finish the entire examination by 6 P. M." Well, they had not finished by six, and the time was extended; but in the meantime two honest young fellows, knowing that they could not possibly do the work in the allotted time, had given up and left the class. A certain professor in Centenary College was furnished with the questions, and allowed to answer them at home, as he was not going to Conference. He worked on them twelve hours, but a lot of country circuit riders, some of whom never saw the inside of a college, must be required to do the same work in, say, six hours and a half, allowing thirty minutes for dinner.

Here are the questions on Wesley's Sermons, which are given as a fair sample of what the examination was:

QUESTIONS ON WESLEY'S SERMONS—FIRST YEAR EXAMINATION, 1896.

1. Define (1) negatively and (2) positively what is the faith by which we are saved.

2. How is it shown that the law is not made void through the preaching of faith as the sole condition of salvation?

3. Describe the almost Christian in contrast with the altogether-Christian.

4. How does Mr. Wesley's doctrine of "Scriptural Christianity" bear upon the theory that Christ's second advent must precede the spread of Christianity over the whole earth?

5. What has the sin of Adam to do with the Christian scheme of justification?

6. Distinguish the plain scriptural notion of justification from four erroneous conceptions of it.

7. Have there been more than one covenant of salvation given to fallen man? If so (1) when? (2) where? (3) through what mediation? and (4) in what passage of the New Testament are they contrasted? Give an exegesis of Romans x, 5 8, text of the sermon on "The Righteousness of Faith."

8. Give some account of the threefold state of man, described by Mr. Wesley as natural, legal, and evangelical.

9 The witness of the Spirit. (1) What is the testimony of our own spirit? Reduce your statement to the form of a syllogism. (2) How is it evident that one has this witness? (3) Define, what is the testimony of the Spirit? How is it related to the other testimony (a) in point of time, (b) immediateness or directness, (c) in importance or sufficiency, (d) as to the substance of the testimony—the things testified to?

10. Give a succinct account of Mr. Wesley's doctrine of "sanctification," showing the ground of the necessity for sanctification, (2) relation to the new birth in point of order, nature, Agent of the work, (3) conditions, process, and mode of attainment, (4) characteristics of, by which the circumcision of the heart may be known.

11. Reconcile the teaching of John (1., iii, 9) that he that is born of God sinneth not, and the fact that children of God have sinned. Give an illustration.

12. What is the meaning of St. Paul's expression, "Faith imputed for righteousness?" How may it be understood to comport with the imputation of the righteousness of Christ?

Now, the question arises, For what do we value men—for what they know, or for what they do? If for the first, then let the General Conference pass a law which shall prohibit the Annual Conferences from admitting on trial any but college graduates, and let the committees put the screws to the boys we now have; but if for the second, then, when a lot of hard working young fellows have been turned down two years in succession, and the Bishop has applauded the committees for it, let the Conference have a right and take the matter in its own hands. I know that Methodism has always placed a high value upon education, but I have ever understood that she placed a special value upon men for what they do. Apply this rule to the class in question, and the tables would turn. Four members of that class reported 268 members received during the year on profession of faith, while the committeeman who turned them down reported five.

When a young man with good education is placed in charge of a small circuit or station, where he either has access to a good library or the money to get such books as he wants, and where he has plenty of time to study, then it is all right to require him to know his lesson, and know it well; but when a young man of limited education (and the Conference was made aware of that fact before it admitted him) is placed in charge of a large circuit, where he has to ride several hundred miles during the year, and where he has to do the greater part of his reading either from the pommel of his saddle or by a pine-knot fire, but one under whose ministry souls are converted, then I, for one, arise to protest against iron-clad examinations.

Yours for common fairness,

JNO. B. KENT.

HOME MISSION WORK.

MR. EDITOR: I have seen two articles recently in the ADVOCATE—one from Rev. T. W. Lewis, the other from Rev. W. M. Young—on our home mission work in the rural sections. I would like to give some thoughts to your readers upon this important subject; and as "Gilderoy" says, using the above mentioned articles as a pretext rather than a text.

In the first place, it would be well to give more attention to the difficulties involved in the kind of work to which attention has been called than is usually given. Some preachers have never been on any of these hard works. Others, it seems, have a way of "forgetting the things that are behind," not intended by St. Paul. It is admitted on all hands, I suppose, that the financial difficulty is the main one in the development of our work in the rural sections. I conclude that Bro. Lewis admits as much, as he suggests that appropriations for these fields be increased, and stronger men sent to them. Bro. Lewis then admits that the financial difficulty is the main one, or else he believes the weaker preachers to be stronger than the stronger preachers.

The idea that men can do their best work on inadequate support is opposed to universal experience in all the avocations of life. It is opposed to the Word of God, which teaches that ministers of the gospel should be amply supported. The charges under consideration pay from $140 to $300 for the support of their pastors; much of this sometimes in produce, at prices ranging from 25 to 50 per cent. higher than the market prices. Small as these amounts are, large families must sometimes enlist upon them, or resort to other means of support. It is admitted that "hardness" should be endured, and that sacrifices should be made, and prayerful consideration exercised, before a pastor should engage in any secular pursuit by which to supplement an inadequate salary. But, after all this, if he is possessed of such manhood as would constitute him a leader of men; if he is possessed of an instinct common to all true husbands and fathers, and realizes the obligation imposed by Divine Revelation, he will provide for his family, if it requires some of his time to be devoted to secular work. But if he does this, his ministry will not be so effectual, of course, as it would be if his whole time could be given to its work.

But why has the church in these sections been so poorly developed along financial lines? It is but justice to the people of these charges, and their pastors, to say that many of their most substantial members have moved to the railroad towns. And it is also true that but few, perhaps none, in the South have suffered from the financial stringency of the past five years as the small farmers have. Nine-tenths of these farmers belong to the debtor class, and are compelled to pay 25 per cent. for credit, and then 25 per cent. more on account of fallen prices. Consequently, money is exceedingly scarce among them; yet they compose, to a very large extent, the church in the rural sections. I would not insinuate a discussion of politics in this article, but we can not ignore the facts here adduced, and at the same time form a proper estimate of the difficulties of the work under consideration.

Again, there has been much discontent among farmers, attributable largely to the things above mentioned, and a disposition to cut down all salaries where they have the power to do so. Unfortunately for the preacher in the fields under consideration, he is almost wholly in the hands of the small farmers, so far as his salary is concerned. They think that if an able-bodied man labors for $8 per month, that $25 per month is ample compensation for a preacher. It is quite different with a Board of Stewards composed of lawyers and doctors, whose incomes are good; or merchants, bankers, and large planters, whose employees receive from $50 to $100 per month. There is another truth that should not be lost sight of; to-wit: Uneducated people have but little appreciation of mental work, as a rule.

Again, we have stinginess, pure and simple; stinginess inbred; stinginess the result of generations of false teaching; teachings that the people are in danger of a mercenary and overpaid ministry. Some of the well-to-do or wealthy members in these charges, in order to make a respectable showing for their charges, have doubled their contributions to religious causes, to the great amazement of their neighbors; yet these liberal souls do not give more than a fourth of what is paid by people of the same means in other charges. But they think they have done wonderfully well.

All these things ought to be considered before the preachers having charge of these hard fields are treated to such doses of criticism.

I have stated some of the difficulties of the work in the home mission fields in the rural sections; I would now suggest some remedies. Let the appropriations for these fields be increased. If incompetency is found among our preachers in such degree as to constitute a serious barrier to success, the disciplinary remedy can be applied.

I do not like Bro. Young's suggestion as to the enlargement of the circuits. That would perpetuate the present state of affairs. It might be well to send stronger men to these works. That some preachers are much stronger than others, this writer truly admits; but I do not believe that the difference between preachers is anything near so great as is imagined by some. A change of circumstances would show the correctness of this position very soon. But as it would hurt the feelings of the stronger preachers to be sent to these works—and their feelings should be taken care of at all hazards—why, just continue those in these fields that can not be sent to better works, and give them as fair an opportunity as is proposed for the stronger preachers, and see what they can do. It might be if some of these weak preachers had an appropriation of $450, and $200, or $300, from a neighboring charge, and a large appropriation from the Church Extension Fund, that they could make a good report at Conference. Because a preacher without these things does not make such a good report, shall we say he is incompetent? To do so manifests a logic and charity simply wonderful. Suppose that the work is so difficult as to make development slow with liberal appropriation. Ought the preachers to be continued in charge of these works without such appropriations? Such a course manifests a wonderful conception of justice. Our foreign missionaries are not thus abandoned by the Mission Board. As Bishop Galloway said in substance at a session of the North Mississippi Conference, we should never lose sight of the comradeship of the ministry. Why is it that the stronger preachers would feel hurt by being sent to these home mission fields? Is there anything degrading in the work? We are told that Bishop Capers preached to the negroes during a considerable portion of his ministry, and yet was honored of all; but a great change of public opinion, it seems, has come to pass, and this is the reason that some preachers can not be sent to better works.

It is to be feared that some of our well paid preachers are not doing all they can for the reputation of their less fortunate brethren. Some facts illustrative of this might be adduced, but time and limited space forbid. It is well known that in religious and ecclesiastical matters preachers are moulders of public opinion. It would be well for the charges we have been considering to receive the blame they deserve, and that this blame should not be heaped upon their pastors. It is human nature to shift the responsibility for a bad state of affairs. The work is retarded very much when through the church press, or from the chair of a Quarterly Conference, the people are helped to shift the responsibility for their shortcomings upon the preacher. A preacher should be as true to principle as the needle to the pole, and should feel that he has the sympathy of his brethren of the ministry. Occasionally a "Diotrophes" may be found in these charges who objects to foreign missions, or is opposed to prohibition, or believes in horse-racing. He is fourth-class in point of intelligence and piety, and only first-class in the size of his mouth and the amount of his brass. Yet, at this man's request, the preacher is moved. It would be well for these works for a preacher who is true to principle to receive no censure, even if it is a removal. A removal is frequently regarded by the people as a censure.

NATURE AND MAN

Nature never withdraws her flowers, her music, her joyousness, and her sunlight, from before human cruelty or suffering. She overwhelms man by the contrast between divine beauty and social hideousness. She spares him nothing of her loveliness, neither butterfly nor bird. In the midst of murder, vengeance, barbarism, he must feel himself watched by holy things; he can not escape the awful reproach of universal nature and the implacable serenity of the sky. The deformity of human law is forced to exhibit itself naked amid the dazzling rays of eternal beauty. Man breaks and destroys, man lays waste, man kills; but the summer remains summer, the lily remains the lily, the star remains a star.—Great Thoughts.

SOME THINGS THE COMMITTEE ON REVISALS MIGHT CONSIDER.

Our public church services are conducted so variously by different preachers as to lead one not familiar with what our Book of Discipline requires, to conclude that we have no written form for public worship, found on page 99, paragraphs 217 and 218: (1) Singing. (2) Prayer. (3) Reading a lesson out of the Old Testament, and another out of the New. (4) Singing. (5) Preaching. (6) Singing. (7) Prayer. (8) Benediction. This service is especially prescribed for morning or forenoon, yet with some of our preachers, month after month—nay, years—service has been held in the same church without a single lesson from either Old or New Testament. As to how to correct this, I say evil-wise legislators may devise more than I know. The form is laid down, and the preacher is under a more solemn vow to observe it than an oath in open court could bind him. Then he is charged more solemnly than judge could charge him to "keep and not mend the rules."

Perhaps this question put by requirement in every case in the examination of character, "Do you faithfully observe our form of public worship as laid down in Discipline?" might serve in most cases to correct the wrong. Some say I leave off the lessons to abbreviate and get to the more important part of the services—the preaching—in the shortest time. The writer has heard this replied to by some of our best and most faithful preachers, in words of the following sense: The lessons are a part of the service for which we are not personally responsible; that whatever of failure may occur in prayer or sermon the congregation will hear something of the pure Word of God in the lessons.

Incongruities are witnessed in the administration of baptism by different preachers, and also in the reception of members into the church. The question is asked on page 91 (Discipline): "How shall members be received into the church?" In paragraphs 206 and 207 we read: "When persons present themselves for church membership, let the preacher in charge inquire into their spiritual condition, and receive them into the church when they have given satisfactory assurance of their desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins, and also of the genuineness of their faith and of their willingness to keep the rules of the church." (2) Par. 107—"When satisfied on these points let the minister bring the candidates before the congregation whenever practicable, and receive them according to the prescribed form." How can the preacher enquire into their spiritual condition without a personal—not to say, private—interview? How can he have satisfactory assurance of their desire to flee the wrath to come without direct and personal enquiry of the candidates themselves? How can he be satisfied as to the genuineness of their faith without personal enquiry of the candidate? How can he be satisfied of their willingness to keep the rules—General Rules, of course—of the church without reading these rules and explaining each item to the person?

Under some administrations persons have been known to present themselves as candidates for church membership, and just there and then without one word of enquiry upon these four points, without ever having had a word of conversation with the candidate, receive them by simply putting the formal questions as laid down in the Discipline, paragraph 111. By this process he assumes to know, and in reporting to have received such persons into the church, he claims to have enquired into their spiritual condition, and to have received satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins; also of the genuineness of their faith and of their willingness to keep the rules of the church.

The person has given the card to the preacher in token of a candidacy for church membership, is then seated by the preacher, and without ever rising or moving from the seat in any way is examined and received into the church and formally connected to the church. Such persons are members per force, by right guaranteed by the church but they are not members by force of law. If paragraphs 206, 207 and 111 were put in closer connection with the questions by the preacher to the candidate, so arranged that the preacher could not fail to see the points upon which he is required to be "satisfied" before he brings the candidate forward, nor would he dare before his own conscience to receive him there until those questions had been answered somewhere in some way.

When on my first year's course of study, in my first year in the itinerancy, I was much interested to bring up my studies, I thought I was trying hard to learn all that a preacher ought to know and do. I heard an elderly preacher say: "We ought to have in our course a study on common sense for our undergraduates." That remark did me much good. I slowly got into the practical and slowly took on some common sense. More hard common sense would certainly prevent diversity in administrations.

GOD'S METHODS.

MR. EDITOR: "Shoot error as it flies." When the big ones don't do it, we little ones feel at liberty to pop away. A certain entertaining and popular writer for the Advocates does not seem to believe that God sends temporal calamities—such as floods, yellow fever, etc.—upon men for their sins. Nevertheless, such has ever been God's method of dealing with both individuals and nations. When he delivered his people Israel from Egyptian bondage, he promised them, if they were obedient, he would not send the plagues upon them that he had sent upon the Egyptians, but otherwise he would do so. History shows that God was as good as his word, sending great temporal prosperity upon them when they were loyal, and great adversities when persistently disloyal. The historical part of the Old Testament teems with examples of such dealings. This same writer says in the Baltimore Christian Advocate: "I know nothing of the mind of God, and his reasons for doing things, only so far as he has revealed himself."

Pray, has he not revealed himself in the Bible as thus dealing with men, and also his reasons for it? Where are we to learn the mind and methods of God if not in the Bible? During the late overflow and yellow fever, said writer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE scouted the idea that God would thus punish the Delta for its sins, and let the hills, which was equally sinful, go free. I would ask, Is it not his method to punish a part in order to save the whole? Does not mercy dictate such a course? God must begin somewhere, or sins of all kinds would soon deluge the world, and prove infinitely more terrible and disastrous than floods of waters, famines, plagues, wars, etc. The All-wise knows best where to begin. We are willing to leave that with him, though he should "begin at the house of God."

At the beginning of the gospel dispensation Christ denounced temporal destruction upon Jerusalem and other cities of that day because they would not repent. While temporal calamities are no evidence that those upon whom they are sent are greater sinners than all who are free from them, they are certainly intended to warn all to repent, for no one ever becomes so good that he does not need to repent—the better he becomes the more penitent he is. "A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou will not despise."

Wise and pious Bishop Secker says, "Other men's woes are our warnings;" "their desolation should be our information."

There were some who told Christ of the horrible tragedy of Pilate slaughtering Galileans while engaged in worship. Christ replied: "Suppose ye that they were sinners above all Galileans because they suffered such things? I tell you, nay; but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish. Or those eighteen upon whom the tower of Siloam fell and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all who dwell in Jerusalem? I tell ye, nay: but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Then let us all repent, and God will either avert threatening calamities, or save us in the midst of them, and we shall realize, with David, that "the Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." Obedience is the only safe ground. "Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him." (Isa. iii, 10.)

FROM THE WORK.

Mrs. R. E. Bobbitt, Jena, La., April 27, 1898: "Our people have been blessed with a gracious revival of religion. On the invitation of Bro. Dunn, our pastor, the zealous, earnest, consecrated Bro. A. W. Turner, of Columbia, spent a week with us, and twice a day preached 'Christ and Him Crucified.' Many hard hearts were touched by the simple, sweet, old story, and sinners turned to walk in the narrow way. Cold church members and weak Christians were warmed and encouraged, and all of God's people, regardless of creed, were helped and strengthened for a better life. Thirteen members were added to the church, and the people of Jena feel and know that they are stronger, spiritually, than for a long time. May God help us to hold out faithful!"

Rev. J. C. Lowe, Pickens, Holmes county, Miss.: "We have been blessed in Pickens in our recent protracted meeting, even beyond our expectations. God often does for us 'more than we can ask or think,' for our asking can not go beyond our faith. Bro. W. D. Bass came to our assistance on the eighth of this month, and held three services a day until Tuesday night, the nineteenth. Eighteen persons professed faith in the blessed Christ, and sixteen were received into our church, and the other two will join us next Sunday. One was received by letter. I have rarely ever seen a whole community more deeply and generally moved. When I say this, I say more than these words would mean if applied to some other places I could name. For such a state of things existed here as I had not met with anywhere but once before in all of my ministry, and in that one instance the causes were not the same. The sermons of Bro. Bass were heart-searching, as they appeal to both the church member and the sinner. This was necessary to both in order to success, and was continued from first to last. The church is greatly built up and strengthened. I do not favor evangelism as I have sometimes seen it carried on, but as operated by Bro. Bass, I fully endorse it. As far as I am acquainted with Bro. McIntosh's plans of operation, I can also endorse him, though I have not had him with me in a meeting. I have now had Bro. Bass with me in three meetings, and I do not see how anyone could have succeeded better, if as well. Then, he helps the pastor in every way possible, specially in getting converts into the church—in gathering the fruits. His sermon here on the 'tithe law' will bear fruit after he passes into 'the world beyond.' I am usually cautious of my commendations of men, but think what I have said of Bro. Bass and his work here is not too much. We hope to build upon this good beginning in Pickens until we reach permanent success. The amounts apportioned to this charge for foreign missions and Bishops' funds have been paid, and a part of the amount for domestic missions. The full amount of the 'collections' is assured. Goodman has overpaid already the amount asked for there. The future seems to be brightening now in everything for the church."

THE VALUE OF STRUGGLE.

That ineffective struggle of yours has seemed at times very futile to you, but in the eyes of God that ineffective struggling had an infinite value. At least it broke the growth of habit, at least it troubled the surface of the waters, at least it was a glimpse of your best self, at least it showed there was something alive that was resisting. Never mind the failure, trial, attempt, effort, struggle—that shows you are alive. So long as you are fighting you are moving, you are living; so long as you are fighting you are going upward. I believe it, that no one can ever fail who goes on trying. Success is only an infinite renewal of fresh endeavors, an infinite number of fresh starts. Go on trying, and in these repeated failures there is at the last for ever the success. Then look away from the clouds, and cease to observe the wind. Let the word of God speak into your conscience and heart: you are not men to be the slaves of lust or the slaves of your bad temper. You are men to gain the victory over them: you are men to rise to the beauty of kindliness, and gentleness and self-restraint and temperance and purity. That is what you are men for: God sees it in your conscience. You, too, by looking away from those miserable chants, and refusing to feel the severity of the world, by knowing yourself loved, by will, his power, his grace. What God wills is possible. Only try, and try again; never mind the failures, but go on trying, and there is victory, sure and certain victory at the end of the road. Canon Charles Gore.

To spend a whole hour in reading, singing, prayer, collections, announcements, and preliminary remarks, before the Sunday morning (rather, noon) sermon begins, is too big a portico for the building. It is an excellent way to thin out one's audience.—Exchange.

The utility of life is not in its extent: it is in the employment of it. A man may live long and live little.—Montaigne.

Even the healthiest constitution sometimes gets into a rut. Many people are weak and miserable because their systems have slipped off the smooth roadway of health and are ditching along through the mire of disease, which might be avoided altogether if some strong and friendly hand would only give them a lift.

Thousands of weak and debilitated men and women have found Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery the powerful and timely aid to set them upon the level road of perfect recovery. It creates health by making the digestion perfect and the liver-action regular and thorough.

It repairs wasted tissue and builds up solid healthy flesh and muscular power. It is palatable, and digestible by the weakest stomach.

In chronic coughs and lung diseases, it is far superior to nauseating "emulsions" or mere stimulating malt "extracts." Its good effects are real and permanent.

For nearly thirty years Dr. R. V. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., during which time this remarkable "Discovery" has wrought thousands of cures which seemed well-nigh miraculous. Some of the most interesting of these obstinate cases are fully described in one chapter of the great thousand-page, illustrated book "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which will be sent free for cost of mailing only; 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps.

N. Gaddis, Esq., of No. 313 S. J. Street, Tacoma, Washington, writes: "I was taken ill in February, 1892, with headache and pain in my back. I called in a doctor and he came three times. He said I was bilious, but I kept getting worse. I took a cough so that I could only sleep when propped up in bed. My lungs hurt me and I got so poor that I was just skin and bone. I thought I was going to die. I tried a bottle of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it did me so much good that I tried another one and it made me strong and well. It saved my life."

Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way;
But to act that each to-morrow
Find us farther than to-day.

If you can't find a way, make one.

A drop of ink may make a million think.—Byron.

The world always listens to a man who has something to say.

The greatest opportunity is worth nothing to the man who is unprepared for it.

It is not the business of virtue to extirpate the affections, but to regulate them—Davidson.

Gratitude is the fairest blossom which springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none more fragrant.—Ballou.

The man who hopes to eventually drift into something will likely dwindle into nothing before he gets there.—Baltimore Advocate.

Let men laugh, if they will, when you sacrifice desire to duty. You have both time and eternity to rejoice in.—Theodore Parker.

Whenever I find a great deal of gratitude in a poor man, I take it for granted there would be as much generosity if he were a rich man.—Pope.

The man who is waiting for some lucky current to land him in the regions of prosperity and lofty achievement is foredoomed to disappointment.

You may have a rough voyage through life; but you have nothing to fear while you keep unbelief below, faith on deck, and Christ at the helm of your little bark.—Jackson.

Like an earthen pot, a bad man is easily broken and can not readily be restored to his former situation; but a virtuous man, like a vase of gold, is broken with difficulty and easily repaired.—Selected.

What is the world? To the scientist, it is a great machine to be examined and explained; to the pleasure seeker it is a banquet to be enjoyed; to the Christian, it is a multitude to be saved.—Presbyterian Banner.

Good literature is as necessary to the growth of the soul as good air to the growth of the body, and it is just as bad to put weak thoughts into a child's mind as to shut it up in an unventilated room.—Charles Dudley Warner.

What is the origin of the notion that true religion consists in a long face, a sanctimonious air, and a morose, captious disposition? Such a question is easily answered. Like all other hurtful errors, it had its origin in the bosom of "the Father of Lies."

If you would not dwarf your child's body by depriving it of sunlight, air, exercise, and proper food, much less should you dwarf its mental and moral nature by depriving it of the literature and the environments that are essential to the proper development of the higher nature within us that allies us to our Father in heaven.

THE WAR WITH SPAIN.

We had earnestly hoped that war would be averted, but whether further delay and diplomacy would have brought [illegible] settlement of the Cuban problem, is exceedingly improbable. Spain has so many times broken her pledges to the poor Cubans, and manifested such criminal slowness and unwillingness in the matter of granting them relief, that forbearance on our part had well-nigh ceased to be a virtue. The Spanish government has for some time known the sentiment of the American people as regards its course of oppression and cruelty in Cuba, and, in view of the long-expected intervention of the United States, its failure to institute vigorous measures of reform and relief, and to make every amend possible, has aroused the righteous indignation of the civilized world, and rendered its policy the more inexcusable. Upon no other nation than ours did the obligation rest to interfere in behalf of the Cubans. To have coolly left these people to their fate would have been inhuman in the extreme.

The President was eminently right, however, in refusing to take matters into his own hands. The burden of precipitating a nation into war is too grave to be borne by one man alone, especially when there exists some doubt as to the rightfulness and expediency of such procedure. War, even when undertaken in a good cause, is a fearful thing, and is always attended by a train of evils that linger long after its cessation. Hence, among civilized nations it should be a last resort in the settlement of disputes and in the securing of just rights.

There are some in our country who hold that the present conflict with Spain is unjustifiable on any ground, arguing that the Cubans brought their troubles upon themselves, and that they are not worthy of the great sacrifice of blood and money which our country will have to make ere they are delivered from Spanish oppression. Whatever be their worthiness or unworthiness, the Cubans are human beings, and, as such, have a strong claim upon our sympathy and justice, and it having become evident that adequate relief could come to them in no other way than through armed intervention by this country, the resort to arms became justifiable and commendable. Some wrongs can never be righted save at the point of the bayonet or by the strong arm of the law, individual protests and the courteous demands of governmental authorities being of no avail. What cared the cruel Turk a year or two ago, during the progress of the horrible massacres in Armenia, for the polite requests and repeated threats of the European powers, so long as they were unenforced by bullets and cannon? A lasting stain rests upon one and all of the great nations of Europe for their failure to put a stop by means of force to the indescribable atrocities perpetrated by the Turks upon the innocent and defenseless Armenians. Nor do we believe God will hold these nations guiltless for their inexcusable inaction. But could America consistently charge Europe with sinful folly, if, in the case of the wretched sufferers at our own doors, we had pursued the same "let-alone" policy? What cares a murderer or an outlaw for threats and public opinion so long as he is suffered to go unpunished for his misdeeds?

Some, again, who are outspoken in opposition to the war now being waged, say that before attempting to redress the wrongs of those in the neighboring isle, we ought to correct the great evils that exist at home, such as intemperance, the oppression of the laboring classes, etc. While an ideal state of affairs by no means exists in our land, certain evils having assumed giant size almost, the condition of the most unfortunate in this country is blissful when compared with that of the starving and tortured Cubans, who have up to this time been living in the darkness of despair and under the very shadow of death. The greatest wrongs first demand attention, but to some the evils nearest them seem the greatest by reason of their proximity. If the woes of the Cubans do not exceed the evils existent in this country as greatly as an ocean exceeds a lake, then we are gravely at fault. If nations were always to wait before striking a blow in behalf of the oppressed, until every evil within their own borders was corrected, how oft would the most fearful wrongs and grievous tyranny go unpunished! If we are exempted to evangelize other nations, we were to wait until every community and every individual in our Republic were evangelized, what countless ages would elapse before the nations across the seas would hear the blessed gospel!

As we understand it, the war in progress is not a war for conquest, for glory, or for revenge, but a war for justice and humanity. Many, no doubt, who engage in its contests will do so from unworthy motives; but it is true, nevertheless, that the war is based upon humanitarian grounds, and it is so regarded by the whole civilized world. Seldom in the history of mankind has war been waged for such reasons.

We heartily agree with the editor of the Baptist Standard in the following forceful utterance upon the question before us: "When a drunken brute beats his wife and abuses his children, the neighbor may wait for a time for the police to interfere. But if the brutal wretch continues his fiendish course, the neighbor, if he would have the neighborhood quiet, and his own home peaceful, must needs intervene with force, even if he be set upon by the man and his wife and the other neighbors. If he has the spirit of manhood and fair play, he must put a stop to the outrage, at the risk of misunderstanding and a broken head. To do less would be cowardly and unchristian, and especially so if, in attempting to preserve peace, members of his own family are exposed to death. There comes a time when to mind one's own business it becomes necessary to mind and mend the business of another. The United States sets forth for Cuba with a loaf of bread on the end of its bayonet, with its warships laden with flour and shot. Its banners have been preceded by the Red Cross flag, and will be followed by school books and Bibles. We believe that when the unprejudiced historian of the nineteenth century writes of the Spanish American war, he will decide that it was justifiable, necessary, and begun in the light of the principles set forth in our Lord's parable of the Good Samaritan. Christian citizens will uphold the President and stand by the flag."

In addition to the sacrifice of many precious lives, the enormous increase of taxation, which falls with especial heaviness upon the poor, and the unsettling of business and social conditions—results that always follow war—one of the most regrettable things about even a justifiable war is that it stirs the worst passions of the human heart along with good impulses, and produces an excitement and unrest almost wholly inimical to the practice and spirit of religion. During the next few weeks, or as long as the war lasts, multitudes of professing Christians, we fear, will neglect their duty to God and to the church, on account of interest in war news. Many a Bible will go unread, many a closet will be unsought, and many a preacher will go unpaid, by reason of the general excitement over war matters.

Thus the devil always manages, by means of such things, to make men forget God. Would to God that the jaundiced journals that publish so much sensationalism and incendiarism could be forever muzzled!

Sad to tell, thousands who are eager to face Spanish bullets, and even death, in behalf of the Cubans, will not strike a blow at home in the cause of King Immanuel. Let Christians pray that the conflict may be short and decisive, and that the evil therefrom may not overbalance the good.

Many persons who long for opportunities for usefulness, fail to recognize them when they come. Like the artist who was always just about to begin to paint the great picture which was to make him famous, but who heard and obeyed the voice of Death ere the work was begun, they squander precious time in dreaming about what they would do if they occupied a more prominent position in society, or were the possessors of wealth, or were not hemmed in by the restrictions of their humble lot. Thus they utterly fail to redeem the present moment, and finally waste the whole of life.—Central Advocate.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

On Tuesday morning, the third, I left the Crescent City, via the I. C. R. R., for Baltimore. Having been overworked for some time past, the journey was quite restful to me. I had pleasant company throughout the entire trip. I met no one bound for Baltimore, however, until I reached Durant, where Bros. Augustus and W. W. Mitchell, of the North Mississippi Conference, came aboard. Quite a number of Baptist brethren and sisters were on the train en route to the Southern Baptist Convention at Norfolk. The train was under the special care of the genial, accommodating traveling passenger agent of the I. C. R. R. to Louisville and beyond. At Memphis several Arkansas delegates appeared on the scene ticketed to Baltimore. Kentucky and Missouri re-enforcements were received at Louisville. Our train tarried but a few moments at Louisville, and then sped away through Frankfort, whose capitol looks almost as fine as that at Jackson, Miss.; through Lexington, located in the centre of the famous blue grass region—a most beautiful country; through Winchester, the seat of Kentucky Wesleyan College, whose goodly buildings loom up handsomely as you come in from the West—a place where we would dearly have loved to stop off a few hours visiting friends.

At Ashland our train was delayed four hours. This put us in Washington at about noon instead of early in the morning. I had no time to look around at the Capitol, but as I saw all the sights of the city years ago, this occasioned little regret. I reached Baltimore too late for the session of that day. Usually, however, there is little done the first day except to get organized, and adopt rules of order. This business was easily and satisfactorily disposed of. Bishop Keener read with evident emotion a paper, in which he asked to be placed on the retired list on account of the infirmities incident to his advanced age. Bishop Galloway responded feelingly in behalf of the college of Bishops. The Bishops, in their quadrennial address, recommend the election of two new Bishops. Whether that number will be elected, or more, no mortal can tell just now. It is my judgment, however, that this number will be agreed upon.

At night an address of welcome was delivered by the governor of the State, Hon. Loyd Lowndes. A fitting response was made by Bishop Hendrix. W. C. B.

A NEW BOOK.

THE ITINERANT'S GUIDE. A book intended for the guidance of young preachers of the M. E. Church, South, in the discharge of all pastoral duties. By John M. Allen, A. B., D. D., professor in Southwestern University, Texas. 16 mo. 148 pages. Price, 80 cents. Nashville, Tenn.: Southern Methodist Publishing House.

As the title indicates, this book treats of the varied duties of a minister of the gospel, particularly of a Methodist itinerant, and contains much excellent instruction and wholesome advice concerning pastoral visiting, the preparation and delivery of sermons, the holding of revival meetings, class meetings, prayer meetings, the management of Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, and other societies, church finances, and the administration of discipline. The latter part of the volume, comprising 60 odd pages, is a new edition of the "Book of Forms" issued by the author several years ago, which met with such a favorable reception. The bulk of the contents has been delivered in lecture form by the author to the class in theology at the Southwestern University. Though not an elaborate treatise on pastoral duties, homiletics, etc., the volume in hand throws much light on the matters discussed, and we think it ought, by all means, to be in the hands of every young Methodist preacher. As regards its consideration of Methodist forms and usages, it covers a field peculiarly its own. It is a book that most of our preachers will find useful and interesting.

It is a sad fact that the church of to-day is, in many cases, saying to Christ concerning the world's famishing multitudes in the language of the disciple, "Send them away," instead of obeying the Master, "Give ye them to eat." Shall we turn hungry souls away to die when we have an inexhaustible store-house from which we may draw? God forbid.—Rev. C. O. Harvey.

THE MESSAGE OF THE INDIVIDUAL.

Every individual has some message to humanity. His unique personality constitutes him a unique interpreter of life.

In a certain—and very real—sense we are all prophets. The unfolding of some new view of truth is possible to everyone of us. Just as some of the most interesting discoveries in astronomy have been made by amateur observers with small telescopes, so some of the grandest revelations of God's truth have come through the lives and thoughts of humble individuals, who, perhaps, have been all unconscious of their prophetic mission.

It is a grand thing to feel that each one of us stands at some point along the margin of the vail where no other human being can stand. The vail—this great vail of God's purpose, of the mystery of life—which is ever moving and stirring, lifts for an instant, here and there—it may be at the very point where God has placed you. You may get that one fleet, flashing glimpse into the light beyond. You may see in an instant that which glorifies your whole life and makes you a prophet to humanity.

How many humble lives have left a message which the race will not suffer to die. There have been unknown poets who have written one hymn—an immortal inspiration. There have been thinkers who have lived in the atmosphere of high thought all their lives long to utter one luminous truth that shines through the ages. There have been latent heroes and heroines who have waited for the opportunity of doing one grand act, which has made the whole human race better and nobler by its unconsciously uplifting influence. No life so humble it may not rise to heroism! No mind so simple it may not reflect an undiscovered beam of God's truth! Divine messages are constantly seeking entrance to the understanding and the hearts of men. Who shall be God's messengers—only the great ones of the earth? Nay! Whosoever listens Godward and loves manward.—Zion's Herald.

THE POWER OF BELIEF.

And now beside me all the time there is another man, and the difference between him and me is this—that he believes in immortality. Somehow he has got hold of the truth of resurrection. To him death is a jar, a break, a deep mysterious change; but not the end of life. I know that men may claim to believe that, and yet live on like dogs. Men may claim to believe that, and yet be slaves and cowards. But this man really believes it; and see what it does for him! See how free it makes him! how it breaks his tyrannies! He can undertake works of self-culture, or the development of truth, far, far too vast for the earthly life of any Methuselah to finish; and yet smile calmly and work on when men tell him that he will die before his work is done. Die! Shall not the sculptor sleep a hundred times before the statue he begins to-day is finished; and wake a hundred times more, ready for his work, bringing with a hundred new mornings to his work the strength and visions that have come to him in his slumber. He can desire to please, and yet be perfectly patient as he waits for a "Well done!" that will fall on his ears out of divine lips, when this world and its shows are over. He can desire to show himself, and yet live in obscurity—content, sure that some day—what does it matter when to him who has an eternity to live in?—God will call him, and bid men see in him the work of love and grace.—Phillips Brooks.

It is remarkable with what tenacity some good people hold on to a misstatement concerning a sister church. The "Biblical Recorder," the organ of North Carolina Baptists, says: "The Methodists have 6,000,000 communicants, counting infants and probationers. They have not 4 000 000 believers in their membership." We wonder if there is anybody outside of a religious newspaper office who believes that Methodists count baptized babies in their membership.—Baltimore Advocate.

Like mountain climbers, we are bound one to another by the unseen cords of influence. Like mountain climbers, we are either dragging others down or we are helping to hold them up. Which is it?—Standard.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

W. W. Sutcliffe is visiting his brother in this city and is seen occasionally about the Conference room.

Rev. R. L. Wynn and wife are in attendance upon the Conference. They are also visiting Mrs. Wynn's sister.

Rev. J. M. Mason, well and favorably known by so many Mississippians and Louisianians, is the chairman of the Committee on Revisals.

J. R. Pepper, that eminent layman of Memphis, presides over the deliberations of the Sunday-school Committee. A wiser selection could not have been made.

Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., of the Mississippi Conference, was honored with the chairmanship of the Committee on Boundaries. The Doctor will attend to that duty most faithfully, and will honor the place.

Miss Myrtie McCutcheon, Miss Sallie Fullilove, and Miss Marguerite Crane, of Shreveport, are in attendance upon the Conference. Dr. and Mrs. LaPrade and S. B. McCutcheon are the guardians of this bevy of beauties.

Rev. J. S. Oakley, of the North Mississippi Conference, keeps the Minutes of the Committee on Itinerancy; and Dr. W. C. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, performs a like service for the Committee on Temperance.

There is a notion in the minds of a few people in this world that intellectual development and spiritual growth are inimical to each other. But a sight of the General Conference now sitting in the Fourth Regiment Armory, in this city, is enough to put to flight with a Manila rout such a notion. In the speeches there is the tone of a profound depth of learning, and in the song and prayers there is the music of the highest spiritual appreciation.

There are fourteen Standing Committees, composed of one member from each Conference. These committees are designated as follows: Episcopacy, Itinerancy, Publishing Interests, Revisals, Church Extension, Missions, Education, Sunday-schools, Boundaries, Finance, Appeals, Colportage, Temperance, and Epworth League. All memorials, appeals and resolutions which are presented to the Conference, unless by suspension of the rules immediate action is taken, are referred to the above mentioned appropriate committees. It is the duty of the committees using the documents placed in their hands to formulate and report such bills as seem proper. All other communications are returned to the Conference labled "non-concurrence."

Rev. R. E. Steele, chaplain of the New Orleans Seamen's Bethel, is maintaining that historic institution on the faith plan so successfully used by Geo. Muller at Bristol, England. The usefulness of the Bethel has largely increased since the adoption of this principle on Jan. 1 of this year. Mr. Steele has volunteered for service in the hospital work of the navy, and has good reason (at this writing) to believe he will be assigned to the "Solace." He will not, however, sever his connection with the Bethel, but has arranged for the continuance of its work while he may be absent, and will look to God in trust for its financial support. HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The Holly Springs District Conference met in its twenty eighth session in the M. E Church, South, in Holly Springs, Miss., on April 21, 1898 The first day was devoted to the discussion of different phases of the Sunday-school work. Prof. Keston, of Abbeville, led with a paper on the need of better teachers, and how to get them. Dr. Cameron, our presiding elder, had requested several others to prepare papers on other subjects, but the papers not being present, gave discussion a wide range.

The regular business of the Conference was taken up on Friday, and closed on Saturday evening. Rev. M. L. Barton, manager of the Orphans' Home at Water Valley, was a welcome visitor to the Conference, and spoke telling words for his institution. He also helped in some of the discussion. Our faithful colporter, Rev. G. W. Bachman, was with us, making himself useful after his way. Rev. B. P. Jaco came to the Conference, but was taken sick on the way, and did not get to attend a single session or service. He was well cared for at the district parsonage. He was too sick to be taken to his home at Mount Pleasant. His absence meant work for this scribe, as he is usually secretary. The preaching was well done by Revs. F. A. Whitson, M. D Fly, J. A. Poe, C. P. Mues, J. W. Smith, and W. D. Boroughs.

The Presbyterian pulpit was filled on Sunday by Rev. R. M. Davis at eleven o'clock, and by Rev. J. W. Ramsey at night.

W. A. Belk, G. E. Kelsay, J. W. Sharp and W. A Young were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

The Conference goes to Pontotoc next year. R. I. ALLEN, Sec.

Olive Branch, Miss., May 6, 1898.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The management of the Gulf and Ship Island railroad offer half rates to ministers and delegates attending the District Conference at Hattiesburg on this plan: Pay full fare going, taking a receipt therefor from the agent. This receipt, counter signed by the secretary of the Conference, and presented to the company's agent at Hattiesburg, will secure free transportation on return.

C F. EMERY, Secretary.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Let the brethren bear in mind this Conference will be held in Summit, May 26-29 It is desired that all will be present on the night of the twenty-fifth to hear Bro. W. B. Lewis' sermon on a very important subject. Pastors and recording stewards will please see that their records are present; and let all come to stay over Sunday, and make it a "feast of fat things" to our souls.

J. M. WEEMS, P. E.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE LOUISIANA MINISTERIAL BROTHERHOOD.

DEAR BRETHREN: We have to record the death of another member of our Brotherhood. Bro. Foust died on April 26. All our members should call the attention of their charges to this worthy object, and get as many laymen to give one dollar, as honorary members, to this fund as possible, which will be sent to Sister Foust, who is left with several small children, none of whom are old enough to assist toward earning their support. All old friends of Bro. Foust can show their love for him by sending to me a small contribution toward the help of his widow and orphaned children.

Dear brethren, do all you can for our sister, and remit me at the same time Assessment No. 4 (the sum of five dollars), due as a member of the Brotherhood. I have already forwarded a check to Sister Foust, but hope to be able to send another goodly amount through the generosity of our laymen.

My new address is 1114 Carrollton avenue. S. S. KEENER,
Sec. and Treas. La. Min. Brotherhood.

Epworth League.

BY H. N. HARRISON.

TOPIC FOR MAY 15—"ALL FOR CHRIST." MATT. vi, 33; I. COR. x. 31.

1. Our theme is. "All for Christ." This is also the Epworth League motto. It means, substantially, that our wills belong to Christ. What we own he owns What he wills we will. What he hates we hate. What he loves we love. What he does we do. It means that the root of religion is in the will; that there is strict parallelism between the divine and the human. (Amos iii, 3)

2. Our theme teaches us that the Christian life is one of self-sacrifice, and that love prompts us to surrender all for him. In obedience to the Father's wish, Jesus left the excellent glory and trod the weary paths of life for us. This was voluntary self-sacrifice. Love prompted it. By his poverty we are become rich; by his death we are made alive; by his resurrection we, too, shall rise, and by his ascension we, too, shall ascend. If we would be like him, we must follow his example, and incorporate the spirit of his life in our daily walk and conversation. Self sacrifice is the core of Christianity. There can be no real religion without it. Not pampering to self, but yielding up of self, is the Christian's ideal as seen in Jesus. (John x, 17, 18)

3 As Christians, we ought to dedicate ourselves to God in an everlasting covenant which can not be broken. When this is done, we are Christ's, and he is ours. We are one in thought, in heart, in aims. Some years ago a Quaker boy, noted for his pure and saintly life, died not far from Philadelphia. In the pocket of his coat his mother found a document, which we reproduce here as explaining the secret of his happy life:

A DEDICATION.

I take God the Father to be my God.

I take God the Son to be my Savior.

I take God the Holy Ghost to be my Sanctifier. (I. Pet. i, 2)

I take the Word of God to be my rule. (II. Tim. iii, 16 17)

I take the people of God to be my people. (Ruth i, 16 17.)

I likewise dedicate my whole self to the Lord. (Rom. xiv, 7, 8)

And I do this deliberately. (Josh. xxiv, 15)

Sincerely. (II. Cor. i, 12)

Freely. (Ps. liv, 6)

And forever. (Rom. viii, 35-39)

4. In all our ways we must keep our Savior in mind. We must enter no business that he would not enter. If we are in doubt about any practice, habit, or course of action, let us ask ourselves the question, What would Jesus do? What course would he take? There are some practices which many Christian people, under such a test, would have to abandon—such as snuff taking and tobacco using. We met a Methodist in this city, some time ago, who told us that he could use tobacco to the glory of God. Think of it! He smoked, chewed, and spat, with this end in view! Is this a high plane? Is this a high plane like that on which Paul walked when he said, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ"? (I. Cor. xi, 1.)

NOTE.

The State Conference of the Mississippi Epworth League, recently held in Meridian, decided to appoint an editor for this column to represent both the Mississippi and Louisiana Leagues. The present editor represents only the Union League of New Orleans. This article, therefore, will close our connection with this department. We wish to thank Dr. Black most cordially for space and kindness, and the members of the Union League for their kind treatment of us

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to May, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

LITTLE AND MUCH.

It matters little where I was born,
Or if my parents were rich or poor;
Whether they shrank at the cold world's scorn
Or walked in the pride of wealth secure;
But whether I lived an honest man,
And held my integrity firm in my clutch,
I tell you, brother, plain as I can,
It matters much!

It matters little how long I stay
In a world of sorrow, sin and care;
Whether in youth I am called away,
Or live till my bones and pate are bare;
But whether I do the best I can
To soften the weight of adversity's touch
On the faded cheek of my fellow-man,
It matters much!

It matters little where be my grave,
Or on the land or on the sea,
By purling brook or 'neath stormy wave,
It matters little or naught to me:
But whether the angel death comes down
And marks my brow with his lovlog touch
As one that shall wear the victor's crown,
It matters much!

QUESTIONS FOR YOUNG MEN.

The average young man scoffs a little at a chap who is noticeable for his good manners. Many a healthy boy thinks a certain roughness in speech or manner is a sign of vigor and manliness in contrast to the weak and womanly ways of one who is always bowing and scraping to the people whom he meets. There could not be a greater mistake; because, while an overdisplay of politeness is a sign of hypocrisy, natural courtesy will never permit boy or man to behave in any way except in the thoughtful, quiet, refined way which belongs to good manners. A rough, honest chap is better than a slippery, well-mannered, dishonest one, to be sure. That perhaps is the reason for so much of this deliberately rough way some of us adopt. But this does not prove that courteous behavior is wrong or to be avoided. It means that courteous behavior is sometimes used as a cloak for other motives.

There is no reason, therefore, why the average young man in school or college or business, in his daily occupation, or when he comes in contact with women or men, girls or boys, should not make it a point to be reserved, self-contained, tolerant, and observant of the little rules which everyone knows by heart, and which go to make his company and companionship valuable to others. It is the same in his contact with men as with women. A systematic method of observing ordinary rules in such cases invariably has its effect. For example, you will see many a boy in some discussion among his friends talking all the time, demanding the attention of others, insisting on his views, losing his temper over a game of marbles and declining to play longer, or making himself conspicuous in a hundred other ways. He may be a very good chap, full of push and vigor, and so sure of his own views that in his heart he can not conceive of any other person really having a different view of the subject. That is an estimable character for a healthy boy to have. Confidence in one's own ideas often carries one over many a bad place. But the fact that the boy has such a character and his disagreeable way of forcing it upon you are two entirely different things; and the difference of being confident and disagreeable and confident and agreeable is the difference between good and bad manners.—Harper's Round Table.

PLEASANT PEOPLE.

It is a pleasure to meet people who are pleasant, affable and kind; who do not seek to extinguish you with disdain or humiliate you with indifference. People can be over-pleasant, as well as over-bearing, but the former is infinitely preferable. Habit has something to do with a man's behavior, although disposition is the stronger element. Certainly when men have contracted habits of pride, and insolence, they are almost brutal. Money enters into the life of some men, and makes them haughty and over-bearing who, lacking it, would have been kind and considerate. Jesus in-veighed most strongly against pride and haughtiness, and said the publican was rather justified than the proud pharisee, for all the lengthy prayers of the latter. There is an old saying that "more flies are caught with molasses than vinegar," and it often comes true. In view of the shortness of life, and its many unavoidable cares, and troubles, we think it a wise thing to cultivate a pleasant manner toward all. "Oh, why should the spirit of a mortal be proud?" must be an inscrutable puzzle from any true and just point of view. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall," is as true today as in the long ago when it was written. Pope calls pride "the never-failing vice of fools," and wisely, too. There is in pride and hauteur a disennobling of men beyond compution. If pride is not a vice, it can lay no little claim to virtue. Why then be proud and haughty? Rich or poor, high or low, should shun its narrowing spirit, and learn to practice a pleasant manner, a courteous spirit of kindness toward all whom we may meet in this transitory world.—Alexander Macauley.

DO NOT MEDDLE WITH GOD'S PLANS

Many men wreck their lives by determinedly carrying out their own plans without reference to the plans of God. In an army every part, every brigade and regiment, must wait the commander's orders. If any battalion move independently, though ever so heroically, it not only confuses the whole plan of battle, but brings disaster to itself in the end. So each individual must always wait for God's commands to move. Keep your eyes on the pillar of cloud and fire that leads. Rest when the pillar rests, move when it moves. Never lag behind, but be sure you never run ahead. You can make the clock strike before the hour by putting your hand to it, but it will strike wrong. You can hurry the enfolding of God's providence, but you will only mar the divine plan unless you wait for him.

You can tear the rosebud open before the time it would naturally open, but you destroy the beauty of the rose. So we spoil many a gift or blessing which God is preparing for us by our own eager haste. He would weave all our lives into patterns of loveliness. He has a perfect plan for each. It is only when we refuse to work according to his plan that we mar the web. Stop meddling with the threads of your life as they come from the Lord's hands; every time you interfere you make a flaw. Keep your hands off, and let God weave as he pleases.—Parish Visitor.

UNSYMPATHETIC OPPOSITION.

If you wish to strengthen a man or a child in a wrong course, an effective way is to manifest an unsympathetic opposition. There is something in human nature which leads most of us in such circumstances to desire to have our own way. We say "most of us," because we ought never to forget that there are certain ideally constituted persons who, when they are told what they ought to do, straightway go and do it. But parents commonly find that in dealing with average children, a hard exercise of authority is not usually the most effective to lead them to choose the best course. And those who seek to influence and lead men, discover that to lay down the law too vigorously is not always the wisest way of getting men to do what they desire.

It is not the mere fact of opposition that fixes men in their determination not to be guided by others. It is unsympathetic opposition. If you can once convince a man or a child that you have his interests at heart, and that your opposition is not prompted by disregard of his opinions or by pride of authority, you have gone far toward winning him to your view.

The Apostle Paul enjoins men to "speak the truth in love." It is not enough that a parent or leader possess the truth, and declare it; to be effective the truth should be spoken "in love." Some people think so much of the truth that they think nothing at all of the feelings, the opinions and prejudices of those to whom they declare it. They wonder that they do not do more good. There is nothing mysterious about it. Their attitude toward others is unsympathetic, and that is enough to account for the fact that those whom they seek to influence are under a strong temptation not to do the thing which has been urged upon them.—The Watchman.

TO-DAY.

No loving word was ever spoken, no good deed ever done "to-morrow." We can not act in the unborn future, nor in the dead past—only in the living present. That is why "every day is a doomsday," for to-day holds life and death, character and destiny, in its hands. Opportunity says with Jesus: "Me ye have not always." We say: "I will take my chances. There is plenty of time." Ah, how often do we say "some other time," to find that there is no other time! Some things we can do "not always." How shall we find out what things can be done at any time, and what things now or never? Only by living in the faith that to-day is the only day we have, and challenging every opportunity for its meaning. Esau filled his life with regret for trifling one day; Esther's was full of glory for one day's courage. Peter slept one day, and lost a matchless opportunity. Mary's name is fragrant forever for the loving deed of a day. Do your best now.

CHANGE OF WORK FOR HEALTH.

Not long since I listened to a conversation between two tired women teachers. They were rehearsing their woes to each other, regretting the monotony of their lives, the lack of opportunity for social enjoyment, the devitalizing influence of the school-room, and kindred subjects. It was evident from all said that while each felt the imperative necessity of some influence outside the daily routine, neither had sought it.

It is a mistaken idea to believe that work of a congenial character is devitalizing; but any pursuit which holds the mind continuously to one line of thought is likely to result sooner or later in a breakdown. This the most intelligent workers guard against by diverting interests in the hours when the day's regular duties are over. A popular principal of a high school, whose never-flagging interest in his work is a source of wonderment to those who have watched his labors, devotes a certain number of hours every day to his garden, and when labor there is no longer possible, he works with all the zeal of a mechanic in a carpenter's shop he has fitted up for his special use. During these hours the cares of the school are completely forgotten, and a new line of thought is entered upon, mind and body are quickened, the duties of life do not grow monotonous.

A woman teacher said not long ago: "I found that living in one groove was making me narrow and hard and morbid; I was getting self-centred, growing to be pessimistic. I determined to reform, to find some vocation. My friends looked aghast at my announcement. I was 'already overworked,' they urged, I needed every hour out of school for rest, it would be suicidal to attempt anything more. But I felt that my salvation depended on the effort. I went to the president of a Children's Aid Society and asked him if he could give me anything to do for a few hours in every week. He answered me in words that were benedictions, and now, as a result of my work among my poor little outlaws, I am happier and healthier than I have ever been before. They kept me from thinking of myself, and widened all my sympathies."

Another woman who is busy by day with the responsibilities of an important position in a large store, devotes three evenings of each week to a French class of which she is a member. Another gathers about her a number of girls younger than herself, and the evening is spent in the reading of some healthful, inspiring book.

It is found that the busy people who try to rest when vacations come by surrendering themselves to lives of listless inactivity, are rarely revivified and stimulated by such inaction. Recreation is re-creation. It should be sought in new interests, not in self-contemplation. Monotony, a perpetual revolution in the same circle, is more wearing than any of us know.—M. D.

A BIT OF HEALTHFUL ADVICE.

Finish every day and be done with it. For manners and for wise living it is a vice to remember. You have done what you could; some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. To-morrow is a new day; you should begin it well and serenely, and with too high a spirit to be encumbered with your old nonsense. This day for all that is good and fair. It is too dear, with its hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on the rotten yesterdays.—Emerson.

DR. JOSEPH PATRICK HENRY.

"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well."

At his home in Greenwood, Miss., attended by Mrs. Capple Craig and family, and a host of loving friends, on April 11, 1898 in the quiet, closing hour of the day, Dr. Henry, as gently and as sweetly as a babe falling asleep in its mother's arms, fell asleep in death, aged seventy-three years four months and twenty-three days—a greater length of life than is usually allotted as here. He was born in Colerain, N. C., Nov. 19 1824 His grandfather, the Rev. Robert Henry, was a native of Colerain, Ireland, where he was educated and grew to manhood. At an early day he emigrated to the United States, and settled in Virginia; thence he removed to North Carolina and settled in Bertie county, where he reared a family. Robt. Henry, Jr., the father of Dr. J. P. Henry, grew to manhood in Bertie county and there married Miss Sarah Thomas, a native of North Carolina, and a daughter of a well-known family in that community. He was a large planter, and occupied a position of prominence in his county. He died in 1851, his widow surviving him until 1852. There was a family of eleven children—nine sons and two daughters—all of whom have gone to that bourne from whence no traveler ere returns. Dr. Henry passed the first eighteen years of his life in his native county, and was then sent by his guardian to a Baptist college at Wake Forest, N. C., where he acquired a thorough literary education. He then went to Raleigh, N. C., where he read medicine with Dr. Charles E. Johnson, a physician of note in that city. In October, 1847, he went to New York City to complete his medical course of studies under the direction of Dr. Whittaker, who was afterward professor and lecturer in one of the colleges. They remained together in study and practice until 1850, when Dr. Henry came to Mississippi, and permanently located in Greenwood. In his profession he has won not only a reputation as a skilled practitioner, but has proven himself one of the most humane and generous of his distinguished profession. During the yellow-fever epidemics of 1853 and 1855 he stood by the sufferers, nursed the sick, and buried the dead. And all during the late Civil War he remained staunch, firm, and true, giving his services, professionally and otherwise, to the people of Greenwood and the surrounding country. Let it not be supposed that this heroism has been forgotten, as many yet living hold the doctor in grateful remembrance for the aid he rendered in their hour of trial and affliction. In addition to the professional interests, the doctor was possessed of large landed interests, consisting of about 4,300 acres, 1,000 acres of which is in a high state of cultivation. This land is in one body, and lies within the borders of Leflore county. Although he came empty-handed to this place, by his extensive practice and excellent business management he had accumulated and kept intact this grand estate.

December 24, 1867, Dr. Henry was united in marriage to Mrs. L. H. Jackson, a daughter of Joseph Dillon. Mrs. Henry was born in Amite county, Miss., was reared in Grenada, Miss., and passed over the river only a short while before the doctor.

He was the truest type of a true Southerner; politically, an old-line Whig; since the war a conservative Democrat. In 1886 his constituency honored him by electing him representative from Leflore county and serving a term in the State Legislature, he was true to every interest committed to him. As a planter, he has succeeded, as he advocated the production of the necessaries on the farm. He was thoughtful, careful, honest, possessing a warm, affectionate heart, accompanied by an open, generous hand to those in need, and the recording angel has written many things down to Dr. J. P. Henry's credit that the world knows nothing of. No children of his own. He has left children who became his by adoption, who will, in the great and final day, rise up and call him blessed. Peace to his ashes.

He was baptized and received into the Methodist Church by Dr. J. W. Price in March.

A FRIEND.

FORD—Mrs. MATTIE C. FORD, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ligon, was born in Pike county, near China Grove, Miss., May 13, 1849. She joined the Baptist Church when thirteen years old. She was married to D. C. Ford, Jan. 25, 1870, and soon after her marriage united with the Methodist Church. She died at her home in Summit, Miss., March 21, 1898. Her pastor, Rev. V. V. Boone, visited her frequently during her illness of six weeks. While death came very unexpectedly to all, and perhaps to her, she gave every evidence of divine acceptance, and expressed a strong and abiding faith in her Savior, and her willingness to go should it be the Lord's will. A few hours before she died she exclaimed, "I will soon be at rest." Her last words were: "I am so happy! I see heaven! Open the gate, and I'll sit down on a bench," showing a meek and lowly spirit even to the last moment.

Sister Ford possessed a joyous, happy disposition; was refined, gentle and kind to every one; affectionate, industrious, and capable. Her life was beautiful, her death radiant and triumphant. I have known Sister Ford from her infancy, and deeply feel for her husband and children. I do not believe a more conscientious Christian mother ever lived, or ever tried harder to set a good example to her children. With her devoted husband they worked and planned to educate and fit their children for practical life and bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. How desolate the home without a mother's care! How empty the children's heart of all joy "when her loving smile no longer greets the communion of their feet!" She was the preacher's friend, and her hospitable door swung wide open to them. She had many, many friends in all the different churches, and especially among the young people. She forgave her enemies. She suffered with Christ that she might reign with him. Her resignation to her Father's will was lovely to behold, and the great change came as softly and peacefully as the closing in of a Summer day. She has left a good name, and gone to her eternal rest to watch for the coming of those who linger behind. She sleeps in the grave, but her influence still lives, and will be felt for years to come. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. V. V. Boone, assisted by Rev. Mr. Anding, of the Baptist Church. Six sons and two daughters, with her bereft husband, survive her. One daughter died in 1891.

This tribute of love is from her life-long friend and former pastor, H. P. Lewis.

Carthage, Miss.

JONES—On March 4 1898, at Sicily Island, La., FRANK ASA JONES entered into his eternal rest. He was the son of Rev. John G. Jones and Jane Oliphant Ross, and was born in the presiding elder's parsonage at Sharon, Miss., Nov. 24 1837 His parents soon after moved to Jefferson county, Miss., where, in the family home, Belle Grove, he grew to young manhood He graduated in the class of 1858 at Centenary College, then the pride of Mississippi Methodism. Early in 1861 he married Miss Olivia Wailes on Tensas river. Responding to his country's call, he left his young wife and joined the Army of Tennessee. Like all the Southern boys of the sixties, he spent his best years around the camp-fires and on the battle-fields of the Confederacy. After the war he returned to Catahoula parish, where he spent the remainder of his life.

These are the bare facts of his life, but those who knew him can read between the lines the warmth of his kindly nature, the wealth of generous and loyal that made his home life so beautiful, and drew about him such ardent and enduring friendships The boys he loved at college, the comrades who fought with him upon the tented field, were very dear to him always. No higher tribute to his gentleness could be given than the unaffected grief of the man who had been his slave and body-servant in days of battle, and his trusted friend ever since.

Quiet and undemonstrative in his religious life, he had been a consistent member of the Methodist Church since his boyhood. The last months of his life he showed an especial longing for the house of God, and an intense enjoyment of the preached Word.

While still in health he had expressed his readiness to meet the Master when he came. The end came too rapidly for parting words. The disease, pneumonia, toyed with the hopes of the family for a few days; then, when he seemed almost well, an unlooked change came, a few hours of delirium, and all was over. He sleeps in peace, and the fragrance of his pure life remains a holy memory to the lonely wife and son and daughters who mourn him. May the God of all comfort abide with them in their sorrow!

M. J. H.

SINNAN—Bro. J. T. SINNAN, son of F. H. and Rebecca Sinnan, was born in Catahoula parish, La., March 27, 1863, and departed this life March 26, 1898.

Brother Joe joined the Methodist Church when a youth, and was a worthy member till death. His father said to me at the grave: "I raised this boy around the family altar, and when he left me and went to his own home he erected a family altar which was kept up till his death." The church and the community feel a sad loss.

He leaves a wife and five little children, and an aged father and mother, and a brother, who are greatly bereaved by his death. But we have the blessed assurance that our dead who die in the Lord "do rest from their labors." Let father, mother, wife, children and brother be faithful and true to God, and in a few more years and you, too, will cross over to meet the dear ones "over there."

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only One way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Machine Offer.

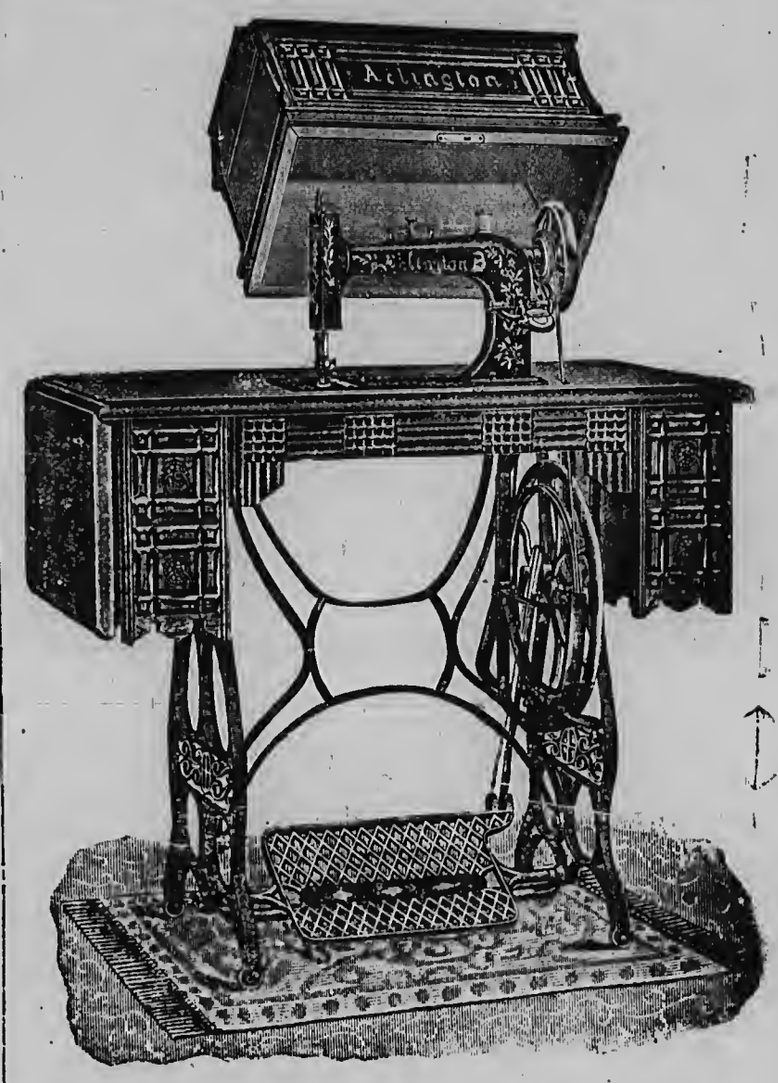
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Commodore Dewey, of the American fleet before Manila, since his tremendous defeat of the Spanish fleet and forts, has been made an Admiral.

The apparent failure of the Committee on City Affairs of the Constitutional Convention to come to any sort of agreement to secure the construction of permanent public improvements in this city promises to end in leaving the city in its mud and filth.

Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, has informed the citizens that they can string flags across the streets whenever they wish during the continuance of the war without getting a permit from the City Council. It is hinted that heretofore aldermen have received from $1 to $5 for every permit of this kind granted.

War does not seem to have any effect on the volume of immigration. Thus far this year there have arrived at the port of New York 66,268 aliens, increase of 11,940 over the corresponding months last year. The increase in April, however, was less than in March. Among the immigrants there were only 76 Spaniards.

There can now be no doubt that the government proposes to land an expedition in Cuba as soon as it is certain that no interference is possible from the Spanish fleet. It would be manifestly unsafe to land troops on the island until all danger of having their base of supplies cut off is removed. Until the powerful Spanish cruisers and torpedo vessels are disposed of, the army must remain quiescent. It is now generally believed by naval men that the fleet of fine armored cruisers which departed from the Cape de Verde Islands, a week ago, is headed in the direction of Porto Rico. Admiral Sampson and his powerful squadron of battle-ships has been sent to meet these formidable Spanish vessels, and, if possible, prevent their arrival at Porto Rico. Should the American squadron succeed in heading off the Spaniards, a great naval fight may be expected to take place.

The American forces are in full possession of all that is desirable and of all that controls Manila and the Philippine Islands. The naval force has been completely destroyed, and the forts, land batteries and arsenal are in hands of Admiral Dewey's forces. Manila itself is at his mercy. He awaits re-enforcement and instructions, which he can be depended upon to obey and utilize so soon as they may reach him. Attention is now centered upon the nearer-home fleet. Sampson is the observed now. At present he is off Hayti, pwating the Spanish squadron, said to have sailed from Cape de Verde Islands, westward. This squadron, so information came, left the Cape de Verdes nine days since, and with no mishaps it should have appeared near Porto Rico on Sunday. But as yet no appearances of a Spanish fleet has been indicated. The blockade of Cuba still continues, and as we have engaged in that service forty or more vessels of war, it is rigidly effective. Plans are maturing for an early invasion.

Admiral Dewey has telegraphed the following to the Secretary of the Navy: Squadron arrived at Manila at day break on May 1. Immediately engaged the enemy and destroyed the following Spanish vessels: "Reina Christina," "Castilla," "Don. Antonio De Ulloa," "Isla De Luzon," "Isla De Cuba," "General Lezo," "Marques De Duero," "Correo," "Velasco," "Isla De Mindanao," a transport and water battery at Cavite. The squadron is uninjured, and only a few men are slightly wounded. Only means of telegraphing is to American consul at Hong Kong. I shall communicate with him. . . . I have taken possession of the naval station at Cavite, Philippine Islands, and destroyed its fortifications. Have destroyed fortifications at the bay entrance, paroling the garrison. I control the bay completely, and can take the city at any time. The squadron is in excellent health and spirits. The Spanish loss is not fully known, but very heavy—150 killed, including the captain of the "Reina Christina." I am assisting in protecting the Spanish sick and wounded; 250 sick and wounded in hospital within our lines. Much excitement at Manila. Will protect foreign residents. . . . Spain lost about 1200, and the value of property destroyed or captured is fixed at the sum of six million dollars; the total loss to Americans was eight men wounded, and vessels damaged not more than $5000.

FOREIGN.

President Palma, of the Cuban Junta, says that the Cuban army now comprises 23,000 infantry, 2000 cavalry and several batteries of artillery. The infantry have fully 3000 Mauser rifles and 21,000 Remington rifles, while the cavalry carry 2000 Remington carbines. The army, he declares, is well officered and under excellent discipline.

$15.35.

Below are the names of those who have contributed to the church in Mississippi City since my last report, making a total of $15.35 contributed to said church in response to my appeal in ADVOCATE, of February, 1898.

Mrs. Maggie E. Bachus (Oak Ridge, Miss.), Rev. D. Scarborough and wife.

The church only lacks a part of the ceiling overhead; pulpit and seats to complete it. Won't some good friend who is able present the church with a plain, neat hook-stand? I trust so. Many thanks to one and all. God bless each one. Write me at Wool Market, Miss. G. R. ELLIS.

BE SURE YOU ARE RIGHT and then go ahead. Be sure you get Hood's Sarsaparilla and you may confidently expect it will purify your blood and give you appetite and strength.

Let all who come by rail get a certificate showing that they have paid full fare going, which certificate will be honored by the agent here, provided there are fifty or more.

We urge a full attendance, and let everyone pray for a baptism of the Holy Ghost. V. V. BOONE.

THE MINUTES.

Please allow me space in the ADVOCATE for correcting the following error in the Minutes of the fifty-second session of the Louisiana Annual Conference. The Minutes show Carrollton Avenue charge to have had during the year 1897, 2 accessions by profession of faith, when we had 7. My work here is progressing very well. My health is good, but I am very homesick. May God bless you and yours! P. H. FONTAINE.

PAINT TALKS. V.

ROOF PAINTS.

A house may be painted within and without, but if the covering that protects the whole structure be unsound, the work is wasted. From the economic point of view the roof is the most important part of a building.

Wood exposed to the weather will decay and metal will rust, unless artificially protected; therefore, a coating of good roof paint, which is always cheap enough, is the best investment a man can put into his house or his barn.

With shingle roofs the paint is best applied by dipping, before the shingles are laid, while metal roofs are painted in place. In either case perfect dryness of the material and clear dry weather are prerequisites to success.

The next most important question is the kind of paint to be used. Lead paints have been strongly advocated for the purpose; but there are two considerations which render them unsuitable for the purpose. First, in the course of disintegration, they may wash off the roof into the drinking water supply and cause serious illness; and secondly, they do not carry sufficient oil to fit them for such use. White lead, for instance, when thinned for painting carries less than fifteen per cent. of its weight of oil, and red lead still less; while certain other pigments carry a much higher proportion, zinc white, for example, requiring about forty per cent. of oil to reduce it to the proper consistency. A roof paint, exposed to the direct heat of the sun, naturally requires more oil than is necessary in other paints.

Of the two materials, therefore, zinc is more than twice the more valuable for the purpose, and the house-owner in selecting a roof paint based on zinc, can not err. Such paints are plentiful if the buyer will insist on having them.

For a metal roof the same considerations hold good. The metal should be freed from rust and the coats of paint applied thin, allowing plenty of time for drying after each coating. But even an old roof will have its life materially lengthened by a coat or two of good combination paint based on zinc. STANTON DUDLEY.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

You will find our offer of the "Combination" Bible on the fifth page; the other on the third.

BISHOP WILSON

in speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

A NEW BOOK.

THE HOME OF THE BIBLE: WHAT I SAW AND HEARD IN PALESTINE. By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 446 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day; how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

FOURTH DAY.

The weather has been most unfavorable since the opening of Conference. There had not been a rift in the clonds until this morning. To-day is all that conld be desired by anyone.

The Conference opened this morning at the regular time, with Bishop Granbery in the chair. After devotional exercises condncted by Rev. J. W. Hinton, of Macon, Ga., and the reading of the Minutes, Bishop R. K. Hargrove took the chair. The regnlar order of bnsiness was taken np, and the roll of Conferences was called for memorials, resolntions, and appeals. The order of the day, immediately after the call of the Conferences, was fixed for consideration of the report of the commission appointed by the General Conference of 1894, "to examine the Articles of Religion." Bnt the Conference was not ready for action npon the report, and made consideration of the report the order of the day for Wednesday. The Conference then adjourned.

The following are the chairmen of the several Standing Committees: Episcopacy, Rev. J H. Pritchett, Albany, Mo.; Itinerancy, Rev. Frank Richardson, St. Elmo, Tenn.; Revisals, Rev. J. M. Mason, Anburn, Ala.; Publishing Interests, J. P. Strother, Fresno, Cal.; Education, W. W. Smith, Lynchbnrg, Va.; Missions, Rev. R. N. Siedd, Danville, Va.; Church Extension, Rev. J. D. Barbee, Nashville, Tenn.; Bonndaries, Rev. C. G. Andrews, Meridian, Miss.; Temperance, E. C. Reeves, Johnson City, Tenn.; Sunday-schools, J. R. Pepper, Memphis, Tenn.; Epworth League, Rev. A. Coke Smith, Lynchburg, Va.; Appeals, Rev. W. T. McClnre, Independence, Mo.; Finance, E. W. Cole, Nashville, Tenn.; Colportage, W. F. Vandiver, Montgomery, Ala.

FIFTH DAY.

Conference was opened this morning with devotional exercises condncted by Rev. E. A. Yates, D. D., of the North Carolina Conference. After the nsnal routine the reports of committees was called, and the Committee on Episcopacy made Report No. 1, and asked that the rules be snspended, and the report be placed upon its passage immediately. The report was passed by a rising vote, a deferential air pervading the hall at the time. The following is the report:

BISHOP KEENER RETIRES.

"The General Conference has heard with deep emotion the address of our beloved senior Bishop, Jno. C. Keener, and desires to make some record of its appreciation of his high character and long service.

"It conld not bnt be that a man of snch pronounced strength at so many points would be placed in positions of great trnst and nsefulness. We gratefnlly make record that in all these positions Bishop Keener has shown sincere love for the church, and nndoubted pnrpose to seek what he believed to be for the best interests of the cause of God, and rare energy and perseverance in carrying out those purposes.

'For the long period of twenty-eight years he has borne the bnrden of the episcopal office, and for the past nine years has been the senior Bishop. He has discharged the weighty and delicate duties of his office faithfnlly, trying to promote the glory of God and the good of the church.

"He has seen our beloved Methodism broken and scattered by the terrible war which devastated our land and swept from us many who, trained at our altars, would have taken up and carried forward the work God has committed to us. Spared to see the return of peace, called to a prominent position of leadership, he has seen the unprecedented prosperity with which the Lord has blessed us, and has rejoiced in the abiding presence of the Spirit of God npon the increasing hosts of Methodism. In accomplishing this result, wonderfnl in onr eyes, God has used him, doubtless, in more ways than we can appreciate, and we are thankfnl to onr God for a man so pure in life, so high in purpose, so nntiring in work.

"Now that increasing years and infirmities compel him to ask for relief from the bnrdens he has so long borne, we assnre him not only of the appreciation of the church to which he has so nnreservedly given himself, bnt also of the great affection of those with whom and for whom it has been his privilege to labor.

"We pray that onr heavenly Father may long spare his aged servant to bless the church with his presence, interest, and love, and that grace, mercy and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ onr Savior, may be multiplied unto him.

"We recommend that Bishop Keener be released from official dnties, assuming him that such work as his strength may enable him to do will be greatly appreciated by our whole church."

After further routine work Report No. 1 of the Committee on Epworth League was taken np, and provoked such a lively discussion that the entire morning session was consnmed, the point of contention being whether there shonld be an editor for the Era and a second man for secretary, or the work of both offices devolve upon the same man. The Conference adjonrned in the midst of a heated debate.

SIXTH DAY.

This morning fonnd the sky again overcast, and a slow rain falling. So far the weather has been very unfavorable to the Conference. The prayer meeting at the Armory was attended by abont one-fonrth of the members of the Conference. Devotional exercises were condncted by Rev. J. D. Barbee, of Nashville. After the reading of the Minntes Bishop C. B. Galloway took the chair and presided over to-day's session. The Bishop exercised a wise discretion in all matter referred to him, and accorded eqnal privilege to all.

According to the order of bnsiness, the reports of committees were called for, and the following committees responded: Bonndaries, Temperance, Snnday-schools, Finance. The report of the Committee on Temperance, recommending non-concnrrence in a request from the Anti-Saloon League, made to the General Conference, to participate in the work of that League by sending representatives to the national convention, was adopted; local delegation be considered sufficient without church interference.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Finance was read, and by a snspension of the rules was pnt npon its passage. The report provided for the payment of the traveling expenses and board bills of the members of the General Conference. The report showed that these items of expense for the General Conference in Memphis, four years ago, for a sixteen days' session, cost $18,000, and that the Book Agents now have $23 000 in hand.

The General Conference which met in Memphis, Tenn., in May, 1894, appointed a commission to examine the text of the Articles of Religion. The commission was composed of Rev. W. P. Harrison, D. D., LL.D; Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Collins Denny, W. G. E. Cunnyngham, and J. J. Tigert. The commission made the following report to this General Conference:

"1. We find that the Articles of Religion have been changed since their adoption in 1784.

"2. In noting the changes it is necessary to make a distinction between the alterations that were made prior to the adjournment of the General Conference of 1808, and those that have occurred subsequently, for the reason that the said General Conference of 1808 adopted the Restrictive Rules, the first of which rules safeguard the Articles of Religion against changes by the delegated General Conference alone.

"3. Prior to 1808 we find the following changes: (a) Changes for which authority can be discovered. (b) Changes for which no authority can be discovered. The first class of changes refer to 'Article XXIII— Of the Rulers of the United States.' The second class refer to changes in Articles I. and II, which are not accounted for by any authority.

"4. The changes in the Articles since 1808 have been numerous, though mostly errors of the press, and all of them have been without authority."

This report has been before the Conference since the second day, was printed and circulated among the members, and came up for discussion on Monday last, but was deferred until to-day, when it was adopted.

Dr. C. G. Andrews opposed the report on the ground that the Conference could not alter or change the Articles of Religion, but the objection was overcome by the fact that there was no change, but simply getting back to the original text.

The Epworth League Committee report was taken up. The report recommends that two men be employed instead of one, as at present. One to perform the duties of secretary, and the other to edit the Epworth Era. After two days' discussion, every phase of the subject being fnlly elucidated, E. W. Cole offered a substitute providing for an editor, with sufficient appropriation to enable him to edit the Era and visit the Conferences. The substitute prevailed. The Epworth League secretaryship is no more.

SEVENTH DAY.

Rev. M. Dickie, representative from the Brazil Mission Conference, offered prayer. After the reading of the Minntes, Bishop Hendrix took the chair. The Bishop recognized Secretary Tigert, who read a communication from President McKinley. The communication was in reply to a message sent by the Conference several days ago, containing the following resolntions, passed the second day of Conference session:

Whereas, The King whom we serve is "the King of Peace;" And, whereas, We are praying and laboring and hoping for the day when "the nations shall learn war no more;" And, whereas, War, under any conditions, is a thing to be dreaded and deprecated, and, if possible, avoided by every Christian people; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby express onr gratification at the Christian manliness and statesmanship displayed by President McKinley in seeking, nnder the most trying ordeal, to avoid war with Spain.

Resolved, That we do assure him most sincerely, together with his colaborers, of onr deepest sympathy and strongest moral snpport in this time of weighty responsibility and great peril.

Resolved, That onr united and constant prayer shall be for a termination of this war as shall secure permanently the ends of justice, right and truth everywhere.

The Report No. 2 of the Committee on Episcopacy was taken up. The bill provided for the election of two Bishops. There was a feeble effort to so amend that three should be required, but the views of the committee as expressed in the report prevailed, and the time for election was fixed for Tuesday, May 17. Report No. 3 of the committee was taken up. This report contained the recommendation that the character of the Bishops be passed. The report was adopted without debate.

Report No. 1 from the Committee on Revisals was adopted. The amendment to the present law is as follows: Par. 105, Ans. 8 (Discipline, 1894): "To see that the districts be formed according to his judgment, provided that no district shall contain more than thirty appointments." The effect of the legislation is to enlarge the districts at the discretion of the Bishop to thirty appointments.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Missions was adopted, viz.:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this General Conference that all appropriations by the General Board of Missions to missionaries in any Annual Conference in the United States should be published in the Minutes of the Conference when said Conference shall require it.

The adoption of Report No. 2 of Committee on Bonndaries has the effect of transferring Mnnnerlyn's Chapel in Caddo parish, La., to the Little Rock Conference.

The Conference having used up all of the available material on the calendar, then heard Dr. Yonng J Allen on the situation in the East. Dr. Allen made a most able address. The address was introduced by a song sung in the Portnguese language by Rev. M. Dickie. Dr. Allen spoke of the history of the Chino-Japanese war, which he had written, and how, in developing his snbject, it was necessary for him to consider the Chinese character in comparison with Western Christian character. The reference to the history was used to illustrate the mental condition of the Chinese. The book has access to homes and studies that have been closed heretofore, and the trnth contained is calling for further enlightenment. The day is present when, throngh the channel-ways of books and periodicals, we may have access to the learned of the land. In closing the Doctor made an appeal for more men, more workers, more facilities for a publishing plant. At the close of the address the Conference passed a resolution congratulating the veteran missionary on his abundant labors and success, and pledging him the snpport of the church.

Dr. W. S. Griffin, of Toronto, Canada, the fraternal delegate to this Conference, on Wednesday night delivered his message of fraternity. The Doctor fnlly sustained the reputation the Canadian preachers have made among ns. The Doctor spoke deliberately and to the point. He reviewed to some extent the misfortnnes which had befallen the church, and noted the marvelous success that had attended our labors in those days of adversity. He then glanced at the history of his own church, and noted the difficulties, and how his church grew and widened her borders amid these trials. He then announced his faith that no enemy from without conld destroy the church, no submarine mine or torpedo, but that, if ever destroyed, it would be by the explosion in her own magazines. It remains to be seen whether the church can stand prosperity. There was a large audience present to hear this bright, sparkling, yet profound address.

Onr own Bishop Galloway (we have a peculiar right to call him "our own," as all the readers of the ADVOCATE know) lectnred on Monday night to a large and appreciative audience. Most of the delegates were present, and many of the Baltimore Methodists. In true Methodist style the congregation sang, "Jesus, lover of my soul." When the Bishop arose and moved to his place on the platform all sounds died away. His first words penetrated to the farthest corners of the Armory. It was evident that the Bishop was fnlly at himself. The subject of the lectnre was, "Methodism as a Development and Agency of Providence." The Bishop has had the subject in mind for some time, and had carefully worked out the detail. He portrayed, in a few vivid pictures, the social, moral and spiritnal life of England at the time John and Charles Wesley came upon the scene. He marked the providence of God in the times, in the ancestry, in the character of the yonng men, in their associates. Then he traced the providence of God in every development of the Methodist movement. The class meeting was the resnlt of an earnest purpose to pay a debt. The Annnal Conferences, local preachers, office of Bishop, all came out of the necessity. The lectnrer did not forget to mention that illnstrious galaxy of men now sainted who stood about Wesley and labored with him. The address was worthy of the man and the hour.

EIGHTH DAY.

The Conference is adding days to its session. The Memphis Conference was but sixteen days long. Eight days have already passed here, and very little has been accomplished. However, from now on there will be more rapid progress in the matter of actual legislation.

So far the radical party has not made much headway. To-day may be pnt down as the trinmph of the conservative element. The work of the day was entirely routine save the adoption of item two of Report No. 2 of the Committee on Itinerancy. The item in the report referred to reads as follows: "We have considered a memorial from the South Carolina Conference making a presiding elder ineligible to that office after serving eight years successively; also a memorial from the Holston Conference making the presiding elder ineligible to reappointment after serving for four years continuously. In both instances a majority of your committee recommend non-concnrrence." A minority report was submitted to the Conference bearing on this snbject as follows: "The nndersigned, a minority of the Committee on Itinerancy, feel constrained to submit a report dissenting from the action and report of the majority of the said committee on the memorial of the South Carolina Conference, and other memorials of like import, requesting a change in the law governing the appointment of presiding elders.

"We respectfully recommend that the General Conference add to Chapter III., Section II., page 57, paragraph 100, of the Discipline of 1894, the following proviso, 'And provide further that he shall not appoint anyone to serve in the office of presiding elder for more than eight years consecutively.'"

This report was signed by Frank Richardson, P. E. Prince, J. D. Vincis, Rnmsey Smithson, A. E. Rector, M. Hodgson, T. A. Kerley, J. O. Keener, J. R. Moore, and C. C. Woods.

In Conference the minority was introduced as a substitute for the majority report, and the opening speech in favor of the substitute was made by Rev. J. O. Keener, D. D., of Alabama. The speech was able, the points being well taken, and the delivery such that everybody in the hall conld hear. The time-limit cnt the Doctor before he finished. The discnssion was continned by McGehee, Richardson, McLean, West, and others. Keener was accorded the privilege of finishing his speech. The arguments seemed to be with the supporters of the substitnte, bnt the votes were with the conservatives, as the connt showed two to one in opposition to the substitnte.

Bishop Foss, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was introduced to the Conference, and for some time occupied a place on the platform.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

I greatly fear some of the younger men—perhaps some of the older ones, too—will be strongly tempted to substitute the expression of patriotic fervor for the preaching of the pure Word of God and the simple gospel of Christ. This temptation shonld be resisted with all our might. Everybody in this country knows that we are at war with Spain, and it is to be taken for granted that preachers are patriots. They need not publish either of these facts from the pulpit. The great body of the people will be sufficiently stirred by the papers and by their leaders, both military and political. The week days and nights will be full of war talk, and the people will need rest from it on Sunday. The simple story of the cross and the comforting promises of God's Holy Word will be refreshing to them on Sunday and in the house of God. This will tend to quiet their minds and to ease the pains and anxieties of their hearts. It will call them away from temporal to spiritnal and heavenly things.

There is a growing tendency of late years in some pulpits to discuss secular matters and political questions. There is not more than one preacher in a thousand who has sense and grace enough to discuss present public issues without exhibiting a partisan bias. Few preachers, comparatively, have sufficient information to discnss public, political, and national affairs calmly and intelligently before a promiscnous audience. Snch efforts are generally only exhibitions of personal and party feeling, and for this reason more harm than good is done.

It might be well for each preacher to get ont his commission and read it over again. How reads it? What were you called and sent to do? What to preach and teach? Methodist preachers would do well to read their ordination vows again. "Take thou authority to read the Holy Scriptnres, and to preach the same." Let us stick to this. The man who does this best does most for his country and most against her enemies.

I am all the more concerned on this snbject because I see from the papers that in many places in our wide land the fires of patriotism are being kindled on altars where only the fire of God ought to burn. Some utterances quoted are a shame and disgrace to the pulpit, and contrary to the spirit and genius of the religion of our Lord. We are sent to bless the people, and not to blast them; not even to blast our enemies. In a time like this it requires both sense and grace to pray for one's country without at the same time cursing the enemies of one's country. Christ and his apostles lived at a time of great political unrest and of extreme national affliction, bnt they said bnt little about it, or if they did, the Holy Ghost failed to inspire men to record it. I snppose they—at least the apostles—were keenly alive to the sufferings and wrongs heaped upon their people. They were men, and nothing more. The Master was of larger stuff.

The people need the Word of God and the gospel of Christ at all times, bnt never need them more than in times like these. Cæsar will attend to his affairs; we are sent to carry on God's work. Let us stick to it closer than ever. We are men of one work, and we are nnder obligation to preach the gospel to sinners, whether they be the friends or foes of our country.

Some of us ought to go—some of us must go—to the army to preach the gospel to the soldiers. They will need it, and they must have it. After the first flush of war is over they will appreciate it, and will hear it gladly. The obligation of preachers to go to the army is a duty to God and to the men in the army. We are called and sent of God to save men as individuals, and not by squads, companies, regiments and brigades; not by precincts, counties and States, bnt one man at a time. We can not bring men to Christ by wholesale; we have to bring them as individuals. Our work is personal, and not national. The divine leaven in the individual barrel of meal will ultimately leaven, in part or in whole, the whole nation, kingdom, country, and world. This is slow work, bnt it is God's ordained method of doing it. Let us diligently and faithfully do his own work in his own appointed way. We can not hurry it by adopting some other way.

GILDEROY.

MEN AND DEEDS.

Wanted: Men!
Not systems fit and wise,
Not faiths and rigid eyes,
Not wealth in mountain piles,
Not with power and gracious smiles,
Not even the potent pen—
Wanted: Men.

Wanted: Deeds—
Not words of winning note,
Not thoughts from life remote,
Not fond religious airs,
Not sweetly languid prayers,
Not love of ancient creeds—
Wanted: Deeds!

Men and deeds—
Men that can dare and do;
Not longings for the new,
Not pratings for the old—
Good life and action bold,
These the occasion needs—
Men and Deeds!

THE PRACTICAL VALUE OF AN EPWORTH LEAGUE LIBRARY.

BY MISS VIC THOMPSON, TUPELO, MISS.

The Epworth League library is very necessary to the successful operation of the literary line of League work, and I'm sure that at this epoch in the history of the League the vast importance of this work is fully recognized by each and every person who is interested in this great young people's movement in our church. Yet, as the practical value of a League library is to aid in this department of work, let us look for a while at the relation it sustains to the other departments, and consider its incalculable worth. The Literary Department is the only new feature in the League work. The prayer meeting, the class meeting, the love-feast, the revival, and other spiritual sources, have constituted by far the larger part of our Methodist life from its beginning; while the Charity and Help work has also been provided for through the Church Conferences, and the pastoral work of the preacher in charge. Yet, previous to the League there was no organized provision for the regular training of our young people in religious biography and denominational history, or in the cultivation of a taste for the pure and good in literature. So I repeat that the literary feature is the only new feature in the work; still, I do not claim that the League is filling any greater need along this line of work, unless that can be claimed, because there was no provision made for it before, or that it is of the greatest importance, and unless it can be successfully carried on, we'd as well not have the League.

No, the Epworth League only meets the need of the times in each department of its work in this age of intense activity by turning all this wonderful power of young life, which had lain dormant through so many centuries of human history, into its proper channel; and I know, beyond a doubt, that the church never accomplished along any line of its work, with its young life, what is now being accomplished by the League. When the young and old met together in service a beautiful courtesy caused the young to keep a deferential silence; but that silence was to their spiritual detriment. They failed on account of it to be spiritually benefited, or received any religious training therefrom. Besides, never did the church without the League so enlist the young in works of charity and help. As long as there are older persons to assume the responsibility, the young will not enter so heartily into any work. Young people must be made to feel that they are responsible for things, and it takes mottoes, badges, colors, the League flower and all such, to give them zeal, inspiration and enthusiasm in the Master's cause.

In this age of progression its very intensity, the greatness of the work, and the whiteness of the fields unto the harvest, necessitated this improved church machinery—"The Epworth League." So I say that in each department of work the League supplies a great need. Nor do I think we can single out any one line of League work and claim its superiority or importance over the others, as so many do. While we believe and know that the work of vital importance, the great central work, around which all other work revolves, is the devotional work, the spiritual idea, the idea of living nearer to Christ and bringing others into his fold, and that the first duty of every Leaguer should be to lead souls to Christ, still we attach no less importance to soul-culture or training in the things of God, because it does not come first. The League's aim is to win souls to Christ and to make young disciples efficient servants of Christ.

This involves, first, intense spirituality, complete consecration; but, secondly, it involves intelligence; such knowledge of Christian truths as shall enable the young Christian to give a reason for the hope that is within him; such knowledge of the doctrine, history and polity of our grand old Methodist Church as will cause him to glory in Methodism; such knowledge of men and methods as shall make him practical in all his thinking and acting. No, the Epworth League is only the young life of the church at work for God and humanity, and to develop well-rounded, consecrated Christians; the different departments of work are only supplementary and complementary to each other, and it is the imperative duty of every young person living in the broad light of this nineteenth century to make the most of every God-given faculty with which he or she may be endowed—to grow up into the full estate of noble Christian manhood and womanhood.

Our land is flooded with books from the pens of noble men and women who have made the world better for having lived in it. These books will serve to broaden, enrich, ennoble, sweeten and bless the life of any Christian, for as a great writer has said: "The first use of books is to enable us to consult with the wisest and greatest men and women on all points of difficulty. To use books rightly, we are to go to them for help when our own knowledge of power and thought fail; to be led by them into wider sight, and receive the united counsel of the judges of all time against our solitary and unstable opinion."

We have gifted authors, too, who have given special attention to the preparation of books for the young. Choice material for Epworth League libraries is now stored in our Publishing House, and I urge that every League in Mississippi that has not already done so will begin at once to collect a League library. There is still unpardonable ignorance displayed among our young Methodists, and from all places comes the cry that the Literary Department is the most difficult of all departments. Now, in my study and observation of League work, I have found that a library of choice books has done more to aid in the literary work, and to keep up the interest and hold the Leagues together during those times of depression which come to all organizations, than any one thing else. Up in North Mississippi our live leaguers have established libraries of several hundred choice volumes in almost every town, and I claim that had nothing else been done by them in a literary way, their work would have been a grand one. Those libraries have put as many as fifty or sixty young people in some of those towns to reading the best books, and these books have put them in touch with the world, and made them a reading young people among whom noble thoughts are entertained and interchanged. As a rule, a person may be known by the books he reads as surely as by the company he keeps. There is a companionship in books as well as in real life, and one should be as careful in choosing the one as the other. Now, the great problem which has claimed the attention of some of the wisest and best informed of our church since the organization of the League is, how to inspire the mass of our young people with a love for the best literature, that though they may be unable or unwilling to take an active part in the public plans, etc., of the League, they may indeed choose for their daily companions, for the inmates of their homes, such books as will broaden their horizon, point them to the noblest ends and purposes of life, and better fit them for their sphere.

THE FUTURE.

But some of the influences which developed our ante-bellum institutions remain—because they are naturally inherent in soil and climate, and will for all time make the South distinctly Southern. In fact, the peculiarities of our soil and climate, and the effect thereby produced in the habits and manners of the people, but more especially the products of this soil and climate, and the shape and direction thereby given to the avocations of our people, must always produce the same character of institutions, and, as a result, there will be no very great difference between the old and so-called New South. Thus the great staple of the South is cotton, is now cotton, and will always be cotton, unless soil and climate change. Now, in the cotton belt this staple is not raised in the small, but on a large scale—that is, it has been found by actual experience that cotton is more advantageously cultivated on large plantations, and this necessitates many laborers, and these laborers will be negroes, and the system of labor will be on the share system—the laborers working for a part of the crop, or for wages. This leads to the assembling together of many negroes on large plantations, and the negroes being assembled together in cabins or quarters, we thus have the old plantation life of the Old South. So the raising of cotton will keep alive in the South the plantation life of other days.

We will examine this more in detail. In the poorer sections of the South, the hill country, the small white farmer will continue to raise his two or three bales of cotton in the future as he has in the past; but the more fertile sections will attract men of wealth, and these wealthy men will buy up the country, and have already generally bought the lands, and converted the same into large plantations. Now, these fertile sections of the South are generally malarious, and experience has demonstrated that the negro, as a laborer on these plantations, is far superior to the white man. The more delicate and sensitive nervous system of the white man will not stand up under the hot, malarious Summer's sun as will the negroes. Not only this; the negro is a cheaper laborer than is the white man. He will put up with coarser fare and harsher treatment; is more bidable, and does not stand so much on his rights. These, and other similar considerations, will cause the negro to be preferred as a laborer on cotton plantations. The negro, however, will never constitute an independent tenantry, since this requires a self-control, self-direction and natural energy which the negro does not possess. More than this, it is not to the interest of the owners of these fertile cotton lands that the cropper, or share laborer, should have an interest in the soil; but it is to the interest of the owner of the land that the man who actually produces the cotton by his labor should be a villein. Under the English villinage tenure the villein had no interest in the soil. He was either villein regardant—that is, annexed to the land, so that when the land was sold he passed to the purchaser along with the land; or he was villein in gross—that is, annexed to the person of the land. This was the lowest form of civil life. From this condition the villein, by the gradual advance of civilization, also himself rose from his low estate until he came to be a tenant, having an interest in the soil, and this was because the white man, by his thrift and energy, raised himself from the condition of a mere tiller of the soil, at the will of his lord, to an independent tenant, with a certain lease, certain as to its commencement, and certain and fixed as to its termination.

Thus was developed the yeomanry of England. This is landlordism, and it is a strong, vigorous and enduring social status. The tenant—from father to son—tills the land from generation to generation. His vine-covered cottage, the fields which he and his ancestors have plowed, the church where from generation to generation they have worshiped, and the cemetery hard by where sleeps the loved ones who have gone on before him—these all kindle in his heart a deep love for his native soil, and this love of the soil is characteristic of the English race. It is said that the reason why this country is English from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean is because the first English colonists were farmers, and cut down, subdued forests and tilled the soil; whereas the French colonists were trappers, hunters, and traders. Somehow the cultivation of the soil—the pursuit of agriculture—has a tendency to develop stirling qualities of head and heart. Nature is grand and sublime, and the being alone with nature, the coming and going of the seasons—Spring, as she comes, strewing the earth with bright flowers, heralded by the song of birds; Summer gently rising from the lap of Spring, and Autumn, when the succulent corn, ripe in its yellow shock, rewards the labors of the husbandman—these all cause the thoughtful soul to look up from nature to nature's God.

The Southern people will ever be agriculturists, and our hot Summer's sun and malaria will always create a need for the laborer with the black skin and woolly hair, and these we find in the negro. So the negro will always be a necessity with us as long as cotton is our staple production, and it will be as a share-cropper or wage-laborer that we will need him, and not as a tenant, with an interest in the soil; for independent tenantry he is not fitted. His Creator, by giving him his black skin and submissive disposition, has marked him as an inhabitant of hot climates, and to be directed, controlled and governed by the superior and dominant race. But should the negro ever cease to become useful to the superior race, he will pass away like the Indian. The Indian was removed because he could not be made useful; he was an incumberer of the ground; so the Indian was removed. The same fate awaits the negro, should he, like the Indian, become a cumberer of the ground.

LAYMAN OR SEXTUS.

PROPOSED CHANGES.

Ever since the adoption of the present form of "Pastors' Annual Conference Report" blanks there have been complaints heard from all quarters of the church that in one respect or another they failed to do what they were intended to do—to give us an accurate insight into the condition of the church. That these complaints are well founded anyone may see by comparing the reports of moneys received by the various Conference Boards with the corresponding item in the statistical tables of the Minutes. The present method of reporting the money raised by Sunday-schools for missions is the cause of considerable confusion, as some of this money is reported in the amount raised by the church on the regular assessment for foreign missions, while another part is used at home for mission Sunday-schools, and some is sent by the schools to special missions outside of the Conference, and does not pass through the hands of the treasurer of the Board of Missions. So you see part of this money is of necessity reported twice.

The present way of reporting the various kinds of church members and the membership of last year is very unsatisfactory, to say the least of it. Take a chronit, the plan of which has been changed since the last report was made. One brother reports the membership of the work as it stood last year; another reports the members he found on the changed work, and makes no mention of a change of plan, while still another reports the membership of the work as it stood last year, and under the head of "Additions by Certificate and Otherwise," or "Removals by Death, Certificate, and Otherwise," he reports the gain or loss in membership by the change in plan of the work.

Very few of the brethren report local preachers correctly. Take as an instance of these errors the report of a prominent member of the Louisiana Conference, and it is by no means an extraordinary one. He reports: Local preachers, 1; white members, 150; colored members, none; total members this year, 150; total members last year, 169; additions on profession of faith, 2; additions by certificate and otherwise, 10; removals by death, certificate, and otherwise, 20.

Now, which figures shall the secretary assume to be correct? It is evident the local preacher has been included in the white members, contrary to the rule set for us by the Book Editor in the General Minutes; but the other error is not so easy to rectify.

In stations the membership given for last year—if it agrees with the report of the preceding year—is most reliable, but in circuits it is best to take the membership given for this year; but even this rule does not reach the root of the matter. Some one has proposed to eliminate from the "Report" the "Membership last year." To my mind this would leave us at sea, as we would have nothing to check against, and it is easily seen that the reports are very loosely made out.

I would propose, in the first place, that the approaching General Conference instruct the Book Editor to have printed on the inside of the cover of the book of blank reports full instructions as to how to fill out the blanks. He should make his directions so simple that "the wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err therein."

It would be well to change the law in regard to the secretary of the Board of District Stewards so as to make it his duty to send to the Annual Conference secretary a copy of the assessments made on his district, and also amend the law in regard to the duties of the treasurers of all Conference Boards and committees as to make it their duty to furnish the secretary of the Conference a true copy of all payments made to them.

These two changes, with some changes in the wording of two or three of the questions, will insure us a far more reliable set of statistical tables than we have ever had.

THE GOSPEL MINISTRY.

"Now, then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." (II. Cor. v, 20.)

To the ministry: "Now, then, we are ambassadors (presbyters, elders) for Christ." Christ, the head of the church, the captain of our salvation, is our ambassador, the viceroy, the plenipotentiary from God the Father to his rebellious children. He comes commissioned; he has been sent of God the Father; his work is peculiarly a mediatorial one; he is to represent his Father's interests here upon earth. Those to whom he comes are more properly a "court of hearing;" the sinner is besought; we become, by a divine commission, his representatives; we are to work a work of reconciliation that is to bring the sinner back to God; we stand in Christ's stead. How divine the calling! how grand the work! What a privilege to be thus "called of God!" to represent his interests here upon earth in making known his will to the sinner, and thus standing in his Son's place. Then, truly, it is that "we beseech men in Christ's stead;" then, truly, we stand "as though God did beseech by us," and then we become mouthpieces for God. How sublime the thought, how divine the spectacle, when God stands clothed in human flesh and form, and thus beseeches men to be saved! How awful must be the sinner's doom who has thus turned away from mercy so great, from love so divine! And what a burden for souls should the gospel minister feel when he is thus to stand between sinful men and a Divine Father! "Oh, may the sinner be reconciled to thee, Holy Father!" What a responsibility and what a privilege to be thus permitted to come into the audience-chamber of God himself! Are we serious enough, are we worshipful upon such occasions? Do we recognize aright the beauty of holiness, the solemnity of the occasion? "We pray you in Christ's stead." What a prayer—"in Christ's stead!" And, then, what anguish, that Zion may bring forth children! "Oh, that Israel were come out of Egypt, that my people were delivered from bondage!" How prayerful such a ministry! How "Gethsemane" looms up before such "ambassadors"! "Oh, that Zion were as an army with banners; then should my people go forth from victory unto victory!" "Be ye reconciled to God." Terms upon which reconciliation can be effected can now be entered upon; peace negotiations with God can now be made; the necessary preliminaries for a treaty of peace, even an everlasting covenant, are now completed, and is now about to be ratified by God in behalf of man. Man can now act in his own behalf. God accedes reconciliation to you; the turmoil may cease, the strife within may be put to a perpetual end. "Will you be reconciled, made at peace with God? We come in his behalf—in the name of his Son."

THE DIVINE PRESENCE.

Nothing can be of greater practical importance to every Christian than the constant realization of the Divine Presence. It is worth every effort. It is, as much as any one thing can be, the key to the position, the guarantee of a sacred life. An increasing appreciation of this truth is shown in the large emphasis which, for a few years past, has been put upon the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. Is not this simply another form of the same fact? The Holy Spirit is the present God, the God who operates most immediately and directly upon the human heart, the God of the present dispensation or age. Faith also—what is that but the sense of God's presence, the realization of unseen things, the close touch with the eternal, the apprehension of Deity? Hence to say of a person he is "full of faith and the Holy Ghost," is only another way of saying that he keeps God ever before his eyes. God is at his right hand, so that he is not moved by mundane things. In that Presence is fullness of joy, completeness of liberty, abundance of rest.—Exchange.

When Latimer was on trial for heresy, he heard the scratch of a pen behind the tapestry. In a moment he bethought himself that every word he spoke was taken down, and he says that he was very careful what words he uttered. Behind the veil that hides eternity is a record-book, in which our every syllable is taken down. Even the most trivial are not forgotten, for the Lord Jesus tells us that "every idle word that man shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment!" If our words have an eternity of existence, if good words have so potent an influence to save, if idle, or profane, or poisonous speech work such perennial mischief, how needful is the perpetual utterance of the prayer, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."—Theodore L. Cuyler.

We are so constituted that sluggishness is the prelude to decay and death. Action is the law of physical, mental and spiritual life. Labor is not a curse, but a blessing. God is the most active force in the universe, and man, his child, must likewise ceaselessly employ all his faculties if he would be truly happy. Use of the body strengthens it, and the same is true of mind and spirit. He who cultivates the mental domain that God has given him will accumulate knowledge and wisdom; he who devotes himself to the things of the spirit will more clearly apprehend spiritual things as the days go by. But the sluggard courts doom, and it is on his track.

Were a house to be in flames tomorrow, and were a mother to seize her gold, and her jewels, and her rings, and rush from the flames with them, and forget her infant slumbering in its cradle, she would neither be so inhuman nor so inconsistent as that man who cares for the toys of a day, and thinks nothing and cares nothing about a soul that stands in eternal jeopardy every hour, if not justified and pardoned.—Selected.

Prayer is the door forever open between earth and heaven. Sooner than sound can reach a human ear through this lower atmosphere, the longing desire of the spirit rises to the heart of the eternal Friend. Whether we believe it or not, we are living in an invisible world, where our wishes are understood before our words are spoken.—Lucy Larcom.

All that you and I are responsible for is doing our duty. Ours is the seeding, and God alone beholds the end of what is sown. How do we know how much good we accomplish when we do any good thing or utter any truth in love? Eternity will be full of surprises to us. Wait and see.—Theo. L. Cuyler.

The horse, no sooner is its head turned homeward, than it trots, and goeth cheerfully. And shall not we, who deem ourselves wiser than the horse, go to our home cheerfully?—Ivan Parrin.

As the principle of love is the main principle in the heart of the real Christian, so the labor of love is the main business of the Christian life.—Jonathan Edwards.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., May 11, 1898: "We had a good Epworth League meeting last night. Bro. W. M. Sloane, of Shreveport, gave us a good address, and raised $20 in cash and subscription for missions. Our Epworth Leaguers have been greatly blessed in our recent revival."

E. B. Wimberly: "It is with profound pleasure that I refer to the very able ministry of Rev. T. W. Adams, pastor of the Weason M. E. Church. Since his arrival in our midst harmony has been restored within the entire membership, and a delightful religious breeze now overshadows our brethren. Each day seems to add a feeling of the deepest contrition. All denominations offer fraternal love, and attend our services frequently. I can truthfully assert that a more harmonious feeling now exists among the membership of our church than has existed within the past twenty years. During the four months of Bro. Adams' pastorate here over fifty have been received into the church by letter and profession of faith. Yesterday (Sunday, 11 o'clock A. M.) Bro. Adams expounded the gospel to the military boys, who depart on Tuesday for Jackson to enlist in the United States Army. Text: I. Tim. I, part of the eighteenth verse: 'War a good warfare.' Charming in the extreme, pointed, and full of religious truths, tears flowed from many an eye. When the invitation was extended the soldier boys asking the prayers of the church, almost every person stood up, saying they would pray for them. Long will this scene be remembered. God is with us here. Bro. Adams has now in progress a protracted meeting. Much real good will be accomplished."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., May 5, 1898: "After a most delightful visit to the Epworth League Conference at Alexandria this scribe mounted his bicycle and made a trip over the pine-hills of Rapides and Vernon parishes, preaching here and there. He found it pleasant to mingle with old friends, yet sad to miss so many that had fallen asleep in death. The visits were mostly within the circuit of Rev. W. G. Roberts, of Spring Creek, including one visit to the home of Mr. F. P. Welch, of Dido, the writer's father-in-law. Bro. Roberts has the smiles and the confidence of his people, and, no doubt, their prayers and sympathy. The outlook is that he is in the beginning of glorious success as pastor. These people have a high regard for their respective presiding elders. Bro. Skipper is the present 'beloved,' and they estimate his gospel gun at least the equal of any of them. The writer did not hear any of these pine-hill folks complain of long sermons. One of two things must be true: they have good gospel appetites, or the preachers do not unload on them. Isn't that blessed?—a people with appetites as long as the sermon. At Spring Creek Camp Ground we buried on the third instant one of the old landmarks of that country—Bro. Henry Cordy. Bro. Cordy was more than eighty years old. He had raised a large and honest family. He served his church and his God faithfully, and departed in peace. On return a call at Bro. Brewer's, at Lecompte, was both pleasant and sad. Pleasant because of everything but Bro. Brower's personal illness, which is sad. The dear, good old Christian will not be here much longer. The writer did not have time for a call on the popular pastor, Bro. Isbell, on account of having to visit Cheneyville before the arrival of the east-bound train. The report is that Bro. Isbell is doing fine work. Wednesday afternoon finds the writer at home looking after the affairs of his family and his Jeanerette charge. Many good wishes for the 'sub' while the editor is off at General Conference."

HATTIESBURG STATION.

Our second Quarterly Conference has been held, and I am truly thankful to our heavenly Father that our presiding elder, Bro. C. A. Powell, was able to be present, and presided with his usual ability. His health is much improved, and, from all indications now, he will soon be all right. For a while his chances to live seemed quite slender, but in answer to prayers, and also to the means employed for his recovery, he is now in much better health than he has been for about twelve months. His improvement was so immediate that many were puzzled to know how it was. It is clear enough to those who live in communion with God.

Our charge is progressing very well, but we would be much better pleased if it was more spiritual. We are hopeful that our assessments will all be half-paid by our District Conference, which will begin on the twenty-sixth of this month (May). We have had 171 accessions since December one year ago. Only four of this number joined during a protracted meeting. We have bought a large bell, weighing over 1000 pounds, for our church, and arrangements have been made for electric lights in our church.

I wish to say to the brethren who purpose attending the District Conference here, that we have arranged for them to come on the Gulf and Ship Island railroad by paying full fare here and return free of charge by presenting a certificate from the secretary of the District Conference, signed by the depot agent here. The Northeastern will allow brethren who travel over it to return at one-third rate, provided we have fifty or more in attendance. The brethren who expect to bring their wives will please notify me at once. We should like to have a representative of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE with us.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

On the loveliest of May mornings we rode through picturesque woods and grassy hills and vales to Soule Chapel, embedded in the most beautiful and shady grove. There it stands, in peaceful seclusion from the "madding crowd," or the discord of war or "world's tumult." Very appropriate is the custom of our church in choosing this season for "Children's Day service." The flowers waking from sleep; the trees in fresh green foliage; the grass springing beneath our feet—all tell of beauty and happiness, in which even inanimate nature rejoices. How much more, then, do our little children open their happy hearts with the flowers, and, like little buds of promise, blossom into joy! But here we are near our dear little church, an attractive background to the woods overshadowing it. What a varied and busy scene is here! In all directions, walking, driving, or riding, here come the joyous children, bright in fresh muslin and gay ribbons. The sunshine of the day influenced mind and body, and not a sad countenance was there. One and another were greeted in cheerful spirit, and soon all entered the church, which had been tastefully decorated by the thoughtfulness of the ladies. Above the pulpit was the motto in green leaves, "A little child shall lead them," and on the walls, "God loveth a cheerful giver." He saith unto you, "Feed my lambs." The chandelier was trimmed in evergreens, and the altar also decorated with flowers and foliage. Now, all seated, the choir take their places, and, with the children, join heartily in the sweet song, "Safely through another week God has brought us on our way." Next was a responsive reading on the gifts of the Spirit—a lesson that can not be too strongly impressed upon all who seek to work or worship. Another song followed, and then the pastor's address. He made a helpful and instructive talk on the Methodist polity much needed by old or young, for too often the "Methodist armor" is not put on from "rusting unused," or ignorance of its various parts; spoke appropriately of the necessity of each child being familiar with the institutions and ordinances of the church, and closed with the important recommendation that members of the church each take a church paper. It may appear strange that such a hint be needed, but it is lamentably true that many who would blush to be ignorant of political news or government, and would not be satisfied without the daily tidings of the Spanish-American war, yet let the great movements of their church and its enterprises go on, not only without an encouraging "God-speed," but even their knowledge of any such movements. After this excellent address came a sweet little song by the sweet little birds, "Little Birds of Praise." All the exercises were tasteful, helpful, and instructive.

I desire to offer thanks, on behalf of Soule Chapel congregation, to the faithful, patient ladies who take such pains in preparing the children, and desire as well to congratulate our little people on the marked improvement we note, as year by year we attend these services. It is a twice-told tale to speak of the advantages of Children's Day, of the recurring annual object-lesson it gives them of their importance and prominence in the church. Who can say what untold blessings have resulted, and will do so to the world's end, from the training of the little children, of whom Jesus said, "Suffer them to come unto me"? "A little child shall lead them." What a precious truth is that! But no Methodist assembly is complete without the usual rounding-up of collection, and our service to-day was not an exception to the rule. Four dear little collectors were chosen to take it up.

We were told by our pastor that our circuit led the North Mississippi Conference circuits in collections. We took up on this occasion $8, or thereabouts, and, benediction being pronounced, we left for home. C.

Haste makes waste of life as well as of other things. The restless, impatient toil of to-day is evident in nervous, worn-out men and women and in work imperfectly done. It takes time and patience to do anything well, from the formation of character to the building of a house; and the poorest economy is that which endeavors to save time or money or labor in laying the foundation. Little by little, day by day, the work must be done. It may be we can not see further than the duties of to-day, and even then fail to understand their bearing upon the end to be accomplished. It is just here that our faith must come in, and we must be satisfied to do them and wait to learn their meaning after while. After all, these things are not so hard if one has not made a mistake in the beginning.—If we love our work, if we have chosen the thing which more than all others we are fitted to do, if we have faith in ourselves and in our work, then we will have no higher pleasure than the consciousness that every day we are giving it the best effort of which we are capable, and that satisfaction, combined with our assurance of ultimate success, if we are faithful, will make it easy to wait while we work.—Selected.

The shortness of life is bound up with its fulness. It is to him who is most active, always thinking, feeling, working, caring for people and for things, that life seems short. Strip a life empty and it will seem long enough.—Phillips Brooks.

A Maiden's Dream.

Thousands of young women dream day-dreams of the youthful hero and husband that is to lead them to the altar of wed-lock—dreams that are fated never to come true because of the ill-health of the fair dreamer. Young heroes now-a-days are hard-headed rather than hard-hearted. They know from reading and hearsay that a young woman who suffers from weakness and disease in a womanly way cannot well prove a happy, helpful, amiable wife and mother.

Physicians tell young men that weakness and disease of the feminine child-begetting organism make women sickly, nervous and despondent in spite of the best of natural dispositions. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes these organs strong, healthy, vigorous and elastic. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and steadies the nerves. It does away with the qualms of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It frees maternity of peril. It insures the newcomer's health. Dr. Pierce is an eminent and skillful physician, who, during his thirty years' experience as chief consulting physician to the great Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., has treated thousands of women. He will answer letters from women free.

Very many women who have become happy, healthy wives and mothers through the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have permitted their experiences, names, addresses and photographs to be printed in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. This great home medical work used to cost $1.50. Now it is free. It contains 1,008 pages and over 300 illustrations. Several chapters are devoted to the reproductive physiology of women. For a paper-covered copy send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. Cloth binding, 31 stamps.

INCREASING LIBERALITY OF THE RICH.

It is gratifying to note that along with the wonderful increase of wealth in this country during recent years, there has been on the part of not a few millionaires a corresponding increase in liberality; and thus the charge that the rich, as a class, are hoarding and holding their wealth for selfish ends is not borne out by the facts in the case. During the past five years the gifts of the rich in the United States for philanthropic purposes have reached a grand total of $165,000,000. Last year the donations to colleges, charities, libraries, etc., from private sources amounted to upwards of $45,000,000, this being an increase of about $16,000,000 over what was contributed for such purposes in 1893. Numberless small donations, it is stated, are not to be included in the grand total given above.

The larger portion of these gifts went to endow and maintain hospitals, orphan asylums, and other benevolent institutions. Colleges and universities were the next largest beneficiaries, while churches, libraries and art galleries also received considerable sums. It is quite noteworthy that though not all who have made princely donations are millionaires, very few of the possessors of great fortunes can be put in the list of non-contributors. Among the largest contributors may be mentioned: J. Pierpont Morgan, Wm. Waldorf Astor, Andrew Carnegie, John B. Deering, Mrs. Leland Stanford, John Fred Martin, John D Rockefeller, Washington Covington, George Pullman, Charles Contoit, and Henrietta R. V. Baker. The large liberality and unselfish labors of such persons as Geo. W. Childs and Miss Helen Gould are doing more than all else to destroy prejudice and bring the rich and the poor closer together. As one writer recently said: "It seems as if Helen Gould were devoting her life to doing those things which her father left undone."

Nowhere, save in Christian lands, do we find the rich making such offerings or displaying such deep interest in the welfare of their fellowmen. In China, India, and other pagan lands, the suffering and the unfortunate are treated by all classes alike with the most heartless indifference. The rich there manifest the greatest unconcern for the wants and woes of the distressed, and scarcely entertain a thought of any obligation to contribute to their relief. As Bishop Galloway states in his book, "Modern Missions:" "The highest expression of philanthropy in all India is hospitals for sick animals, inspired by their doctrine of transmigration. They will neglect afflicted men to care for a diseased dog, for, in so doing, they may be ministering to a dead son or daughter."

Christianity is the only religion that teaches the brotherhood of man in the true sense, and hence, wherever it has full sway, it makes men feel that, whether high or low, wealthy or poor, they are children of one common Father, servants of the same Lord, and partakers of the same glorious promises. Practical benevolence and far-reaching sympathy are not the product of any force save that of the gospel. Were it not for the unselfishness and humanitarianism which Christianity inculcates, the rich of to-day would be as miserly, unbenevolent and mean-souled as the millionaires of ancient Greece and Rome. To quote from Dr. Cunnyngham Geikie: "No one of the thousands in Rome ever conceived the notion of founding an asylum for the poor, or a hospital for the sick. There were herds of beggars. Seneca often mentions them, and observes that most men fling an alms to a beggar with repugnance, and carefully avoid all contact with him." Though there is a seeming exception in the case of Julius Cæsar, who lavished large sums upon the Roman populace in the celebration of games, in the erection of temples, baths, and theatres, and in the distribution of largesses of coin, yet, in all this, there was no true humanitarianism, but simply the aim to win public favor for political ends. Among the Jews the sufferings of the poor were thought to be the just penalty of some sin of their own, or of their fathers. From Christ alone do we hear the words: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Who but the Master could have taught: "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant?"

The numerous gifts and benefactions emanating from the wealthy and the well-to-do of our land indicate most clearly that Christianity is a mighty leavening force among the upper classes no less than among the common people, for no other power save that of the gospel has ever been able thus to subdue selfishness and covetousness. No other agency has ever succeeded thus in causing altruism and benevolence to spring forth and flourish. Nor has any preceding age witnessed such wonderful manifestations of generosity and unselfishness as are now so noticeable among the rich and poor alike in this and other Christian lands.

It is deeply significant, too, that gifts and benevolences such as we have mentioned are confined almost entirely to the ranks of the professing Christians and believers in Christianity. Atheists and infidels have not been noted, either in this or in any other age, for philanthropy and generosity. Unbelievers often boast of their benevolence, of their being the friends of humanity, and the foes of superstition and tyranny; but how many colleges have infidels founded? How many orphan asylums have they established? How many homes for the aged and the destitute? How many drunkards have they reformed? How many vicious have they reclaimed? What great charity has infidelity caused to be established? How many slaves has it liberated? How many drunkards has it rescued? But Christianity, "like the Good Samaritan, lifts the wounded of earth and bears them to the inns of salvation." She feeds the hungry, relieves the suffering, ministers to the sick, cares for the orphan, brings joy to the mourner, hope to the outcast, and liberty to the captive. It is Christianity, more than any other influence, that has loosened the purse-strings of the rich, and caused them to think seriously of the responsibilities of wealth, and of the grand opportunities of serving humanity within their grasp. More and more men of fortune are coming to realize that only by an unselfish use of their means can they best enjoy life, and that in no other way can they win the love and esteem of their fellow-men. The wealthy ought to do infinitely more than they are doing for the public good; but we feel sure that, as a class, men of means were never so liberal, so ready of sympathy, or so practical in philanthropy, as now. May God speed the day when the rich everywhere shall look upon their riches as a trust from God!

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

The calendar is filling up with bills, and the work henceforth promises to be more interesting.

The Daily Advocate comes out regularly in the morning containing, beside editorials and personal notes, a stenographic report of the Conference proceedings.

Rev. H. M. DuBose, of the Mississippi Conference, was moving about among the brethren. He is on a visit to the Conference, and will remain several days.

On every hand we hear it reported that the brethren of the Conference gave satisfaction in their pulpit ministrations; but this is no surprise to those of us who know the brethren.

Rev. Jno. Pioket, of Louisiana, peeped in on the Conference for a few days this week before his return to his home. He feels at home when about Baltimore, for he was born not far from this city.

Rev. N. B. Harmon has been sitting among the brethren from Mississippi for several days. No doubt the young man is taking notes, and will be in proper frame to represent his Conference a few quadrenniums hence.

There is some guessing among the brethren as to whom the church will place her hand upon and call to service in the episcopal rank. It is esteemed an honor to be thus called. Some, no doubt, would relish the honor.

Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, occupies the chair of assistant secretary next to Dr. Gross Alexander. Bro. Watkins is faithful at his post of duty, and justifies the choice which called him to the responsible position.

Rev. Sam P. Jones, a lay delegate from North Georgia, arrived this morning, and took his seat on the floor of the Conference. He was unable to reach the Conference at an earlier date, owing to the illness of his daughter.

A motion was made and carried requiring all desirous of speaking to the bill under discussion to go forward and take his place on the platform. This requirement was found to be necessary, in view of the bad acoustics of the hall.

Dr. W. B. Murrah, of Jackson, preached by appointment at Mt. Vernon M. E. Church on Sunday, May 8. The inclement weather had a bad effect on the congregation; not so, however, with the sermon. The Doctor did himself and his church justice.

Rev. M. B. Chapman, of the Louisville Conference, looked in on the Conference this week. He remembers with kindly affection the Louisiana Conference as his native Conference. The Doctor is one of many who have gone from our midst into larger fields of usefulness.

Dr. Paul Whitehead, of Richmond, Va., a member of the Virginia Conference, after suffering the loss of his only son since the beginning of the Conference, appeared in his place on Tuesday, the fifth day of the Conference. The Doctor is the best parliamentarian in the General Conference.

The delegations from Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences are at the Altamont Hotel, corner of Eutaw Place and Lonvale street. They are well cared for, and are congenial company for each other. There are no aspirations evident which in anywise mar these fraternal relations.

When Report No. 1 from the Epworth League Committee was taken up, there was a perfect flood of oratory poured upon the Conference. It was the first time the loquacious members had been accorded the opportunity of speaking. The question arises as to who has weight and influence with the Conference. Certainly not the incessant talkers.

Dr. W. C. Black preached for the Baptist brethren last Sunday. The day was bad, the congregation small, and the Doctor—well, we could not find out just what, but this much we know: On Monday following the ladies of the afore-mentioned church sent the Doctor a handsome bunch of flowers. LaPrade says in exchange for the flowers the Doctor dispensed on Sunday.

The Conference sent greeting and messages of fraternal love to the Baptist Convention in session in Norfolk, Va., and quoted II. Thess. ii, 15-17, beginning, "Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught." Our Baptist brethren replied, and quoted Heb. xiii, 20, 21, in which is found a prayer in these words, "Now the God of peace . . . make you perfect in every good work."

The Local Committee on Entertainment has been very careful of the comfort of the Conference, providing as near as possible for every legitimate want. They covered the floor with matting to allay the noise, and the sky-lights with dark paper to exclude the sun's rays. The postoffice and telegraph offices, with a telephone office, are found in the building. Stenographers and typewriters are at the service of the delegates.

A glance over the roll of delegates to the Conference reveals the fact that many of the delegates belong to old and honored Methodist families. The very mention of some of the names is to call up the history of brave deeds, hard work, humble devotion to the Master and the church. But there are some new names upon the roll which are more of a prophecy of the future than a record of the past. There is the name of Rev. Angel Blanco, of Jalisco, Mexico. These sons of the South are coming to the Master. This is a new name recently appeared in the annals of Protestantism. Then there is the name of Roshida Ruohiro, of Japan. Behold the pagans are seeking the Savior! The names of the Latins and the Celestials will increase on our rolls.

Dr. Frank Richardson made one of the best speeches on the question of limiting the presiding elder's term of service that has been made at this Conference thus far. He paid his respects to the presiding elders, speaking of them as "the beloved." He spoke of the weakness of human nature and the subtle influence of power. As he spoke he swept the audience with his eye, and marked the large number of presiding elders among his hearers. He then paid his respects to the Bishops. There was no tone of censure in his voice, no trace of fault-finding. He said that the Bishops had backbone. Turning his eye upon the episcopal bench, he continued, "Some of them, what shall I call it?—well, they are Clevelandish, but still they find it hard to put the beloveds out."

A glance over the Conference reveals the fact that there are a number of large men in attendance. In a seat almost in front of the presiding Bishop's is Dr. C. G. Andrews, of the Mississippi Conference, who stands head and shoulders above his brethren. Just a little to the right, and a little further back, is Rev. J. S. Oakley, of the North Mississippi Conference, another man of great stature. President Jas. H. Carlisle, of Wofford College, a member of the South Carolina delegation, is another large man. Dr. Carlisle is a layman, and most eminent among the educators of our church and the land. Another large man of note in the church is E. W. Cole, of Nashville, Tenn. He frequently occupies a seat near the reporters' table, giving strict attention to matters under discussion. Rev. C. W. Byrd, of Asheville, N. C., a member of the Western North Carolina Conference, is also of sufficient proportions to be termed a big man. And not to be forgotten is James Campbell, of Waco, Texas, the biggest man in the Conference for height. All these are more notable for qualities of mind and heart than of body, though in the latter they are exceptional.

The city of Baltimore is largely connected with Methodist history. The present is a right faithful child of the past. Everywhere one turns he finds some mark of Methodism. Even in the busy marts of commercial life, tableted upon men, are the memorials of the Methodist home. Everywhere throughout the city are to be seen churches and chapels built by the industry of Methodist hands, and filled on the Sabbath by Methodist people. Governor Lowndes said in his address of welcome at the opening of the Conference, that a large majority of his constituents were Methodist. The other day I was walking down German street, looking at the great buildings devoted to the arts of commerce, and, without looking for it, I discovered, on the side of a great banking-house, the tablet marking the site of the old Lovely Lane Meeting-house. The tablet of bronze is a memorial, but the higher compliment to the old meeting-house, and the people who build it, is the quiet which reigns on that street on Sunday. I went of set purpose to Mt. Olivet Cemetery to see the Methodist plot of ground there. On the north side of the cemetery, which contains about thirty acres, is a plot of ground not exceeding 40x100 feet, which belongs to the Methodist Church. In this bit of ground rest the ashes of four of our Bishops—Francis Asbury, Enoch George, John Emory, and Beverly Waugh. Three of these lie side by side near the center of the plot. Bishop Waugh lies beside his wife in the southwestern corner. The remains of Strawbridge, the builder of the first Methodist Meeting house in America, rest in that lot. Lessie Lee, the pioneer of New England Methodism, was buried there. In all there are about thirty ministers buried in that little space—enough to make a Conference. About them, on the slopes, are the sleeping congregations. These noble pioneer preachers wrought well; they laid the foundations deep and secure. The years have justified their work.

Dr. Jno. F. Ganoher, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has lately returned from a visit to India, is showing a very fraternal spirit to the Conference. He was on the floor during the first day's session, and mingled for some time with the friends whom he made at Memphis four years ago. Bishop E. R. Hendrix and Bishop and Mrs. O. P. Fitzgerald are guests at his hospitable home. For the time they will forget all about sectional lines, and think only of their inheritance in a common Methodism.—The Daily Advocate.

Among the visitors on the platform on Saturday was the Rev. Wm. H. Milburn, D. D., chaplain of the United States Senate. It has been a long time since Dr. Milburn first came to prominence in the public eye. His "Rifle, Axe, and Saddle-bags," was the delight of our youth. It may not be known that he was once, and for several years, a member of the Alabama Conference, and stationed in Mobile. Under all circumstances he has been the good friend of Southern Methodism, never forgetting the associations of other days. Though now well advanced in years, he appears to be in perfect health.—The Daily Advocate.

NOTES.

Rev. J. T. Sawyer left last week for Baltimore.

Rev. J. M. Alford, a student of Millsaps College, was a visitor to our office last week.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, the pastor at Marksville, La., will soon begin work on a church.

Rev. N. B. Harrison, of the Mississippi Conference, is a visitor to the General Conference.

Rev. B. F. Jones, of Brookhaven, Miss., called to see us Friday. He has been assisting Rev. W. H. Huntley, of Lumberton, in a meeting.

The Epworth League at Holly Springs, Miss., is moving to the front. Let our leaguers read the notes that Bro. Shipman writes concerning his young people.

A good meeting, conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, has been in progress at Shaw, Miss. It was a great revival. Much interest was manifested, and great good was done.

The class meetings held in the Carondelet Street Church every Friday evening, with Mr. H. N. Harrison as leader, have proved to be very spiritual, and those in attendance have derived much benefit both from the talks of the leader and the members of the class.

The Union League of New Orleans, under the presidency of Rev. G. D. Parker, is very flourishing. With so live and enthusiastic a leader, it could not be otherwise. So much interest does he take in the work that the meetings are better attended than heretofore, and more zeal is manifested among our leaguers.

It is with deep regret that we chronicle the death of Dr. Mark. S. Andrews, presiding elder of the Mobile district. He died on Saturday morning, May 14, in the city of Mobile. The church has lost one of its foremost men. He will be sadly missed by his comrades. We tender to the family our sympathy in this hour of bereavement.

Port Gibson Female College—Mrs. M. H. Meek and Miss W. L. Park, co-principals—closes June 14. Rev. Fitzgerald S. Parker, of Lake Providence, will preach the commencement sermon. Rev. E. H. Monnger, of Vicksburg, will deliver address on presentation of medals. The school has had an unusually prosperous year, and is on excellent footing, financially.

We are sorry to learn of the accident which happened to Rev. W. S. Shipman, pastor of our church in Holly Springs. After ably filling his pulpit at the morning service, as he was descending the stairs, he fell and badly hurt his left arm, without breaking a bone. We hope that he will soon be able to mingle with his parishioners, with whom he is finding so much favor, and steadily building up Zion in that section of the country.

On last Friday night, at Camp Foster, the Epworth Leagues of the city held a meeting in the tent of the Young Men's Christian Association. The exercises were conducted by Revs. T. C. Carter and G. D. Parker. There was a good attendance of the soldiers. They seemed to enjoy the services ever so much, for very heartily did they join in the singing, and they paid close attention to the talks that were given. Rev. T. C. Carter made a touching and stirring speech, which made a deep impression upon the soldier boys. A few leaguers were found among them, to the surprise and gladness of the city leaguers. A handshake, to be sure, was given them.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

A PLEA.

At our last interstate convention of the Y. M. C. A. of Mississippi and Louisiana, the Centenary College Association was the only one to report a missionary library, and that consisted of only twelve volumes. We desire to increase that number. To instill the spirit of giving for missions in our young men, we must give them missionary literature to read, and we ask our readers to help us. We don't want you to do it all, but merely to help. Centenary College boys give more than $100 annually for Christian work. We want to place at least $50 worth of missionary books in our library before commencement; so we make a plea to our alumni, to our preachers, to our laymen, to anyone who may read this. Give us 50 cents, $1, or any amount will be gratefully received. Some of you have books you have read and would like to give them. Even if they are not missionary books, they will be highly appreciated.

Brethren, don't neglect this petition, but let us hear from you at once. Send either books or subscriptions to D. F. TURNER, Chairman Missionary Com.
Jackson, La.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE LOUISIANA MINISTERIAL BROTHERHOOD.

DEAR BRETHREN: We have to record the death of another member of our Brotherhood. Bro. Foust died on April 26. All our members should call the attention of their charges to this worthy object, and get as many laymen to give one dollar, as honorary members, to this fund as possible, which will be sent to Sister Foust, who is left with several small children, none of whom are old enough to assist toward earning their support. All old friends of Bro. Foust can show their love for him by sending to me a small contribution toward the help of his widow and orphaned children.

Dear brethren, do all you can for our sister, and remit me at the same time Assessment No. 4 (the sum of five dollars), due as a member of the Brotherhood. I have already forwarded a check to Sister Foust, but hope to be able to send another goodly amount through the generosity of our laymen.

My new address is 1114 Carrollton avenue. S. S. KEENER,
Sec. and Treas. La. Min. Brotherhood.

GREAT REVIVAL.

We have just closed a great meeting at Shaw. The whole town was deeply stirred. The stores closed in the day and great crowds attended the services. Many grown people were converted and joined the church. If Bro. "Gilderoy" had been there, he would have seen seekers with tearful eyes and mourners converted at the mourners' bench. Bro. E. S. Lewis, the pastor, is doing a great work at this place. He is one of our most promising young men. We spent eight happy days with Bro. Lewis, his lovely family and good people. Shaw was never so happy as now.

W. M. MCINTOSH.

HOLLY SPRINGS EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Holly Springs Epworth League, though not represented in the last State Conference, falls in line, and takes a liberal share of the obligations assumed by that body at that meeting, paying $10 of the $12 assumed; also raised $16.25 for the purpose of clothing an orphan at the State Orphanage. They were but a few moments in deciding how they would raise the money. Go down in our pockets and get the Lord's money. They went, and in a short time they had $1.25 more than they asked for. I most heartily commend this way to all our Leagues. Pay the Lord his dues, and we will have no cause to resort to doubtful methods. Allow me, dear leaguers, to insist on the Holly Springs Epworth League's methods of raising your money. W. S. SHIPMAN.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors in Seashore District, Mississippi Conference—

I take grateful pleasure in telling you that my health is slowly improving. C. A. POWELL.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

The action of the recent State Conference of Epworth Leagues in Mississippi asking provision for this department in the ADVOCATE looked to the co-operation of the Louisiana Leagues and the appointment by them of an associate editor.

If the Louisiana State Conference of Epworth Leagues failed to appoint an associate editor, we hope that the State president will forthwith appoint one.

Next year the Louisiana Leagues will appoint the editor, and the Mississippi Leagues the associate editor—thus we proposed to alternate.

We call attention of the leaguers to "Pierson's Miracles of Missions" (first series) as being a capital textbook on missions. It can be had of Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn., for twenty-five cents.

So far as we are able to determine, there are about 150 Leagues in Mississippi with a membership approaching 5000. With this fact in view, it seems that it ought to be an easy matter to raise the $1200 pledged at Meridian.

Rev. A. F. Watkins, ex president of the Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues, was chosen last week as second assistant secretary of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in session in the city of Baltimore.

Among the names comprising the Standing Committee on Epworth Leagues at the General Conference we note the following brethren from Louisiana and Mississippi: Revs. Franklin N. Parker, A. F. Watkins, and T. W. Lewis.

There ought to be several copies of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in every League. Write to Rev. J. W. McLanrin, 512 Camp street, New Orleans, La., for special rates, and let us use this department in the ADVOCATE for all it is worth to the Leagues in Mississippi and Louisiana.

It is not intended that this column shall be filled with editorial dictatorials, but rather with items of interest from the various Leagues, that it may be mutually helpful. Ask questions, if you wish, and if we can not answer, we will publish and ask those who are wiser to furnish the necessary information.

We call attention of all the Leagues in Mississippi to the fact that all amounts pledged, and which have been or shall hereafter be collected for the Orphans' Home and the support of a single missionary (as per amount specified at Meridian), must be sent to the State treasurer, Miss Victoria Thompson, Tupelo, Miss.

From the Daily Advocate we learn that much has already been said and done in the General Conference looking to the future work of the Epworth League. It is probable that the E a will be enlarged and continued under the direction of an editor to be elected, who shall also act as general secretary. Authority will doubtless be given to employ office assistants, and thus lighten this part of the work.

At the request of State President Randolph we herewith append list of district secretaries for Mississippi:

Columbus district, Miss Annie Scales, Macon; Aberdeen district, S. J. High, Tupelo; Corinth district, Miss Inez Young, Corinth; Holly Springs district, Rev. B. P. Jaco, Mount Pleasant; Sardis district, Miss Stella Boothe, Sardis; Greenville district, Dr. J. B. Pease, Jr., Gunnison; Winona district, Rev. H. T. Cunningham, Carrollton; Grenada district, J. C. Wilson, Grenada; Durant district, H. F. Jones, Louisville; Meridian district, Dr. Rosa Wiss, Meridian; Jackson district, D. Gordon Patton, Jackson; Vicksburg district, Miss Lizzie Buell, Vicksburg; Forest district, Miss Willie Wilkins, Lake; Seashore district, W. B. Jones, Hattiesburg; Brookhaven district, Rev. J. M. Morse, McComb City; Natchez district, Miss Anna Montgomery, Natchez.

NOTICE.

The Union Epworth League will hold a service at the Fair Grounds, in the Y. M. C. A. tent, Thursday, May 19, 1898, at 7:30 P. M. All leaguers are cordially invited.

One of the daughters of ex United States Senator Ingalls, who is very proud of her father, recently attended a semi-public dance. An amusing incident took place, which the Kansas City Times tells as follows: "In the course of the evening she was approached by an Atchison young man, the son of a grocery-keeper, who had known her from infancy, though not intimately. He asked her for a dance, when she replied: 'I think you are the son of our grocery-keeper, but I infer that you do not know me. I am the daughter of the Hon. John J. Ingalls.' 'Ingalls? Ingalls?' musingly inquired the young grocery man; 'where have I heard that name before? Oh, yes, I remember now. Your father was the man who reported the Corbett-Fitzsimmons prize fight.'"—St. Louis Advocate.

A NEW BOOK.

THE HOME OF THE BIBLE: WHAT I SAW AND HEARD IN PALESTINE. By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 446 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day; how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

A PRAYER AND ITS ANSWER.

THE PRAYER.

"Give her, I pray, all good;
Bid all the buds of promise grow
To perfect flowers of happiness,
Where'er her feet may go.
Bid Faith's bright shield, and Love's strong arm,
Protect her from all coming harm.

"Lest there should be some other thing,
Better than all the rest,
Which I have failed to ask," I said,
"Give her the very best,
Whatever that to thee may seem,
Of all that I can ask or dream."

THE ANSWER.

She lies before me, still and pale:
The roses that I prayed
Might bloom along her path of life,
Are on her bosom laid;
Crowned with a strange, rapt calm she lies,
Like one made dumb by sweet surprise.

"The best that I could ask or dream;"
This was my prayer, and now
That she is wrapped in sweet repose
With God's peace on her brow,
I wonder, sobbing, sore dismayed
If this is that for which I prayed.

TALKS TO BOYS.

BY ARCHER BROWN

USE AND ABUSE OF TIME.

Time is the stuff life is made of, says Benjamin Franklin. Every man has exactly the same amount of it in a year. One improves it and reaps great results. Another wastes it and reaps failure. The first class they call lucky; the second, unfortunate. The unfortunates form the mass of mankind, it should be noted.

To use time aright, have a system. Shape everything to it. Divide the twenty-four hours between work, recreation, sleep, and mental culture, according to a scheme that suits your judgment and circumstances. Then make things go that way. The scheme will quickly go to pieces unless backed by persistent purpose.

When you work, work. Put the whole mind and heart in it. Know nothing else. Do everything the very best. Distance everybody about you. This will not be hard, for the other fellows are not trying much. Master details and difficulties. Be always ready for the next step up. If a book-keeper, be an expert. If a machinist, know more than the boss. If an office boy, surprise the employer by model work. If in school, go to the head and stay there. All this is easy when the habit of conquering takes possession. It is wholesome in this connection to read what men have accomplished who have once learned the art of redeeming the time. Study the causes of the success of Benjamin Franklin, of Lincoln, of Garfield, of Sir Michael Faraday, of Agassiz, of Edison. Learn the might of minutes. "Every day is a little life, and our whole life is a day repeated. Those that dare lose a day are dangerously prodigal; those that dare misspend it, desperate." Emerson says "the creation of a thousand forests is in one acorn."

Sound and wholesome recreation is important in our scheme; but in this age of athletic frenzy the danger of neglect on that line is not excessive. The real fact is that athletic sports are educating the muscles too often at the expense of the brains.

It is the mind work that differentiates you from the herd. Mental culture calls for study carefully planned, regular, persistent. One or two hours a day, aiming at some distinct object, mastering what you learn, adding little by little, like a miser to his store, will in a few years make of you a broad, educated man, no matter what your schooling.

To abuse time, have no system. Chance everything. Do your work indifferently. Growl if too much is asked. Hunt for an easy job. Change often. Dodge obstacles. Always come a little short of the standard. Fritter away in silly things the few golden moments left for self-culture. Then you will not crowd anybody very hard in the contest for leadership.

Time abused is bad luck.—New York Advocate.

Disease

can be driven in or driven out. Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla drives disease out of the blood. Many medicines suppress disease—cover it but don't cure it. Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures all diseases originating in impure blood by purifying the blood itself. Foul blood makes a foul body. Make the blood pure and the body will be sound. Through the blood Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures eczema, tetter, boils, eruptions, humors, rheumatism, and all scrofulous diseases.

"Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me by my physician as a blood purifier. When I began taking it I had risings or boils all over my body, but one bottle cured me. I consider Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla the best blood medicine made."—BONNER CRAFT, Wesson, Miss.

WRONG TURNS IN MARRIAGE.

A wrong turning which many a girl takes is when she comes to dispose of her affections. She sets her heart on someone who is not worthy—perhaps he has a bad character, perhaps only a weak one. She loves, she marries, and then walks in sadness for the rest of her days.

Now, it is often said that marriage is a lottery, and that when you put your hand into the lucky bag you sometimes draw out a prize, and sometimes not. Don't believe it. It is no more a lottery than any other incident of life.

Look at Alice. Before she made any promises she looked at the subject all around, wisely resolved to love only one deserving of being loved, and when she married her own good sense, backed up by a chorus of friends, said she had formed an alliance with a man who was prudent, industrious, saving, and everything else that a good husband ought to be. And from Land's End to John O'Groat's you won't find a happier couple.

Her schoolmate, Clara, on the other hand, disregarded the counsel of all who were interested in her welfare, and shut her own eyes, refusing to see that an impecunious lover means an impecunious husband, and an idle lover an idle husband, and that frivolity and unsteadiness will certainly not be transformed into all the virtues by a man merely saying, "With this ring I thee wed." Everyone knows what happened. The bailiffs were in the house before the honeymoon was well over, the husband out of a situation, and Clara in tears sitting looking at him from the other side of an empty fireplace.

The wrong turning in marriage is often one that leads out of a wrong turning in choosing our acquaintances. And for that reason, if for no other, girls should be much on their guard as to those with whom they associate. There is a natural craving in us all for society; but better live like Robinson Crusoe, on a desert island, than go with those whose influence is not to be for our good. —Girl's Own Paper.

SUGGESTION FOR MOTHERS.

A mother who could hear in the next room every morning her small son of nine talking to himself as he spelled out the words and added the figures, crosswise, up and down, and to every possible way, of a large calendar which hung directly in front of his bed, bethought herself of furnishing him better occupation. She took down the calendar and put up in its place a good print of the Madonna della Seggiola, this, with no word to him of the change. The next morning the little one's voice was stilled, but a noiseless peep into the room showed his eyes glued raptuously to the picture, while about his lips the hint of a smile betrayed that his absorbing interest was a pleased one. Since then at intervals his morning picture is changed, not too frequently, for a child demands reiteration, until the boy has become a small connoisseur in famous paintings, and his occasional short visits to an art gallery are a great delight to him because of his matin studies. The first ten minutes of a child's day are a most valuable receptive period. The young brain is refreshed by sleep, unexcited by any of the day's occupations, eager for impressions and peculiarly responsive to their influence.—Evening Post.

How easy it is to tear a piece of paper along the line in which it has originally been folded! How easy it is for a second temptation to overcome when the first has been yielded to! A sin that has once gained the victory over our moral nature has put a fold, as it were, in that nature, and destroyed its straightness and smoothness, so that when the same temptation comes a second time, it seeks the weak point which it had formerly made, and along that line of least resistance we are turned from our righteous principles and strong resolution. —Hugh Macmillan.

Hygiene.

ACTION OF ALCOHOL.

It has been demonstrated over and over again that alcohol destroys the nerve tissue. See how quickly one who is not hardened to its use loses the control of his brain by a little indulgence. It is no doubt true that it would be better for a man to get drunk occasionally than to become an habitual moderate drinker, for that leads to degeneration of tissue and ruins both health and intellect. Edward Smith's experiments show that alcohol diminishes the acuteness of all the senses. Dr. Ridge, of England, showed that a small dose of alcohol, such as half a small glass of wine, impaired feeling, vision, and sensibility to weight. . . Drs. Todd and Bowman state in their Physiological Anatomy that "Alcohol retards digestion by coagulating the pepsine, and thus interfering with its action." . . Sir William Roberts says: "Wines in even a small proportion, almost paralyze saliva, and thus have a highly inhibitory effect on gastric digestion. Beer and ale act in the same manner, retarding gastric digestion, especially of bread or farinaceous food, on which the masses so largely depend." . . Sir Henry Thompson said, "The great majority of people, at any age of either sex, will enjoy better health, both of body and mind, and will live longer without any alcoholic drink whatever." . . Dr. Hayes, the Arctic traveler, says that in Arctic countries "alcohol is, in almost any shape, not only completely useless, but positively injurious. I have known the most unpleasant consequences to result from the injudicious use of whisky for the purpose of temporary stimulation, and have also known strong, able-bodied men to have become utterly incapable of resisting cold in consequence of the long-continued use of alcoholic drinks." . . Stanley, the African traveler, gives very much the same evidence in regard to the use of alcoholic drinks while enduring the heats of Central Africa. . . Prof. Sidney Ringer says: "Experience plainly shows that for the healthy, alcohol is not a necessary nor even a useful article of diet. Varied, repeated and prolonged experience, and the testimony of many medical men, prove that troops endure fatigue and the extremes of climate better if alcohol is altogether abstained from. The experience of the celebrated Moscow campaign shows this, as also quite recently the Red River expedition. During arduous marches it has always been found that without alcohol the health of the men is exceptionally good, but as soon as spirits are allowed, disease breaks out. Modern trainers recognize the fact that the power of sustained exertion and resistance to fatigue is best promoted by abstaining from alcohol. . . Dr. William Pepper, among other things, says of the liquor habit, "Perfect health can not be enjoyed with even a moderate use, while it is certain that the highest possible health may be enjoyed without its use."

Dr. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich., in a series of carefully conducted experiments showed that alcohol not only impaired digestive activity, but also diminished brain and nerve sensibility, thus proving what has long been contended for, that alcohol lessens the power of the system to resist heat or cold, and therefore those who use more or less of alcohol are in so far less able to cope with extremes of temperature.

The habitual use of distilled liquors, wines and brandies injures the stomach, liver and kidneys, and in chronic alcoholism the changes in the brain structures are like those of very old age; the respiration suffers, catarrhs of the head and throat are induced, accumulation of fat takes place, also skin diseases, with sometimes the accompaniment of "nose painting."—Journal of Hygiene.

HARRIS—Mr. J. M. HARRIS was born in Warren county, Miss., Oct 28, 1853 and died April 17, 1898 He was the son of R. W. and Mary (Perkins) Harris. Mr. Harris was twice married—first to Miss Mollie Lindsey, of Vicksburg. A number of years after her death he married Miss Lucy Browne, of Yazoo county, who survives him.

The writer has known Mr. Harris intimately for sixteen years, and never have I known a more honorable, upright, and high-toned gentleman. His character was far above reproach. There was nothing in his life penurious or selfish. He loved his friends and his family with a devotion unsurpassed. We loved him; we could do no less. Truly, it could be said of him, "None knew him but to love him." He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and although not demonstrative in his religious life, he ever maintained the sweet spirit of Christianity; tender, kind, long-suffering, and charitable. Although afflicted in body for a number of years, he labored diligently to provide for those dependent upon him, a very liberal portion of which he gave to the support of the gospel and other charitable purposes. He was liberal toward every enterprise. He provided well for his family while living, and, dying, left them well cared for.

Mr. Harris was a kind and indulgent husband, a devoted father and son, and a warm friend. He leaves an aged father, one sister, three sons, one little daughter and a widow to mourn their irreparable loss. Mr. Harris was an honor to his family and a blessing to the community in which he lived. Our loss will long be felt. We deeply sympathize with the widow and children and sorrowing ones. We hope to meet him again in "That land whose fields are ever vernal,

Where nothing beautiful can ever fade,
But blooms for aye eternal."

(MRS.) E. C. STEVENSON.

CHANEY—NANNIE E. CHANEY, oldest daughter of W. R. Chaney and S. J. Tillery, was born at her grandfather's, in St. Helena parish, Sept 27, 1876 and died at her father's home in East Feliciana, Jan. 14, 1898 She joined the M. E. Church at Pipkin's Chapel in the Summer of 1893 under the ministry of Rev. N. J. Roberts, and continued a consistent member till her death.

We think it a little more than we can bear, and there is a tone of rebellion in our voices when we speak of her untimely death; yet we are forced to admit that the same divine hand which gave her to us, and endowed her with such wonderful gifts of lovableness, hath in a like manner seen fit to deprive us of that which we prized so highly; and when we consider how He makes the flowers to grow beautiful and more beautiful, and at the time when it would seem that we could not live without them, He sends the blight of Winter, and, behold! we are left desolate. There comes a renewed hope that as in like manner the flowers return fairer than ever when Winter is over, so will we grow into newness of life on the glad morning of an eternal day, and stay in the presence of those we love continually.

Hoping for a dawn beyond the night, and longing for another life by faith in the promise forever warm from Nature's lips, that says, disguised as death, alone faithful, we try to be patient in our sorrow. It is all so mysterious, and when we ask for an explanation, the angel of silence stands by the grave of our beloved dead and points with the finger of love to the azure dome, but never speaks, and knowing that "We never had a sorrow but what the dear Lord chose,

We send the coming tears back with the whispered words, He knows."

EFFIE B. HIGGINBOTHAM.

GALE—"Harry is dead," they said, and instantly we saw him, his face radiant with joy, saying, "I feel like I am on the mountain with Jesus by my side."

HARRISON HURST GALE was born July 9, 1869, in Yazoo county, Miss.; converted and joined the church under his father's (Rev. E. S. Gale) ministry when he was six years old, and lived a consistent Christian for some time. He grew cold, but was reclaimed under preaching of Rev. B. S. Rayner in Summer of 1896, and in August, 1897, professed sanctification during revival services conducted by M. B. Baker. Living the religion he professed, Harry was a happy Christian. As a son, he was dutiful, obedient, willing. Always courteous, he had a smile for everyone. His heart was in his father's work, often speaking of the circuit as "our work," and he delighted to assist in public and family worship. Life-long afflictions denied many privileges, but drew him more closely into his parents' hearts and intensified the sweetness of his disposition, which was manifested to the last, every attention being received with "Thank you." While suffering greatly his mother asked if he loved Jesus. He replied unhesitatingly "Yes, if I die now, I will go straight to heaven. Jesus is with me now." To his father he said "I am trusting Jesus and confiding in his word." He left us to join the ransomed ones April 23, 1898. Well, our dear pastor and his wife rejoice in the faith that says, "Not dead, but gone before," human love cries out, "O, my son! my son!" May the other brothers, for whom Harry was so anxious, see the hand of God in this affliction!

SEATON Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father in his infinite love and wisdom, to call us to himself our beloved sister and fellow-worker, Mrs. HATTIE B. SEATON; therefore, be it Resolved, By the Sunday-school of the Carondelet Street M. E. Church, South, that while bowing in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we desire to put upon record our deep sense of loss in the taking away of a worker faithful and constant in the discharge of every duty. Her regular attendance at Sunday-school and affectionate interest in her class were to us sources of inspiration and ingentives to more faithful service. For over twenty five years she had been a teacher in our Sunday-school, and now that she is no longer with us, her work still abides in the many hearts that through the Holy Spirit's power she has influenced for God and his Christ.

Resolved, To her husband and dear ones we extend our truest sympathy, and to God we offer our prayers that this affliction may be sanctified to their good, and that we may all so live that we may at last be accounted worthy to join her in the realms above.

Respectfully submitted.

NEAL—STEVAN A. NEAL was born in Amite county, Miss., Feb. 21, 1817; came with his parents to Caldwell parish in early childhood; was married to Miss. Emeline Nugent on the eleventh of October, 1855; died in peace on the fifteenth day of April, 1898. The date of his conversion is not remembered. He was converted some forty years ago under Bro. Staten, and united with the M. E. Church, South, and from then until his death was faithful to God and his church. His home was a delightful resting-place for the weary itinerant, where he found a hearty welcome and fellowship of the saints. His life was simple and true. He leaves a wife and six children mourning their loss, while hosts of friends and other kindred unite in tearful tribute to his memory. His dying testimony was that he had nothing to fear; that all was well with him, and as gently as a zephyr breathes his spirit took its flight. We sang out of full heart as we stood round his coffin,

"Dust, to thy narrow house beneath!
Soul, to thy place on high!
They that have seen thy look in death,
No more may fear to die," and committed his body to the tomb.

W. E. AKIN, Pastor.

MUNHOLLAND—MOSES MARLEY MUNHOLLAND was born in Yazoo county, Miss., April 17, 1835, and died at Delhi, La., April 17, 1898. He joined the Baptist Church in 1856, and remained a consistent member of that church until his death. He contracted consumption some three years ago, which rendered him an invalid, but the end was hastened by the development of cancer on the face that caused him most excruciating pain, which he bore so patiently. When told by the physicians that they could do nothing for him, and that the end was only a matter of time, he was perfectly resigned. In talking to the writer he enumerated the loved ones on the other shore, and said he was even anxious to go. The parting with his wife and children was his only sorrow; but he committed them to the same God to whom he had so fully trusted his soul. He leaves only one brother—C. T. Munholland, of the Louisiana Conference. Wife, children, brother, friends, hear the word of God, "Be thou faithful until death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Only a little while and we will meet our loved one, never more to part again.

HENDERSON—We, the undersigned committee, appointed by the Quarterly Conference of the Coffeeville charge to draft resolutions on the death of J. P. HENDERSON, a member of said Quarterly Conference, and who departed this life March 23, 1898, submit the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, it has pleased God, in his providence, to remove from our midst our beloved friend and brother; And, whereas, We can only bow submissively to his will, recognizing that he doeth all things well, our hearts are deeply stricken by this dispensation of his providence; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Sunday-school and Epworth League of Gray Rock Church has lost one of its most zealous members, one always prompt in his attendance, and worked earnestly for their advancement; that we will miss his kind and genial face when we come together, and feel that his place can not be filled.

Resolved, That every member of the church and school and League sympathize with his family in this, their great bereavement, and would mingle our tears with theirs could that allay their grief, but know that time, the great healer of all wounds, is the only remedy for such sorrow.

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free stubborn women:—"Only two kinds of people never change their minds—fools and dead men." And you can't be either one.

To stiff-necked,

Change your mind, then, about the best way of washing; look into the matter carefully; lay aside prejudice; hold yourself open to enlightenment. The best way of washing is with Pearline. Ease, economy, safety, health, quickness—these are the arguments for Pearline washing. Every woman who wants these things can satisfy herself that this is so. 556

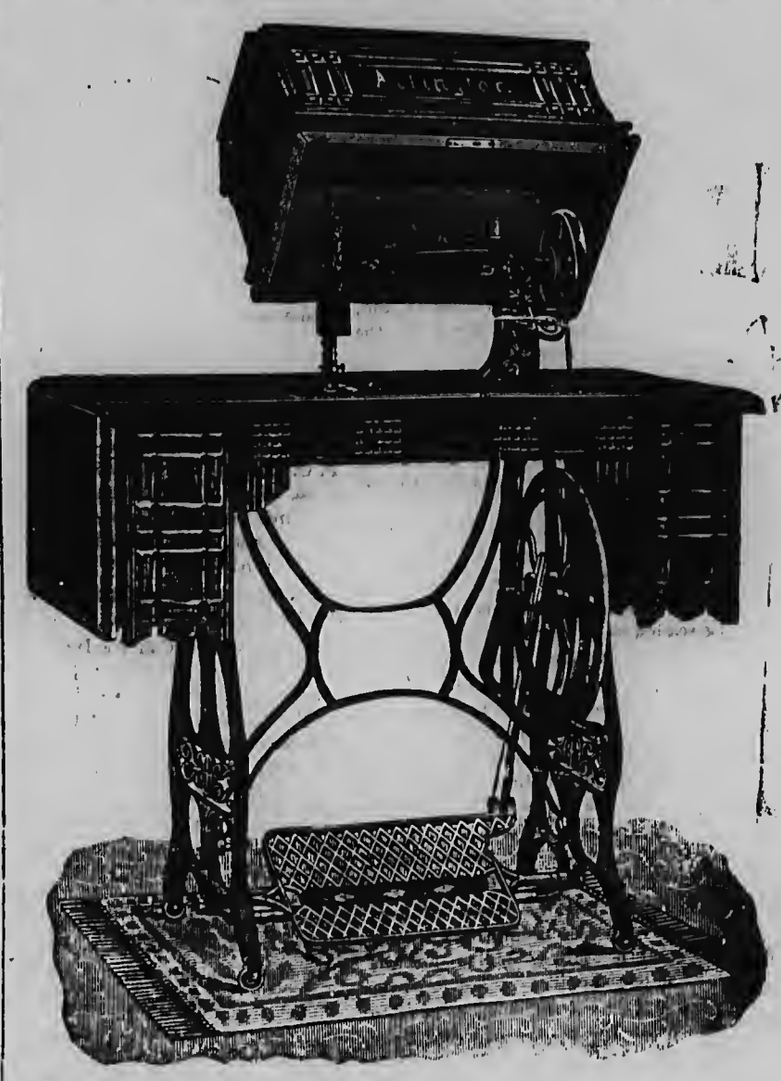
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel oyHinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The army has been concentrated at Tampa and Key West, and fully 50,000 men are ready to invade Cuba so soon as orders are issued to that effect.

Recruiting for south branches of the army is proceeding with the greatest rapidity, and in about one month there will be about two hundred thousand men equipped and ready for the field.

An order posted the other days and signed by Secretary Long, relating to the publication of news emanating from the Navy Department, has had the effect of considerably curtailing the supply of information that heretofore has been rather freely given out.

The attempt to land supplies for the insurgents from the transport "Gussie" appears to have failed, as Spanish troops, and not insurgents, were found at the place of landing agreed upon. This experiment demonstrates that the Spanish military authorities are more vigilant than was supposed.

All the interest in the reported war movements centers in the possible operations of the Spanish fleet. This formidable squadron has been reported for the past two days at the Island of Curacoa, a possession of the Dutch, near the north coast of Venezuela, and, perhaps, 350 miles due south of the Island of Santo Domingo.

Beyond the fact that Cervera's squadron was at Curacoa Sunday, nothing is known, and all the rest is conjecture. Sampson's whereabouts are not known probably even to the authorities at Washington, and since his ineffective attack on San Juan de Puerto Rico no specific report of his movements has been made known.

The Constitutional Convention closed its session on Friday morning, May 13, and the Louisiana State Legislature opened its sittings on May 16. Several members of the Convention will now sit in the Legislature. The governor did not send in a general message, as is usual on the assembling of the State lawmakers, the reason being that the chief duty of the present Legislature will be to provide for the enactment into laws of the Convention's ordinances.

On Friday last the House of Representatives passed unanimously a most important measure providing for the creation of an auxiliary naval force for patrolling the coast line from Maine to Texas. As the Senate is known to be favorable to the purposes of the bill, it is expected that it will pass that body almost immediately and become law. The measure provides for the enrollment of an auxiliary naval force for the period of one year, unless sooner discharged on the termination of the war, in such numbers as the President may judge necessary.

The results of operations during the past few days have been rather of a negative character. Several interesting military moves have been made, but none of them have been entirely successful. The resistance encountered by our ships has been more stubborn than formerly, and although our forces have suffered no defeats, they have achieved nothing of importance. The attempt to cut out three small Spanish gunboats in Cardenas harbor is admitted to have been a failure. It will not do to despise the resisting powers of the Spanish, and their courage never has been questioned. It is now definitely known that the city of San Juan, Porto Rico, has not capitulated, nor was it asked to capitulate. The forts at the entrance of the harbor were shelled for a couple of hours; but it does not appear that they were silenced.

Spain's fleet in the Caribbean sea is to be met by a squadron consisting of the armorclads of the United States in North Atlantic waters. This seems to be the intention of the Naval War Board, and preparations are being made to effect the junction of Rear Admiral Sampson's and the flying squadron, under the command of Commodore Schley, with all possible dispatch. If necessary, Commodore Schley will join Rear Admiral Sampson on the south coast of Cuba in order that the southwestern section of the American blockading squadron may be protected, and to place the American force in a strategic position to attack the Spanish fleet at whatever port it may appear. It is not necessary, nor would it be good policy, to attach the monitors to the combined fleet, and the probabilities are that these vessels will be stationed in front of Havana or at Southern ports for their protection in case the Spanish squadron should attempt to bombard a coast city.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

I have berries, grapes and peaches a year old, fresh as when picked. I use the California Cold Process; do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold; keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last year I sold directions to over 120 families in one week; anyone will pay a dollar for directions when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such, and feel confident anyone can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days. I will mail a sample of fruit and complete directions to any of your readers for nineteen two-cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the samples, postage, etc. I am going to begin work at once to catch the Spring trade. BRIGHT'S DISEASE
BUFFALO
LITHIA WATER
Rescues a Patient well nigh in Extremis.
Statement of Dr. A. M. PAINE, of WOONSOCKET, R. I.
"The almost specific power of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, whether drank hot or cold, according to the indications in the thoroughly established Uric Acid Diathesis as manifested in Gout, Dyspepsia, or Bright's Disease, has been fully demonstrated in many cases under my care, but in none more clearly and positively than that of Mrs. E. K. Handy, of Manville, R. I., at whose request I make this statement. She came under my care after having been for two years in declining health, apparently in an advanced stage of chronic Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. She was exceedingly pallid, with marked puffiness under the eyes, considerable swelling of the ankles at night, a general emaciation, evident Dyspeptic symptoms attended with nausea and occasional vomiting. Her failing strength, paroxysms of difficult breathing after slight exertion, her intense violent headaches, besides various other Uræmic phenomena, excited my gravest apprehension. Analysis of the urine, both chemical and microscopic, revealed the presence of an exceptionally large amount of albumen, fully one-half, of the urine in bulk, an abundance of large and small casts of Hyaline form, with wasted Epithelial cells, occasional blood casts, and a very marked reduction of normal solids. The case was one that in every way called for an exceedingly gloomy prognosis. She was put exclusively upon large draughts of hot BUFFALO LITHIA WATER. A decided change for the better was soon evident, and this improvement continued, with but few interruptions, until a permanent cure was effected. After a lapse of several years, Mrs. Handy continues in fine health.
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is for sale by Grocers and Druggists generally. Pamphlets on application.

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,
—THE—
"COMBINATION" BIBLE.
A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to May, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

A BIT OF LIFE.

BY CLARA J. DENTON.

A maiden sat within the door
And sang as many times before,
A man to daily toil passed by,
No love nor pleasure lit his eye,
But when he heard the merry song
He whistled as he went along.

A woman by the window wept
For one who in the churchyard slept,
But when upon her hearing fell
That tune she knew and loved so well,
The flood of burning tears was stayed,
And soon a song her lips essayed.

Her neighbor heard the tender strain,
And softly joined the sweet refrain.
Thus, all day long that one song bore
Its joyousness from door to door.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

NINTH DAY.

Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald presided over the Conference to-day. The Bishop is exceedingly mild and sweet-spirited, and seeks the highest good of the church, but a week of close application, and the prospect of an afternoon on the bay, made the members a little restless, and, in addition, the bad acoustics of the hall made the session an unsatisfactory one to a great many of the members.

Report No. 6 of the Committee on Episcopacy was taken up and adopted. This report provided for the salaries of the Bishops. Salaries and traveling expenses for those in active service, $3 600; for Bishop Keener, who has superannuated, $3,000. and for the widows of Bishops, $1,000.

There has been some electioneering through the press, personally and otherwise; hence the Conference felt called upon to enter its protest against electioneering for candidates for the episcopal office and for connectional offices. The protest was emphatic to the extent of 140 for and 17 against. Some one in the audience remarked at the close of the negative vote, "And are there but seventeen candidates here?"

A resolution was passed appointing Monday, May 16, a day of fasting and prayer for the members of the Conference. The object of this is to invoke the presence and aid of the Holy Spirit in the work of selecting Bishops and connectional officers. The resolution was adopted by a strong majority, and I think this action fairly represents the spirit of the Conference. It is false to suppose that all, or even a majority, of those who come to sufficient eminence to occupy the seat of ecclesiastical law makers are self-seeking place hunters. I believe the Conference would refuse to support a man known to be seeking a place.

The report of the Board of Education was taken up, and several changes made in the existing law. Henceforth seven, instead of nine, members will constitute a quorum at an annual meeting of the Board. The recording secretary will also hold the office of treasurer of the Board. Assessments for the General Board will henceforth be combined with the Conference assessment for education, and the amount collected shall be prorated.

The amended Paragraph 412 reads as follows: "The Board shall, through its members, agents, and the Boards of Education of the Annual Conferences, seek to increase endowments and otherwise to strengthen our institutions in harmony with the general educational policy of the church; to correlate existing institutions and to originate new ones where they can be judiciously established and maintained; but, in so doing, the Board shall not create any debt beyond resources actually in hand and applicable to such purposes."

The following points are to be covered in a written report presented to the third Quarterly Conference by the preachers in charge: "Has the sermon on Christian education been preached in every congregation? Has Children's Day been observed? Has Education Day been observed? Has the educational collection been taken? What student from the charge are attending our church schools, and what are attending other schools?"

The law further provides that a commission of ten practical educators shall be appointed by the college of Bishops. This commission shall prescribe the minimum requirement for the A. B. degree in the colleges belonging to the church, and also the minimum requirement for admission into the Freshman class. The commission shall meet at least once in every four years. According to the standard fixed by this commission shall all the schools of the church be classified.

Another important piece of legislation was brought forth by the Committee on Revisals in Report No. 2, as follows: "Par. 68, Ans. 10—Let every Annual Conference appoint a Committee on Admissions, who shall enquire into the character and adaptation to the itinerancy of all applicants for admission on trial, readmission, and admission from other churches." The report of this committee can be overruled by a two-third majority vote of the Conference.

The most important work of the day is that of providing for an educational standard, and for examination of applicants' character behind closed doors.

TENTH DAY.

The Conference assembled at the appointed hour, but the morning rain kept away all of the visitors and many of the delegates from the opening exercises. Bishop Granbery presided.

A resolution was passed authorizing the Bishops to take all necessary steps to have the church properly represented in the Ecumenical Council of Methodism in 1901.

Report No. 4 of the Committee on Sunday-schools was adopted, the effect of which is to require the preacher to organize every Sunday-school in his charge into a missionary society, auxiliary to the Board of Missions.

A resolution was adopted endorsing the temperance and other benevolent work of the W. C. T. U. The discussion of the report was very spirited, and indicated very clearly that the Conference had no mind to entangle itself in alliances with out side organizations.

For some days the official administration of Bishop Wilson has been under consideration, the point of contention being a violation of the spirit of the law, though not of the letter. The case is that of Rev. Jno. Mathews, D. D., of St. Louis, who had served out a term of four years, and was given a nominal appointment as Sunday-school agent in the St. Louis Conference, but, in fact, was continued in the former pastorate. Report No. 6 of the Committee on Episcopacy cleared up the matter, on technicalities, to the satisfaction of the committee and a majority of the Conference. There were several persons sitting in the immediate vicinity of the reporters' table who expressed themselves as strongly opposing the action of the Conference.

Fifty years ago our church determined to send two missionaries to China. The men went, the encouragement was small, the opportunities slight, the results meagre. But fifty years have witnessed great changes. China has changed, the church has changed, methods have changed. May 16 was set apart for the celebration of the jubilee. Notwithstanding the rain and hail a little while before, a large audience greeted the speakers. Bishop Wilson presided over the meeting, and delivered the opening address. The Bishop was at high water mark. He is heart and hand in the mission work of the church.

Dr. Y. J. Allen then addressed the audience. Dr. Allen has for forty years been at work in that far-off land. He has stood by the work through many trying circumstances, not the least of which was the five long years of the Civil War, when no word went to him from the home church, or even friends. The whole strength of his great life has been delivered upon the barricades of heathenism. Dr. Allen is thoroughly acquainted with the life, customs, and inner feelings of the Chinese.

Dr. Parker made the closing address of the evening. The Doctor spoke of the magnitude of the work, the serious difficulties to be overcome, and the indisposition of the church at home. Dr. Parker made a strong appeal for more men and better facilities in that great empire of the East. Bro. Parker urged upon his hearers the necessity of more real prayer for missions by the home church. He thinks that all our deliberations have too much of the metallic clink of the dollar. It is the spirit of prayer for missions that would bless Chinese work and the church at home. Dr. Parker is a man of marked ability, evidently a close student of the situation in China. It was of gratitude that his wife was well enough for him to attend the jubilee, and tell of his work in China.

ELEVENTH DAY.

By vote of Conference the day was set apart for the election of Bishops, and immediately thereafter the election of other connectional officers. The entire time was taken up with the election of Bishops. Bishop Wilson, in announcing the order of the day, called the attention of the Conference to the fact that it was the custom of the Conference, in entering upon such a responsible duty, to first engage in prayer. Rev. J. C. Simmons, of California, led the prayer. The Bishop then directed that two names should be placed on each ballot, and that, according to the resolution of the Conference, the chairman of each delegation collect the ballots of his delegation and count them into the hat upon the call of his Conference. In the first ballot Dr. Hoss led, receiving 102; Dr. Morrison, 101; Dr. Candler, 100. One hundred and twenty-seven were necessary to elect. On the second ballot Dr. Candler received 148; Dr. Morrison, 140; Dr. Hoss, 129. In this 128 were necessary to elect. Three men had received a clear majority, due to the method of voting, when only two were intended. There were sundry efforts to get the Conference to change the order whereby the order directing the election of two Bishops might be changed, so as to provide for three, but all to no avail. Drs. Candler and Morrison were declared elected, as we announced last week in the ADVOCATE.

TWELFTH DAY.

By order of Conference, beginning at ten o'clock and continuing until 11:30 A. M., the order of the day was the election of connectional officers. The first in order was editor of the Christian Advocate, Nashville. On the first ballot Dr. E. E. Hoss was elected almost unanimously, receiving 220 votes out of 241 cast.

Secretary of the Board of Church Extension was the next in the list. The remainder of the time was devoted to this election, with no result.

At 11:30 Rev. W. T. Davison, fraternal delegate from the British Wesleyan Conference, England, delivered his fraternal address. The address was a splendid effort, and is worthy to take its place with the fraternal address of Rev. J. Bowman Stephens, of the same ecclesiastical organization, delivered four years ago at Memphis.

The evening hour was set apart to hear the two fraternal delegates from the M. E. Church. The large hall was well filled with eager listeners. Rev. Joseph F. Berry, D. D., of the Detroit Conference, and editor of the Epworth Herald, delivered the opening address. He took a retrospective glance at Methodism as an introduction to his address, and gave his attention to Methodism of the twentieth century. There were no wild imaginings. He called attention to the fact that if Methodism is to influence the coming century as it has the century that is just closing, it must be doctrinal, it must be evangelistic. The Methodist preacher and the evangelist must be identical. It must be socialistic, as Wesley was; it must make ceaseless war on the liquor traffic and impurity; it must rise to the highest demands in educational matters; it must learn a new lesson in giving; it must still have the heart experience of religion. The leader must be high-minded, broad in views, and humble in heart. The address was received with applause; the suggestions of unity well received.

The second speaker was Hon. Jonathan P. Dollinger, a member of Congress from Iowa. The speaker captivated his audience from the very first. He spoke of the humble circuit rider and his self-sacrificing wife, whose salary was almost always meagre, and always in arrears, as those to whom Methodism owed much of her prosperity. He touched the question of the division of the church, and spoke of it as providential, referring to the fact that in no other way was it possible for the Methodist Church to continue her work in the South. He called attention to the fact that the doctrine and polity of the church had continued the same. This he interpreted to be the work of God, gathering assuredly that God meant to bring the two branches together again. He spoke of the church's influence upon the national life. The address was frequently applauded.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

The day was given to the election of connectional officers. Dr. P. H. Whisner, of the Baltimore Conference, was elected Church Extension Secretary. Dr. Whisner is a man of marked ability, and has been a member of the Board of Church Extension for several years, and is, in consequence, prepared to take up the important work Dr. Morton laid down.

Dr. W. R. Lambuth and Rev. J. H. Pritchett were elected Missionary Secretaries. Dr. Lambuth is well known to all our people, having served as missionary in China, and since then as Missionary Secretary. Dr. J. H. is presiding elder of the Gallatin district, Missouri. He was at one time connected with the educational work of his Conference. He is an able man, and will make a worthy successor of Dr. H. C. Morrison.

The present Book Agents were sent to continue their work for four years more. Our people can, therefore, send their orders to Barbee & Smith as in the past.

The time occupied by the teller in counting the ballots was used by the Conference in filling the calendar with work for the remaining days of the session. With what is now on the calendar and what is in the committee, the indications are that the session will be a long one.

The afternoon was given to the ordination of the Bishops elect. Bishop A. W. Wilson preached the sermon. Bishop Keener, aided by others on the platform, then ordained Rev. W. A. Candler and Rev. H. C. Morrison, Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

FOURTEENTH DAY.

The Conference proceeded with the elections. Rev. Jas. Atkins, the present Sunday-school editor, was elected, receiving 205 votes out of the 207 cast. Rev. H. M. DuBose was on the fourth ballot elected Epworth League editor. Rev. J. J. Tigert, D. D., was elected Book Editor and editor of the Methodist Review.

The resolutions presented by the Committee on Fraternal Delegates and Fraternal Correspondence were adopted:

Resolved, 1. That we have heard with great pleasure the addresses of the Rev. Dr. W. S. Griffin, of the Methodist Church in Canada, and of the Rev. Dr. W. T. Davison, of the British Wesleyan Conference.

2 That we express herewith our high appreciation of the fraternal addresses of the Rev. Dr. J F. Berry and of the Hon. J. P. Dolliver, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

3. That we cordially reciprocate the sentiments of Christian greeting so admirably expressed by these honored and worthy representatives of the great church with which they are connected.

4. That the Bishops be requested to appoint fraternal messengers to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Church in Canada; also that they be requested to appoint one of the Bishops to convey our greetings to the Wesleyan Methodist Conference.

5. That the college of Bishops be authorized and requested to take all necessary steps looking to our participation in and representation at the Ecumenical Conference, to be held in London in 1901, and that they include in the list of representatives to that body all the Bishops from our church who may be able to attend the Conference.

The following report of the Committee on Missions was adopted:

"Your Committee on Missions beg leave to submit the following names to constitute the Board of Missions for the ensuing four years: E. W. Cole, president, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. R. N. Sledd, vice-president, Danville, Va.; Rev. J. O. Branch, South Georgia Conference; Rev. J. H. McLean, North Texas Conference; Rev. R. H. McMahon, Memphis Conference; Rev. Horace Bishop, Northwest Texas Conference; Rev. James Atkins, Western North Carolina Conference; Rev. F. D. Swindell, North Carolina Conference; J. D. Hamilton, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. E. E. Hoss, Holston Conference; Rev. J. D. Scott, West Texas Conference; Rev. J. A. Anderson, Arkansas Conference; T. D. Fite, Nashville, Tenn.; T. P. Weekley, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. C. W. Carter, Louisiana Conference; Rev. R. K. Brown, Tennessee Conference; Rev. C. G. Andrews, Mississippi Conference; Rev. J. S. Hutchinson, Baltimore Conference; Rev. W. P. Palmore, Southwest Missouri Conference; Rev. W. F. Glenn, North Georgia Conference; Rev. Sidney H. Babcock, White River Conference; Rev. W. R. Richardson, South Carolina Conference; Rev. Gross Alexander, Louisville Conference; Rev. A. J. Lamar, Alabama Conference; Rev. H. P. Walker, Kentucky Conference; Rev. C. A. Fulwood, Florida Conference; Rev. S. G. Preston, West Virginia Conference."

The commission on Ecumenical Conference was announced by Bishop Wilson as follows: Bishop Galloway, Bishop Candler, Revs. P. H. Whisner, W. R. Lambuth, James Atkins, J. W. Lee, R. W. Peatross. A meeting with a like commission will take place in a few days.

The following persons were elected to serve on the Epworth League Board for the next quadrennium: Bishop W. A. Candler, Rev. Seth Ward, W. F. McMurrey, Rev. E. H. Rawlings, Rev. J. W. Newman, Rev. H. M. DuBose, Sterling Fisher, Dr. J. B Murray, J. P. Brown, T. B. King, R. E. Allison, N. E. Harris, and J. H. Hineman.

The report of the Committee on Federation was taken up and adopted. The following are the recommendations:

"1. That the General Conference hereby approves and adopts the acts passed by the Joint Commission on Federation of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and will recognize them as in force when they shall have been adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"2. That the commission be continued for the ensuing quadrennium, and with the same powers that were conferred upon them originally.

"3. That they have power, together with the college of Bishops, to execute the measures adopted as far as they refer to matters of general administration.

"4. That they have power, together with the Board of Missions, to execute the measures agreed upon in regard to the mission fields of the church.

"We call special attention to the agreement to have a complete doctrinal catechism for both churches, and we recommend that the college of Bishops be authorized to appoint a committee to prepare a catechism in connection with a similar committee, should one be appointed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, and when they shall have secured the approval of their work by the college of Bishops, its publication is authorized."

FIFTEENTH DAY.

Report No. 3 of the Committee on Revisals was made the order of the day for ten o'clock. The committee recommended: (a) That paragraph 120 remain as it now is. (b) That chapter seven be amended by adding a paragraph to be numbered 302, immediately following the present paragraph No. 301. The said new paragraph to be in the following form: "302. Any traveling or local preacher or layman who shall hold public religious services within the bounds of any mission, circuit or station, when requested by the preacher in charge not to hold such services, shall be deemed guilty of imprudent conduct, and shall be dealt with as the law provides in such cases." The discussion on this recommendation occupied the entire session from ten o'clock to the close of the session. Some able speeches were made, and the evangelist question was pretty well ventilated. Sam Jones delivered his first speech in Conference against the proposed law. The law was adopted by a strong majority.

The following constitutes the Commission on Education: Dr. Jas. H. Carlisle, Profs. W. M. Baskerville, Morgan Calloway, Sr.; J. A. Kern, W. P. Few, E. B. Craighead, H. C. Pritchett, J. O. Keener, Edward Mayes, and E. H. Pearce. All of the members of this commission are practical educators. It is the duty of this commission to indicate the minimum requirement for the A. B. degree; also the requirements for admission into the Freshman class, and arrange a schedule whereby all schools belonging to or under the control of the church may be classified.

The following persons constitute the Book Committee, which will serve for the next quadrennium: Rev. Collins Denny, J. B. Morgan, T. D. Fite, J. D. Hamilton, R. A. Young, W. C. Kendrick, E. C. Reeves, J. A. Odell, Paul Whitehead, W. P. Lovejoy, W. R. Millsaps, Jas. Campbell, J. M. Mason.

The Nashville Advocate will be increased from a sixteen-page paper to twenty pages, by order of the Conference. The sum of $2500 per annum was appropriated to pay for contributions. It was also ordered that the editor be authorized to appoint an assistant editor. The paper will remain at the present price. An appropriation of fifteen hundred per annum was made to pay for contributions to the Methodist Review.

TALENTS.

BY HARRIET P. LATCOCK.

What hast thou done with the talent
The Master bestowed upon thee?
Didst thou think in a napkin to hide it
So well that His eye might not see?

What hast thou done with thy talent?
What has it gained in thy hands?
Remember, the Lord will require it.
Are you using it at His commands?

If, dear heart, thy talent lies hidden,
That the Master gave thee in love,
Bring it forth and so guard it and use it,
A reward may await thee above.

If it's bringing for Him a sure increase,
He will say to thee, "Thou hast done well,
As to me in few things ye are faithful,
Come up higher and with Me dwell."

EDUCATION UNDER CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES.

BY WILLIAM LANDER WEBER,
Professor in Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

If we would consider under what influences higher education had best be sought, we must needs keep in mind what are the ends and the purposes of all true education. No doubt there would be no discussion as to the best environment for spiritual education. And just here is the source of much of our careless thinking. We insist on sharply dividing the intellectual from the spiritual. Such a division is fundamentally wrong. No real education can deal with head-training and leave heart-training out of mind. Educational methods test character as well as scholarship. Growth in grace is always attended by growth in knowledge. Bishop Galloway had this point in mind when, in a recent sermon, he said, "Every true Christian is in a sense omniscient." If it were necessary to make any showing for the broadening of intellect attendant upon the introduction of the gospel, it would be but needful to cite the experience of missionaries who find that the intellectual, as well as the moral, life of converts is transformed by the power of God's Word. Not only is the subject-matter of the new convert's thinking immeasurably widened, but the attitude of his mind toward his daily problems is completely changed. If, then, we are prepared to say that education without religion is of little worth, we may wisely go one step further and say that religion without educative value is not to be found. If Christ be the "light of all our seeing," how shall we fail to see clearly? Let there be no misunderstanding of this position: there is education not of the schools. The aged Christian unable to read or to write may have that clearness of vision which is the essential element of true education. In other words, education is that development of heart and of mind which is the birthright of every son of God. Heart-culture and mind culture are inseparable. Neither can be attained to the exclusion of the other.

If our educational problem be looked at from the point of view solely of the individual and of the benefit to come into his life, the result must be the same. Let man undertake the development of all his powers in order that he may make of himself the very best that is in him. The world has not outgrown the need of the parable of the talents. The good and faithful servant is still found making use of his two talents to gain two others; the unprofitable servant is still too careless to make use of his powers, excusing himself on the plea that so little has been given, doubtless nothing will be required. But under the influence of the Spirit of Christ, as each servant looks upon his life as entrusted to him for the making the best possible out of it, his attitude is straightway changed.

Nobody, save of the lowest instincts, can look forward to a self-centered, self-satisfying life. Training that is for one's self alone is so narrowed as to lose the ennobling element of unselfishness. Everybody remembers Huxley's attempt to make the purposes of education clear. Man—so the scientist wrote—is engaged in a game of chess, playing against an absolutely fair, but likewise inexorable antagonist, Nature. If man makes a mistake as to the rules of the game, his destruction is immediate and without compunction. Let man be careful, therefore, to learn the rules of the game of life, in order that he may be able to protect himself. In other words, seek education, but in your seeking be controlled by selfish motives. We have made progress since Huxley wrote. No man argues nowadays for learning for sake of one's self alone. Some make no further progress than the adoption of the motto, "Learning for learning's sake;" but we may hope to be ready to take a step still higher, and let our motive be, "Learning for sake of fellow man."

Just as we are led to make progress from selfishness to altruism, so are we called into higher regions of duty. Making the best of ourselves for our own sake is a step in the right direction. Doing this for the benefit of our fellow-men is better; but consecrating all our powers to the use of our Maker is the best use that can be made of them. We are his, and have no right to do otherwise than develop the powers entrusted to us, so that we may have the largest share in ushering in the kingdom of God. Under the direction of such motives we not only pray, "Thy kingdom come," but also have part in bringing about its speedy coming. Education—the making of the best that is in us—is a duty owed to self, to fellow-man, to God.

The result of education is religious, in that the training of the heart is an indispensable element in all true educational work. The purposes of education are religious inasmuch as its highest end is to make man best able to do the service of his Maker. The purposes and results of education being so distinctly of that class we call religious, it becomes a self-evident proposition that an education which is sought under influences which do not make distinctly for encouragement to enter upon the Christ-life, is unprofitable; nay, rather, is to be looked upon as valueless, on the ground that such training is fundamentally unsound.

It will be readily seen that if the foregoing positions are well taken, it must follow that all education, higher as well as lower, must be undertaken under Christian influences. Under no other conditions can the training be well-rounded, leaving no part of man's nature unfurnished to wise thinking and to worthy doing.

THE PRACTICAL VALUE OF AN EPWORTH LEAGUE LIBRARY.

BY MISS VIC THOMPSON, TUPELO, MISS.

Now, the practical value of a League library in accomplishing such ends as this can not be estimated. By a library you can put wholesome literature in the hands of young people whom you will utterly fail to reach in any other way; and who knows the result? There was at the University of Oxford, England, in 1729, a lad of fifteen years. Rough, wayward, hating instruction and restraint, and it was said he had even taken what was not his own. There fell into his hands a book, "The Imitation of Christ," by Thomas a'Kempis. It touched his heart and awakened a thirst for knowledge, and the result to Methodism was Geo. Whitfield, the greatest evangelist of his century, the result of whose preaching can never die.

At our District League Conference, held in Tupelo a few weeks since, I made some mention of our library. A gentleman who afterwards gave a talk on the literary work strongly enforced the importance of confining ourselves to the prescribed reading course. Now, there is no one who is more appreciative of, or believes more fully in, the great importance of all leaguers making a careful study of those choice books selected for us than I do. I would not be deprived of the benefit and pleasure that I have derived from them for any consideration; yet I claim that a League library is an absolute necessity for the circulation of these among the entire League membership of most Leagues. I have found but a few in nearly all Leagues I know anything of who will buy the League course. Many can not afford it, and many who can will not do so; but if several sets are placed in the library at the disposal of all, you can accomplish your purpose. I have frequently known it to be the case where those who first refused to buy the books, after becoming interested in them, did so. We have a reading circle in our League which meets once a week, and while we have only seven sets of the League course, we are using those very successfully by circulating each book among several persons. Two of these sets belong to our library; so you see how it aids. Some of our members think we are accomplishing very little, but I believe that any League that will put fifteen, twelve, ten, or even six young people out of a membership of sixty to a close and careful study of the doctrine, history and polity of our church, and interest the others in a general way in good literature, is accomplishing a great work for Methodism. There are so few young people who are willing to be confined to close study by the League, and it takes judgment, tact, strong determination and dauntless courage to successfully operate this Literary Department. But if you will put a young man or woman possessing these qualifications, and with faith enough to ride over difficulties, at the head of this work, you will succeed. There will be difficulties, though, without a doubt, and I sometimes think we do wrong by dwelling entirely upon our success at our Conferences. While I think that is best generally, yet I fear it causes some of our young people to despair when their way is blocked with difficulties. We all meet with difficulties, and the strongest and most successful Leagues usually are those which surmount the greatest difficulties. The mothers of our church should and ought to help us a great deal by buying these books for their boys and girls, reading and discussing them with them in the family circle, around the fireside, and at every available opportunity, and I think you pastors from our part of the State have a great work to do by way of waking them up to their duty in this line. Oh, the great importance of mothers at an early period cultivating a genuine taste for books, fresh, pure, and clean, among their children! And now to the mothers in this audience, I speak to you to night, that being reminded again and again of this thing, you may possibly be stirred up to a fuller realization and appreciation of it than ever before. Yes, I believe in the reading course, and I think that all Leagues that have not already spent an evening, consisting of biographical sketches, choice readings, recitations and quotations, interspersed with appropriate music, from each one of those Southern writers in Dr. Baskerville's charming book, then they will never know just what they have missed, unless they do so in the future. And an evening should be given to the other books also, and a young person of literary culture can plan for and make these meetings interesting and instructive to the entire League membership. Our reading circle hope, by monthly meetings of this kind, to create an interest in and possibly induce most of our membership to read these books afterward from the library. Yes, I believe in the reading course, but I do not believe in being confined exclusively to it. We anticipated our committee in our League last year by taking up the Southern writers in our literary meeting, or rather all of them that we knew anything of at that time. Some few of those in Dr. Baskerville's book we knew nothing of until we got hold of it.

Now, we try always to make these meetings lively and enjoyable. If possible, we have some humorous songs and selections. It takes bright, spicy, pithy meetings of this kind for young people. It is not right for them to be sober and serious all the time. I shall never forget how we all laughed over "Uncle Remus with the toothache and the measles," the "Tar Baby," and many others of those negro legends which the older persons now living have all heard from the lips of their black daddies and mammies, and which Mr. Harris has so charmingly preserved in his unerring dialect for the children of this generation, when there'll be no black mammies and daddies to tell the tales.

(Concluded.)

In contemplating the future we are admonished to judge the future by the past. If this be true, we have cause for uneasiness. There is too great a freedom of deportment, too many advanced ideas in certain directions. As a result of this you can scarcely take up one of the large daily newspapers but what you read of Mr. A's killing Mr. B for some impropriety towards some member of his family. It is all right in a proper case, and public sentiment will sustain the father who inflicts swift punishment on the destroyer of the good name of his family. But this wiping out one person's sins in another man's blood won't do. This shooting down a man with a double-barrel shot-gun without a moment's warning, this murdering of men, has got to stop. Whose life is safe when any stripling, without taking advice, knowing only one side—and the, perhaps, untrue side—can take his double-barrel gun and shoot a man dead in the public street, and then say, "He insulted some member of my family," with no further proof of the guilt of the deceased, with no knowing as to whether or not he was guilty, and even if guilty of the fact, whether or not there were not extenuating circumstances? If this is to be tolerated, then men had best train Catholic monks.

We are told in Holy Writ that, "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil." The majority of men are only restrained from doing evil by the fear of punishment. It is the certainty that swift punishment will follow the act that prevents the commission of crime; hence laxness and partiality in the administration of the law tends to make a lawless community. But the administration of the law will never be in advance of public sentiment. Let public sentiment be right, and you will have little trouble in the execution of the law; and I fear that public morals are not in as healthy a state as could be desired. Men are now and then heard to say: "I will stand up to a friend in trouble. I will tell a little lie to keep a friend from being punished." Perjury is a crying evil and a great obstacle to the administration of the law. How is public sentiment to be directed in right channels? By the press and the pulpit. And here a great field is opened to our church. The heart and brain, the impulsive force of this Southland, is in the Methodist Church. She circles within her communion the wealth, the intelligence, the motive power of these commonwealths; and when she throws the influence of her mighty power into a movement for the public good, the bed-rocks of opposition crumble. The Methodist Church is the color-bearer, the color-guard in the warfare against evil, and in the future the bugle notes of her advancing hosts will be heard calling to the other churches to follow her lead in this great contest. We demand that our land, in the future as in the past, shall be the home of a pure, lovely womanhood, and of a chivalric, Christian manhood.

The most important thing for us—that which transcends all other considerations—is that we be a religious people, a people that fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. The older I get the more do I become impressed with this fact. Nothing can take its place. It is in vain that we rise up early, that we labor and toil, that legislators and statesmen make laws, and the great money kings move on the wheels of commerce. If we are wicked and sinful, and violate God's laws, we will not prosper, either we or our children; but God is good, and as he has led us in the past, he will lead us in the future, if we will only serve him. I have a hope, a living hope, in our land, her people—the noblest, purest race that ever came from the hand of the Creator; her blue-tipped mountains towering high in the heavens; her clear, limpid streams flowing softly to the sea; her bright sun and fair skies; our own, our native land. The very music of the spheres chime in melodious symphony to sing the praises of her passing loveliness. I see her as she comes, rising from the gloom of her sorrow, and throwing off the shackles of her bondage, she stands erect in the majesty of her imperial beauty.

The South! Its musical softness strikes on the ear as the distant strains of an Eolian harp, touched by the breath of the spirit of song. As long as the stars in their courses move, as long as honor rests in the hearts of men, as long as a representative of Adam can stand up and say, "I am a man," so long will the South live in the hearts of the true, the virtuous, and the brave.

Selections.

THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.

The Christian life seems to many a very dreary and uncomfortable sort of life. They see nothing attractive in it. It is all summed up in one irrational, invariable rule to reject everything that is agreeable and accept everything that is disagreeable. It seems to them a perversion. Why should not pleasure be the rule? Why should duty—cold, hard, bare duty—be continually kept in the foreground? Roses are beautiful; rugged rocks are not. Who would not choose roses?

But roses are not brought to perfection except by high culture. In their natural, neglected state they are little more than straggling briers, with flowers which barely suggest the wonderful possibilities of development. Culture makes them strong and luxuriant with great masses of beautiful blooms. The processes by which this miraculous result is accomplished may seem hard and disagreeable; but surely the means are justified by the end.

If we agree that beauty of character is the highest style of beauty known to the world, we ought to be able to agree that it is worth while to be at the pains of producing it. It is not, like the rose, a thing of beauty to-day and of ashes to morrow; it does not quickly fade, but its charm is perpetual. It increases in power of attractiveness, and sheds its fragrance over wider and wider areas. It is a beauty, too, which does not captivate one or two of the senses, but entwralls the whole being. It is a beauty which blesses, ennobles, encourages and inspires all within the circle of its influence.

There is no grandeur like moral grandeur; no beauty like beauty of soul. The character of Christ has a power over men which has never been equaled. He may have been in person without form or comeliness, like a root out of a dry ground; there may have been no physical beauty in him—opinion differs on this point; but the sublime beauty of his crystal character no one denies.

He trod the path of duty, and was made perfect through his sufferings. Was there, then, no joy in his life? Were the processes to which he submitted all hard and grievous, without any compensation? He did not think so. It was, he said, his meat and drink to do his Father's will, and he spoke of joy in tribulation, happiness in persecution, and told his disciples to rejoice when trials came upon them. In his life we see the surpassing beauty of holiness. He was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. His thought was not of himself, but of others. He suffered for us that he might teach us to suffer for one another. There is nothing which mars character like selfishness. Self is the center whence all that is unlovely emanates. If it seems hard and disagreeable to reject the counsels of this seductive spirit, it is more in the seeming than in the reality, for it is the way we keep clear of the entanglements of sin, which is no true pleasure, but only a delusion.

There is a deep and abiding joy in the life which Christ commends to us. Can anyone say as much for sin? Comparing hardness with hardness, there is no way so hard as that of the transgressor. And there is no beauty in an unrestrained or untrained life, no attractiveness, no helpfulness, no sweet influence, no compensation, only repulsiveness. Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things.—Exchange.

BE A SUNSHINE CHRISTIAN.

This is a weary, tired world; it hasn't much sunshine. About all there is comes from the great Sun of Righteousness shining through the disciples of Jesus. There is much glitter, a good deal of burnished brass, but little real warm sunshine in the hearts of men, only as it comes from him. And this makes your duty clear—mine, too. Go out into the new year with sunshine in your soul, in your face. It is a libel on Jesus Christ to go about with a long face. "Why should the children of a King go mourning all the day?" True, why should they? Many of us have interpreted Christianity to mean a pious groan or a holy moan. An evangelist was holding meeting in a church where I was pastor; he was running things on the "sad" line; we felt bad in nearly every meeting. He did a blessed work—but we might have done double if we had learned a lesson a little girl taught me near the close of the meetings. She was standing in the hallway, talking to a companion of hers. Her face wore a troubled expression; she was on the way out of the meeting. "I am not going in there any more; aren't they awful sad in there?" And she went away. As I remember it now, we didn't win a child to Jesus in that series of meetings.

Put sunshine into your religion—no, no, that's wrong; if your religion doesn't put sunshine into you, quit it, and get another kind; you've got a spurious religion. I know a good man, but his face is hard and sour; he interprets religion to mean sadness. While everybody has confidence in him, nobody would think of getting some of his religion. He looks as if he lived on pickles and persimmons three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

Ah, yes, Jesus was "a man of sorrows;" but he was always scattering sunshine into other lives. He came to take sorrow away, he drank the cup of humanity's sorrow that we might not need to drink it. "That my joy might remain with you, that your joy might be full." Fill up on his joy, and then go out into the world, scattering sunshine into other lives.—Selected.

COLD OR HOT.

Cold or hot, my friend? Feel your spiritual pulse and see. Put the Bible thermometer under your tongue. Search your heart and find how much love for Christ is left there. If after such an honest examination you find that the temperature has run low, very low—what then? Should you quit the church and throw up your Christian profession? No! a thousand times no! The Holy Spirit's message to you is, "Be zealous therefore and repent." The only way to repent of sin is to quit it. The only way to warm a chilled frame is not to throw yourself into a snow bank, but to hasten to the fire. Come back to a deserted Savior! Instead of erasing your blurred name from the church registry, seek a reconversion.

Simon Peter's best work was done after he was reconverted. Do not stop with lamenting your neglect of the place of prayer. Open again the door of devotion and go in and throw yourself down at the Master's feet, and cry out, "I have sinned, I am no more worthy to be called thy servant." Set up again your altar; and on it lay the sacrifice of a contrite heart. At the earliest moment lay hold of some blood-stirring Christian work; it will warm you up. It may take some time to get the blood into full, free circulation again, and to recover your lost ground and lost tone of health. But when you do get a fresh tide of Christ's love pouring into your heart, and a fresh glow of his likeness on your countenance, you will feel as Lazarus must have felt when he shook off the grave clothes and leaped into life again.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

There are great hosts of people in the Christian churches to-night who sit and listen to the glorious gospel of the Son of God, which reveals to them the promised land of pardon and peace and forgiveness. This promised land is well watered with the streams and the fountains of the waters of everlasting life, with its green fields and pastures of peace. These people have had this blessed Beulah land offered to them, with the glorious privilege of a new life, with its mountain peaks of happiness and peace and joy, and have gazed upon the prize; then terrified by the difficulties in the way, they have sorrowfully turned away from it and left it.—Rev. W. M. Hughes.

The rest of Christ is not that of torpor, but harmony; it is not refusing the struggle, but conquering in it; not resting from duty, but finding rest in duty.—F. W. Robertson.

You must live for another if you wish to live yourself.—Seneca.

FROM REV. J. M. WYATT.

Bro. H. R. Tnoker, who recently ceased his active, efficient labors and went to his "great reward," was so faithful, so painstaking in all the requirements and expectation of his important office, his life was so exemplary and the preachers loved him so much, that it was naturally thought that it would be difficult for any man to take up his work, to properly fill his place. But Bro. J. W. Honnoll, his appointed successor, has entered upon his duties with energy and cheerfulness, betokening to all as the suitable man selected to carry forward the cause of Christ in the Corinth district. He has just held the quarterly meetings for New Albany circuit, Ripley and New Albany station and Ripley circuit. He preached vigorous, excellent sermons at each of these places to large congregations. They delighted and edified the hearers. The Quarterly Conferences were pleasant occasions; the reports rather gratifying.

It is my purpose in this pen communication to speak more at length of my trip with him to Marviu's Chapel, on the Ripley circuit—Rev. B. S. Rayner, preacher in charge. The day was cloudy, the air chilly and the mud deep. The house of God was comfortably warm and filled with people who listened attentively and with marked appreciation while Bro. Honnoll lucidly and forcefully spoke of labor and reward. Then a bountiful dinner was spread for all present. After a spiritual feast and the satisfying of the physical, the second Quarterly Conference was held. The amount paid in was meagre. One steward seemed to make all his collection upon the spot. Merchants and farmers who manage their affairs in this indifferent, procrastinating way utterly fail. It is evident that some progress is being made in the charge. This is what we look for and desire to see. The pastor is carefully watching every interest of Zion, and diligently visiting the homes of the people in the bounds of his assigned field. He is untiring in his labors and is striving to advance the kingdom of the Son of man. There were two thoughts that seized me, namely—stewards and young people. The stewards before me manifested a splendid spirit. They appeared to be in sympathy with the plans and purposes of their pastor. Yet it was clear to my mind that by more system and business-like assidnity, they would be happier, humanity would be elevated and prosperity would certainly be greater. Because the preacher's hands would be strengthened, financial embarrassment would not crush him, and joy that comes from ardent co-operation would empower him. Fifteen or twenty men of any small territory with truly liberal pocketbooks, sagacious, earnest heads and pure, burning hearts together can therein amply meet all the gospel claims, build first-class church-houses, renovate sorry ones and repair dilapidated ones, have only Christian teachers to instruct their children, distribute literature that will not soil, contaminate nor vitiate. They can drive out erroneous tenets, those foreign to the true revelation of heaven, and not allow the invasion of improper persons who are misrepresenting themselves, to the confusion and hurt of our fair land.

Stewards are selected for their common sense, zeal and spiritual-mindedness. They are of our best men to advise with and lead with the preachers. Their positions, faithfully, willingly filled builds a strong, beautiful character, gives an influence that is potential and godly. A prompt, sun-shiny steward encourages his pastor and inspires the people, orders his household aright, is loved and honored by his community; God approves him, angels administer to him, and he will shine as the stars forever—having been a soul winner.

There are a great many young people in the bounds of the Ripley circuit. If the older persons—fathers, mothers, friends—will heartily and generously co-operate with the preachers—presiding elder, pastor and brethren of other denominations—the country would soon flourish and blossom as the rose. These sons and daughters who have so much possibility would be equipped for the largest usefulness and the greatest happiness. They would then have magnificent success, fixed hearts in the old paths. In these paths they would be active and aggressive, not looking for a way out of them, but seeing how enterprising and joyful they can be in them for the grand purpose of lifting up and delivering the world. The aromatic influence of Christ with Christian education upon and for the unfolding buds of immortality would result sublimely in the highest type of consecrated manhood and womanhood in "whatsoever is lovely."

The country is improving, but the improvement should be more rapid. There are scores of boys and girls, about here and elsewhere, who, if properly encouraged and earnestly urged by Christians of marked industry, true economy, genuine liberality, uncomplaining tongues, cloudless countenances, hopeful spirits, would fit themselves for noble citizenship. Life is worth living, young men and women. Parents, instill this golden thought into the minds of your children. It is a sad thing to exist, but it is glorious to live—unfolding the image of God. Bringing out for the light and adorning of the earth the dreams of the stars, and beholding the humane servitude and sustenance in the hewing sheaves, will arouse and inspire any child for tender, liberal care of father and mother, for lovely brotherhood and for thrones of veritable splendor. Joseph was trained up by the sublime principles of heaven, and started under these only safe, really satisfying regulations to grow in favor with God and man.

We must see to it that these priceless jewels committed to our care do not hury their talents. J. M. WYATT.

MAKE SHORT CALLS.

The Savior "went about doing good." The apostles taught "publicly, and from house to house." To some at the last day the Master will say, "I was sick and ye visited me."

One of the most profitable ways for Christians to spend their leisure time is by going "from house to house," to spread words of cheer, do deeds of kindness, and scatter blessings as they go. Ministers of the gospel may do great good in this way, and persons who are spiritually-minded, and are taught of God, may find here a field for active and useful endeavor in the cause of Christ.

How many there are who are sick, weary, lonely, sad, and to whom the visit of a minister of Christ, a Christian worker, a faithful woman, loving and beloved, is like a gleam of sunshine in the darkness, and is long remembered with gratitude to God.

But there is one important caution: Do not stay too long. The real work for God can be done in a very short time, and protracted visits tend to gossip and frivolity. If a man of God will enter a house with words of greeting and blessing on his lips; if he will speak a few well-chosen words touching the spiritual life, not forgetting all needful and kindly sympathy in temporal ills: and then with a passage of Scripture repeated or read, a hymn or Psalm repeated or sung, a word of prayer, a blessing and a kind good-bye, without ceremonious compliments at the beginning or lengthy leave-takings at the end, the whole need not occupy more than five or ten minutes. Such a call will not interrupt appreciably the ordinary current of household life, but it will be a little glancing ripple in the day's wave, a stray sunbeam which gleams amid the shadows, and a sudden brightness which makes the weary glad.

A person may make a dozen such calls in a morning or an afternoon, and scatter benedictions all the way along, while if a person undertakes to make a formal visit, to "stay to tea," he will be able to cover but little ground in visiting; will, perhaps, talk about things good, bad, or indifferent, and frequently finish up by talking about the neighbors; laugh and joke, and forget to pray; will interrupt the business and hinder the duties of the household, and such visiting persisted in will sometimes result in intimacies and partialities, unfruitful of good, and often fruitful of evil.

Gadding and gossiping, talking about things which do not profit, is contrary to the spirit of the gospel of Christ, and harmful to the spiritual life of those who engage in it. Go from house to house, but make short calls; tell your story of the Savior's love; give a word of comfort, of warning, and good cheer, and then go along. Do not dawdle, linger, tarry; and do not be persuaded to stay when your errand is done. Do not go too often. Keep moving, carrying the good word of God to those who need hear it. Speak words of cheer to those whose hearts are heavy, and let your words and acts, your prayers and songs, your very looks glorify Christ. Let your motto be, "I must be about my Father's business." You have something to do besides eating and drinking and trifling and gossiping. Go on in the strength of the Lord God, and you will find blessing on the journey, and his glory at the end.—The Armory.

THE MINISTER AND HIS TEMPTATIONS.

A minister on a pedestal has little influence over men. Unless he is in all points tempted like his brethren he can not be touched with the feelings of their infirmities. It is important, therefore, for laymen to remember that the battle of life is for all. Men may fight at different levels, but no matter where they stand they are on a battlefield. Some sins are coarse and carnal, and others fine and subtle, but all alike separate the soul from God. There is no hedge around the minister. He has all the temptations of other men and some additional of his own. The devil has access to his study. He was in Luther's study when the reformer threw his inkstand at him. He can ascend the pulpit stairs. He often does. What a host of demons the clergyman is obliged to meet and conquer! What opportunities for him to be a demagogue, a coward, a mischief-maker! How easy to pose as a defender of the faith and cast insinuations on his brother minister who reads the gospel with a different emphasis! How easy to be vain of a fine voice or a superb presence! How easy to be envious of men just a little ahead of him in power and fame! How easy to be lazy, uncharitable, deceitful, domineering, autocratic, or peevish! How easy to wilt under discouragement, how easy to commit any of the sins to which our frail humanity is prone!

The fact that the minister deals constantly with spiritual things is proof to the unthinking that sainthship to him comes easy, whereas the constant handling of high ideals and moral truths is a source of constant danger. Familiarity has a tendency to deaden sensibility, and just as soldiers become blasphemous on the battlefield, and undertakers sometimes come to look on death without a trace of awe, so a minister, unless he prays and watches, will have at last a heart unresponsive to the very truth which he is sent to teach. It is something to be remembered always that the Scribes and Pharisees fell into a deeper ditch than did the publicans and harlots.—Rev. Dr. Chas. E. Jefferson, in The Congregationalist.

One of the ablest and most successful of our young ministers writes so wisely that we present his thought for general consideration. He says: "I believe the secret of our future ministerial and church success is to come from less of ephemeral froth and more of sound doctrine in interesting setting. This may be as old as the hills, but each generation of young preachers has to learn it. I also believe that the people are going to hear more about God's law and personal responsibility for righteousness in the next ten years than they have in the ten just past. Humanity won't behave under a diluted gospel."

THE MINUTES.

The report of membership, etc., from Carrollton Avenue Church, in the Minutes of the Louisiana Conference, is an exact copy of the report filed with the secretary of the Conference at Crowley last December. This report is evidently in Dr. Sawyer's handwriting, and was no doubt made out from reports made to the Quarterly Conferences of last year. How much better it would be if the brethren who can not attend the Conference session would take interest enough in this matter (and a little more time) at the right time, and send a carefully prepared report to the secretary of the Conference; but it seems that the brethren never can be perfect in this life.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C.: "Children's Day at Marine Church, Simesport circuit. We had a very large crowd in attendance; the best of order. The programme was very nicely executed. The children were in high spirits, and performed their part well. Dinner on the grounds; everybody seemed to enjoy themselves. Collection amounted to $8.55. We are going to try it again next year."

Rev. H. S. Johns, Bayon Chicot, La., May 14, 1898: "My circuit comes on nicely; overflowing congregations at most places. Protracted-meeting time is now almost on hand. I write to say that I would be glad to have the assistance of a young preacher for three months, or longer. Not any salary to offer, but expenses will be met. A good chance for a beginner to acquire experience. Applicant should have a horse."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C.: "We have just closed a very fine meeting at Marksville, La. I was assisted by Bro. H. W. Knickerbocker, of New Orleans. He did excellent work indeed. He preaches a full-orbed gospel; very acceptable and effective work he did. Five accessions to the church, two infant baptisms, one adult-baptism, and a number of people pledged themselves for better living. Our church will commence at Marksville soon. Pray for us."

Rev. M. L. White, P. C., Decatur, Miss., May 13, 1898: "Our first and second Quarterly Conferences have been held; both very pleasant occasions. We have a very pleasant people to serve. Congregations large and attentive; collections coming up very well. Our parsonage, which was commenced under the administration of Bro. Hardin, is about completed. With the assistance of the ladies $11.50 worth of furniture, etc., have been put inside of the parsonage. Inside of two months will have house painted. The preacher and his family are feeling quite at home. Much obliged to these people for their many kindnesses."

The Story Teller.

In eastern countries, in place of our story-writers, they have professional story-tellers. It is their art to interest their listeners with tales of love, and marvelous adventures, and hair-breadth escapes, and magic cures. There's a story of a wonderful medicine that has made thousands of cures that seemed almost magical, which every woman should read or hear. To have heard it or to read it, may save a woman her own life or that of her husband.

The medicine is the discovery of Dr. R. V. Pierce, an eminent and skillful specialist, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the great Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It makes the appetite hearty, the digestion perfect, the liver active, the blood pure and rich, the nerves steady, the brain clear and the body strong. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption and diseases of the air-passages. It cures nervous diseases and is the best medicine for overworked men and women. A woman may save her husband's life by keeping a bottle in the house, and getting him to resort to it when he feels out-of-sorts. All men are heedless about their health. Medicines stores sell it. Doctor Pierce's reputation is world-wide, and his fellow townsmen, of Buffalo, N. Y., think so highly of him that they made him their representative in Congress, but his great love for his profession caused him to resign that honorable position that he might devote the remainder of his life to the relief and cure of the sick.

Another good thing to have in the house is a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They cure biliousness and constipation and never gripe.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone;
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own."

Affliction is a school of virtue; it corrects levity and interrupts the confidence of sinning.—Atterbury.

What would be the consequence if you should put off eating as long as you put off the beginning of a new life?

When a man prays regularly for patience, and then makes no effort whatever to control his temper, what is he?

Thomas a' Kempis was right when he said, thou shalt always have joy in the evening if thou hast spend the day well.

Do good constantly, patiently, and wisely, and you will never have cause to say that life was not worth living.—G. W. Childs.

As for our opportunities, we can make a heroic life out of whatever is set before us to work with or upon. —Anna Robertson Brown.

Three quarters of the ill-nature of the world is caused by the fact that the soul, without God, is empty, and so out of rest.—Horace Bushnell.

Instead of waiting for better opportunities, make the best possible use of those you have. This is the best way of finding better opportunities.

To become like Christ is the only thing in the world worth caring for, the thing before which every ambition of man is folly, and all lower achievement vain.—Drummond.

The time a man spends in getting ready is never wasted time. It is a suggestive fact that nine-tenths of our Lord's life was spent in preparation.—Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D.

Let us not forget that there are two sides to dying—this earth side and the heaven side. The stars that go out when morning comes do not stop shining; only some other eyes, some other land, are made glad by them.—Anon.

We never know for what God is preparing us in his schools—for what work on earth, for what work in the hereafter. Our business is to do our work well in the present place, whatever that may be.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

If we abide by the principles taught in the Bible, our country will go on prospering and to prosper; but if we and our posterity neglect its instructions and authority, no man can tell how sudden a catastrophe may overwhelm us and bury all our glory in profound obscurity.—Daniel Webster.

Many young preachers imagine that the time they spend in getting ready for their life-work is time wasted. There was never a greater mistake. Our Savior spent thirty years in preparation, and only a little over three years in his public ministry.

BISHOP KEENER'S ADDRESS.

We give below Bishop Keener's address at the opening of the General Conference, with the responses thereto:

DEAR BRETHREN: Please bear with me while I speak of things concerning myself. I have had the honor of being an itinerant Methodist preacher these fifty-six years past, and for half that time one of your general superintendents. I have been the subject of great indulgence at your hands, and of many favors, for which I wish now to express my sincere gratitude.

I have endeavored to discharge conscientiously and prayerfully the delicate and difficult duties which devolved upon me in caring for both the ministers and churches of our large connection.

To my honored colleagues I am much indebted for their generous supply of my lack of service during periods of sickness and bereavement. My age and infirmities, physical and mental, demand some relief, both for myself and the church, and I respectfully refer the matter of my future service to your godly judgment.

I congratulate you upon the favorable circumstances in which we are met in General Conference upon the manifest blessing of God on our church during this past quadrennium; upon the large increase of its ministry and membership since the close of the Civil War; upon your steady adherence to the doctrines and discipline of Methodism as we received it from our fathers, and upon the enlargement of our missionary enterprises at home and abroad.

My conviction as to the scriptural value of Methodist doctrine has never wavered since my conversion at the mourners' bench in this city in 1837. I thank God that he heard my cry; that he called me to be a Methodist itinerant in the far South. There I was licensed to preach, and there I have spent my days continuously in fellowship with those noble spirits who have fashioned and built up our church until this present hour.

Having had opportunity for so long a time to know and estimate our connectional system, I wish to record my testimony to its value—a system that places a pastor in every church and provides a church for every pastor; that penetrates every neighborhood, preaches at every cross-roads, builds a church in every village, and reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific; that traverses every prairie, keeps up with the pioneer, and includes the Indian Reservations; a system in which thousands of ministers are annually appointed to go and none refuse, often going to a work with only a name, and, financially, naked as a rock, but returning in a year with sheaves of precious converts, a circuit established, a church and parsonage built. Such a patriarchal, military system could only have been the outgrowth of the divine influence that made Mr. Wesley the spiritual father of his people, and guided him in shaping connectional Methodism, which he held to be as essential for efficiency as the doctrines which he preached.

Such a guild can not be surpassed by anybody on earth, whether social, political, martial or industrial, in its esprit de corps—men that eat of the same loaf, drink of the same cup, who have enlisted under the same banner, move with equal step to the conquest of the world for Christ.

The new birth is the keystone of Wesleyan doctrine. This is that "scriptural holiness" which Mr. Wesley sought to spread throughout England and America—that "the Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God;" that "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." My brethren, let nothing divert you from preaching this great law of life: "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God." Put men in the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and he will see to the rest. He will lead them through green pastures, beside still waters; he will "Make them for some moments feast,

With Jesus priests and kings;"

"He will guide them by his counsel, and afterward receive them to glory." This is the law of the Spirit of life which shall conquer the world.

My delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law I meditate day and night. My hope is to meet my illustrious colleagues who have gone before, and the godly men throughout our Zion, with whom I have often taken sweet counsel, and my precious parents and relatives, and the yet nearer ones, who have made my home only less than the heavenly home to which we are journeying. In your prayers do not forget me; and—

Where God's great throne of sapphire rests,
'Mid hoary peaks of amethyst;
There Jesus dwells in glory's bright abyss—
The Spirit's quenchless fire of holiness;
There may we all each other greet,
And find in awful heights a brother's seat.
—Rev. iii, 21.

Bishop C. B. Galloway addressed the Conference in behalf of the colleagues of Bishop Keener, as follows:

Mr. Chairman, I wish to say in behalf of the colleagues of our honored senior Bishop, that this hour is one of profound solemnity. He has been our father, our wise counselor, our ever-faithful friend, whose life has been a sacrifice and martyrdom almost to duty, in whom we have found no selfishness, but a singular consecration to this apostolic ministry, worthy of a seat among the great and noble who have gone before, and we shall cherish through the years that may be given us the memory of these delightful associations, and will recognize our indebtedness to his counsel and sanctified character.

COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY. REPORT NO. I.

The General Conference has heard with deep emotion the address of our beloved senior Bishop, John Christian Keener, and desires to make some record of its appreciation of his high character and long service.

It could not but be that a man of such pronounced strength at so many points would be placed in positions of great trust and usefulness. We gratefully make record that in all these positions Bishop Keener has shown sincere love for the church, and undoubted purpose to seek what he believed to be for the best interests of the cause of God, and rare energy and perseverance in carrying out those purposes.

For the long period of twenty-eight years he has borne the burden of the episcopal office, and for the past nine years has been the senior Bishop. He has discharged the weighty and delicate duties of his office faithfully, trying to promote the glory of God and the good of the church.

He has seen our beloved Methodism broken and scattered by the terrible war which devastated our land and swept from us many who, trained at our altars, would have taken up and carried forward the work God has committed to us. Spared to see the return of peace, called to a prominent position of leadership, he has seen the unprecedented prosperity with which our Lord has blessed us, and has rejoiced in the abiding presence of the spirit of God upon the increasing hosts of our Methodism. In accomplishing this result, wonderful in our eyes, God has used him doubtless in more ways than we can appreciate, and we are thankful to our God for a man so pure in life, so high in purpose, so untiring in work.

Now that increasing years and infirmities compel him to ask for relief from the burdens he has so long borne, we assure him not only of the appreciation of the church to which he so unreservedly gave himself, but also of the great affection of those with whom and for whom it has been his privilege to labor.

We pray that our heavenly Father may long spare his aged servant to bless the church with his presence, interest, and love, and that grace, mercy and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Savior may be multiplied unto him.

Resolved, first, We recommend that Bishop Keener be released from official duties, assuring him that such work as his strength may enable him to perform will be greatly appreciated by our whole church.

Resolved, second, We have had under review the character and administration of Bishop J. C. Keener, and the same has been approved.

JOSEPH H. PRITCHETT,
Chairman.

W. L. NELMS,
Secretary.

Our readers are indebted to Rev. J. M. Henry for our report of the proceedings of the General Conference, as well as for most of the personal notes from Baltimore.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

Dr. W. C. Black is chairman of the Committee on Colportage. The statement of last week was incorrect.

"Private John Allen" came over from Washington a few days since and took a peep at the scions of Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. E. Denson is in attendance on the Conference. He has been writing up the Conference for the Times Democrat.

Rev. J. T. Sawyer spent a week in attendance upon the Conference. He visited Washington and several other points of note near by.

Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan and Rev. J. C. Lowe, of the North Mississippi Conference, have been in attendance upon the General Conference for several days.

Rev. Jas. Murrah, of Clarksville, is in attendance as a visitor. Bro. Murrah was in the Conference hall this morning, and joined the Conference on the excursion.

Rev. J. W. Sullivan, of the North Mississippi Conference, was seen among the brethren to-day. Bro. Sullivan is not a member of the Conference, but is as much interested in the proceedings as if he were.

As will be seen in another column, the General Conference laid hands on two Mississippians for General Conference positions, viz.: Drs. Murrah and DuBose. We predict for each of them a successful career.

Dear reader, deal gently with the editor, Dr. Black, if you discover mistakes, misstatements, and other misses in these notes from the Conference. Dr. Black is not guilty; he does not see the copy or the proof.

The New Orleans Picayune showed a commendable spirit of enterprise and thoughtfulness for its large circle of Methodist readers in Mississippi and Louisiana in sending a representative to the Conference and keeping him in attendance from the very first day!

Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer, D. D., of New Orleans, arrived Saturday morning, and enrolled himself as a member of the visiting delegation. He will remain several days. The Doctor was moving about among his friends, renewing old acquaintances and exchanging greetings.

The members of the Conference have been shown many marks of attention. The Columbian Iron Works sent a special invitation to the Conference, asking that the works be visited Saturday, May 21, at 4 P. M., at which hour a government war vessel was launched.

It is said that if a man "wants anything" from the General Conference, he must have a large collection of choice jokes on hand. As to the truth of this we don't know, but it is a fact that our good friend, Frank Parker, has added two or three first-rate jokes to his list since coming to Baltimore.

Congressman Love and wife, of Mississippi, took in the General Conference on Saturday, the twenty-first. They were seated with the Mississippi delegation, and had the good fortune to hear the most spirited debate of the session, viz.: that on the evangelist-local preacher question.

Rev. R. M. Standifer, of Oxford (North Mississippi Conference), appeared upon the scene of action just in time to join the Conference in a boat excursion to Annapolis. Standifer never looked better, and his wit never sparkled more. He is a welcome member to the visiting delegation.

Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D., president of Millsaps College, was elected Secretary of Education. Dr. Murrah is the right man in the right place. Millsaps loses its faithful president, but the church gains the services of a man of vigor and learning and practical understanding of educational problems.

Bishop H. C. Morrison, who has been assigned, in the plan of episcopal visitation, to hold the Louisiana Conference, will visit the State and familiarize himself with the work early this Summer. He has already promised to hold the Opelousas District Conference, which meets at Lafayette, time to be fixed. If there are other presiding elders who would like to have him visit them, to correspond with him, his address will be published in a few days. However, a letter addressed to Atlanta, Ga., will reach him.

It would not be fair to say that the election of Bishops was the only attractive feature of the Conference to many of the delegates, but it is a fact that many of them got away as soon after the election as possible. It may be possible that some went home because the election went the other way.

Rev. J. W. Malone, D. D., president of Grenada College, a member of the North Mississippi Conference, is in the city, and was seen moving about among the brethren. Bro. Malone is as genial and hearty as ever. May he long live to serve the Master in the field to which he has been called!

Mr. Jno R. Taylor, of New Iberia, La., who has been a student in Maryland School of Pharmacy, graduated Thursday, May 19. Mr. Taylor is an estimable young man, a member of the Methodist Church. While a student in the city he made many friends, as was evident by the abundant floral and other gifts. After the duties of school were over he looked in on the Conference.

The Conference has proved a great attraction to our people all over the South. The number of visitors equals—probably exceeds—the number of delegates. Many of the visitors come at the beginning of the Conference, and will remain until the close. Most of the visitors are regular attendants upon the Conference. There are eleven from Louisiana and about as many from Mississippi.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is the only body in the world where the proceedings, speeches, and all, are reported stenographically, and printed correction or alteration. The rarity of errors is to be marveled at. It is said that probably there is no other deliberative body which makes so few errors in grammar and rhetoric. This is due, no doubt, to the habit of extempore speaking.

It is pleasant to be thought well of by others, and to get a glimpse of ourselves through the eyes of those who stand off and look at us. A correspondent says: "The Conference is ideally free from anything like electioneering." The correspondent thinks that the Conference is remarkably free from political methods. This in the face of the resolution passed a few days since by the Conference protesting against such things is very gratifying.

Baltimore is by eminence the city of churches. By reference to the city directory, I find that there are no fewer than 462 churches. Of this number 154 are Methodist Churches, divided, of course, among several denominations, both white and colored. Next in the list comes the Roman Catholic Church, with 54 church-buildings. Next in order are the Baptists, with 51 churches. The Evangelical Lutherans have 47 churches. The Protestant Episcopalians have 42, and the Presbyterians have 37 churches. Probably the largest and finest Methodist Church in the United States is the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. The congregations are large, and the influence of Methodism is widely felt.

The Zion's Herald has the following to say about Bishop J. C. Keener: "Bishop Keener is greatly beloved and revered by his church. It is gratefully recognized that he has done an incomparably valuable work in directing the thought and life of the church during so many years. He is one of the most genial and lovable of men. We were favored with a happy and memorable conversation with him. Among other things he told us of his strong love for Bishop Gilbert Haven. 'We differed in everything,' he said, 'but we came into closest relations, especially in Mexico, and I came to admire and love him very much.' At his own request he will be relieved from active official duties and responsibilities, and Bishop Wilson will become senior Bishop. How wise and fitting for this reverend Bishop to appreciate his own infirmities, and in this way to relieve himself, the Conference, and the church!"

The local committee has not forgotten to entertain the Conference. On Saturday an excursion was provided to Annapolis by boat. The boat left the pier about one o'clock. In three hours we were at Annapolis. An hour was given for a visit to the Naval Academy. A glance at the place where our boys are taught reveals a beautiful spot by nature, but undoubtedly the government has been very stingy in providing suitable, adequate, and respectable buildings for our great naval school. Such provisions as are found at Annapolis are a disgrace to a country like the United States. The party got a peep at Forts Carroll, Terril, and McHenry. Carroll is one of the main defenses of the city of Baltimore. The trip was pleasant and profitable, as was attested by everyone. As the steamer entered the harbor just off Fort McHenry, the sweet notes of song echoed upon the water. The words of the song were, "My country, 'tis of thee." And as we passed the spot in the harbor where Scott Key wrote the "Star-Spangled Banner," marked perpetually by the unfurled flag of which he wrote, the song changed, and the company sang that immortal song, "Star-Spangled Banner." Then "Dixie" and "Suwannee River" expressed home sentiment, and as the steamer came to her mooring the song was, "Beyond the River." Without prearrangement, the program of song is expressive of the deep sentiments of the people represented in the General Conference. Loyal to a common country, North and South, they love her hills and vales, her mountains and streams. They love the flag which so proudly waves over so broad, so free, so generous a land. True and pure is this love of country; but that spot, that hill, that valley which is called home, is the dearest bit of this native land. The old home is the concrete expression of native land. But above all, shedding a holier devotion into that which is inferior, is the devotion to God, and an earnest looking forward to the country beyond the river—the real native land of the sons. The Methodists are patriots, home lovers, and pilgrims.

The two distinguished ministers who were on yesterday elected to the bishopric are entirely well known to need any introduction to the church. They have both come to the position after many years of faithful service. Rev. Warren Aiken Candler, D. D., LL D., was born in Georgia in 1856. He graduated at Emory College in 1875, and at once entered upon the itinerant ministry in the North Georgia Conference. From the first he took a high position among his brethren. Before he was twenty-five years of age he was a presiding elder. After that he filled various important stations. In 1886 he was elected assistant editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, a place which he occupied with great ability for two years. He was then chosen president of Emory College, and has continued in that office until the present time. Dr. Candler is a great preacher and a noble man. We predict for him a career of increasing power and usefulness.

Rev. Henry Clay Morrison, D. D., is a native of Tennessee. He is fifty-eight years of age. His ministry of about thirty-three years has been spent mostly in the Louisville Conference, though for four years he occupied the pulpit of First Church, Atlanta, and for eight years past has been one of the Missionary Secretaries. He is a man of fine appearance, engaging manners, and excellent ability, in the pulpit and on the platform. Few men have been more popular as pastors. He has a wide circle of warm friends, and will be welcomed by them into the episcopacy. We pray that the blessing of Almighty God may rest on our brethren, and that to the end of their lives they may have wisdom and strength to feed the flock of God over which the Holy Ghost hath made them overseers.—The Daily Advocate.

The correspondent of Zion's Herald writes pleasant things about our General Conference now in session. He draws the parallel between the General Conference of the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South. He says, speaking of the Baltimore Conference: "As a whole, it is a very intelligent looking body of men. The men are older than those elected to our General Conference. Our sister church believes in its older men for counsel and law making. One-half the delegates are laymen. The M. E. Church, South, settled this question, and settled it rightly long ago. Then, too, they have not shown any of that peculiar unwisdom which have so signally displayed in drawing a division line between the laity and the ministers at the General Conference. The question of having the laymen seated by themselves has never been even mooted, as it never should have been with us."

The correspondent continues in the following prophetic vein: "The Conference at Baltimore is likely to do better work for the church than was done at Cleveland, for the reason that it is free to act upon questions of internal and domestic economy proper, and is not in the agitation and throes of problems which unhappily absorb and control the sessions of our General Conference. With lay representation settled, with no 'woman question' and, best of all, with very few elections to be made, the thought of the body now in session is concentrated upon those matters only which need attention."

In his comparison he continues: "There is a striking contrast between the aspirations and temper of the Baltimore Conference and that which met at Cleveland. At Baltimore there is self poise and self-restraint. At Cleveland there was a state of nervous excitement, tension and expectation bordering on hysteria. Baltimore is a quiet, conservative, self possessed religious assembly. Cleveland was a political and radical convention, met to discuss and carry great questions, and especially to divide the church spoils. Baltimore is more churchly, sober, religious. Cleveland was more dynamic, selfish and dialectic"

Dr. Andrew Hunter, of Arkansas, is a privileged character in the General Conference room. He richly merits his honors. Now in the eighty-fifth year of his age, he bears well his many years. He was a member of the General Conference in 1844, and has been a member of every General Conference since except two. By a unanimous vote he was granted the privilege of sitting with the Bishops on the platform, or anywhere else in the Conference room he might choose.

A cent's worth of fuel will heat the iron for 3 hours; so you have a perfectly even heat. You can iron in half the time, and no danger of scorching the clothes. I sell at nearly every house, as the iron saves so much fuel everybody wants one. I make $1 50 on each iron, and have not sold less than ten any day I worked. GONE HOME.

Bro. Daniel Brewer, a patriarch in the Methodist Church, died this morning at 11 A. M., and will be buried to-morrow in the family burying-ground, ten miles distant. He has been an invalid for many months, patiently waiting the summons of the Master. He leaves a large and interesting family to mourn their loss. A suitable obituary will be forwarded in due time. ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS!

In order to raise the $1200, pledged by our State Conference, to furnish the chapel at Water Valley Orphans' Home, and to support a missionary in the foreign fields, the obligation to pay two shares ($20) necessarily rests upon each of the strongest Leagues in the State. Only a few of the Leagues represented at Meridian took more than one share, and I urge that the pastors call the attention of the League presidents to this matter at once, as I am anxious that they understand the condition of affairs before paying their promised shares.

It will never do for Mississippi to fall behind the other States in work along this line. Three years ago the Board of Missions was laboring under heavy financial burdens, when the Epworth Leagues of Texas, with their young life and enthusiasm, put their shoulder to the wheel and sustained three missionaries in China for three years. The Leagues of Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas have already taken up this line of work for this year. The part the Mississippi leaguers have undertaken is small in comparison with that of most of the other States; yet we have our Orphans' Home, and what nobler work could we be engaged in? Think of it, though: only $300 of the $1000 pledged for this worthy cause was raised last year. We must arouse ourselves, and see to it that the money for these two causes is forthcoming within the next two months. It is needed, and we must give the matter immediate attention. The Board of Missions has decided that our money for missions shall go toward the support of Dr. and Mrs. Fearn in China:

Below I give a list of the Leagues, and the order in which they have already paid shares:

Meridian, East End League	$10
Miss Addie Marshall, Brookhaven	10
McComb City League	10
Wesley Chapel League, Natchez	10
Vicksburg—C. Street League	10
Corinth League	10

TO CHURCHES.

The C. S. Bell Co., Hillsboro, O., are now putting on the market their celebrated Steel Alloy Bells warranted for five years and which a great many of their customers say equal the genuine Bell Metal Bell, costing three or four times as much, at half the list price. Churches who feel that they can not invest a large sum of money for a bell, and at the same time wanting a good bell, will do well to write to The C. S. Bell Co.

NEARING HOME.

BY JENNY TERRILL RUPRECHT.

I shall go home, some day,
And others wonder at my journey o'er.
Yes, I shall slip away
Into my "mansion fair" and close the door
To life that so perplex my heart and brain,
And often break the charm of peace in twain.

It is a joy to know
That I am nearer home than loved ones think;
'Twere better to be so
Than have them see me on the river's brink,
Watching the boatman pale slow ply the oar,
Until I dread the voyage more and more.

I shall go home, some day,
And if I see my loving Master's face
The first, and He shall say,
"I welcome thee, child of My love and grace,"
Enough in this sweet greeting there will be
To make me glad throughout eternity.

A TASTE FOR READING.

It is by no means to be taken for granted that a taste for reading invariably comes by natnre. Nobody can observe children without seeing that while some of them take to books, to use a familiar simile, as a duck takes to water, others are indifferent to the printed page, and prefer other amusements or occupations to the quieter pleasure of reading.

When a child really loves to read and needs no urging to sit down with a book, the mother has, of course, the responsibility of guiding his reading. The truly book-loving child may be led to form a taste for the best and purest by judicious care and sympathetic comradeship on the part of mothers and teachers. But read he must and will, and time will never be a burden on his hands. Unless his mental palate is early enfeebled or vitiated by indulgence in a style of reading which is morally bad, or which is simply entertaining without any ultimate end of instruction or discipline, such a child will find delight in books of travel and in histories of his own and other countries and periods. He will not be limited to stories which are merely imaginative, though imaginative literature should always form a portion of his intellectual fare. Such a child, born with the love of books, is to be congratulated. He is armed for the battles of life as none can be who does not know the stimulus, the rest, the refreshment and the profound help and encouragement which come to a human soul through the vital thought and heart throb of good books.

An instance occurs to me by way of illustration. Lord Macaulay had been defeated in a political contest, and while the shouts of the victors were ringing in his ears he sat down to write an ode to literature, which remained his exceeding comfort. If there were time, such instances might easily be multiplied, but one on the opposite side is all which I can mention here. Of a lady in deep grief a friend not long ago said to me, "If only she cared for reading, it would be easier to divert her, but she has never accustomed herself to find pleasure in books, and they bore her."

The mother whose task it must be to form in her children a taste for reading may inquire, By what means shall I set about this work? How shall I beguile my active boy from his games, or my daughter from her playmates, in order to interest them in books? I would advise such an one to begin a course of reading aloud to her little ones in the late afternoon, before supper, for example, or in the hour just after the evening meal, choosing a pleasant story, reading a prescribed time and breaking off at an interesting point. If this is done regularly, the habit of anticipation will soon be established. With the older young people I would try to have reading aloud by turns in the evening whenever the family can be assembled. Let the conversation at the table turn on the books read. This is almost traditional as a New England custom, if one may judge both from observation and from much study of New England's literature of biography. The love of reading leads by easy steps to intelligent discussion, and I know more than one household in which an adjournment of the family as a committee of the whole to consult an encyclopedia or a lexicon is a not uncommon performance after the leisurely evening meal. —Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, in The Congregationalist.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL.

Punctuality—the habit of doing the right thing at the right moment—has never been canonized as a virtue, nor has procrastination been regarded as a vice. But there are some of the regulation virtues which make less real difference in the conduct of life than this quality of timeliness, which is not included in the list; and there are vices which do less practical and absolute harm than the pernicious habit of procrastination, which no one ever dreams of classing among the sins of humanity.

But, when one comes to think of it, time is an element of the most serious importance. The letter that is answered at the hour when the reply is needed may be productive of infinite comfort or value to both the writer and the receiver; but a delay until the matter in question has gone beyond the decision or the shaping event makes the reply valueless. And so with the words of social intercourse, which, "fitly spoken" on one day, are without significance or influence on some other day. Life is progressive. Events, circumstances, change daily. The deed that saves a man or a nation, if done at the right moment, is worse than useless if delayed until the man and the hour have passed by. There are points of mutual agreement among time, place, and circumstance; but once unimproved, and the opportunity recurs not again.

Could there be a more practical form of personal reformation than the vigilant correction of the habit of procrastination? Life would be transformed could each one rise to a new day, each morning filled only with new matters, and not with those of the day before. Then, indeed, might one enter upon the life of trustful consecration and sanctified service.—Lillian Whiting, in Boston Budget.

DON'T OVERDO HOME.

There is no doubt that home is the sweetest, loveliest place in the world, when properly cared for; and the art of home-staying is a great one; still, like all good things, it can be overdone.

If you know of a sick neighbor, or one who is in great trouble, and whom you can help, and you stay instead in your own comfortable little domicile and never "lend a hand"—then you are overdoing the art of home-staying.

If friends invite you out to a social evening or afternoon, and you decline the invitation because it is "so hard to get ready," you are letting home drive a nail into the coffin of your sociability. If you knew of some entertainment or instructive exercise where you could gain heart or brain culture, and you shut yourself up in your house, you let home keep you ignorant.

If you keep your children home too strictly, forbidding them to join such proper and temperate amusements as their playmates indulge in, you may be cultivating in your family a distaste for home that will bear fruit as soon as they are old enough to be out of your control. If you stay away from church Sunday, and "read a sermon at home," you will be letting "home, heaven's fallen sister," as Dickens called it, cheat you out of heaven itself.—Everywhere.

THE RISE OF A BOY.

The boy goes to business, and at his business begins by simply doing the things he is told to do, and doing them in a common and ordinary way. If he stops here, he remains all his life long a drudge. But if he begins to see that business has a significance, that his life is not merely sweeping the store, not merely writing letters, not merely selling goods; if he begins to see the higher life involved in business; if he begins to see that business is a greater instrument of beneficence than what we call beneficence; that trade is clothing thousands of men where charity clothes ten; that agricultural and milling industries are feeding thousands of men where charity feeds ten; if he begins to see how the whole history of the world is linked together, and is God's way of building up humanity and serving humanity—as he gets this large view and enters into it, life is enriched and becomes the school wherein he is educated into that which is immortal.—Dr. Lyman Abbott.

Hygiene.

ACTION OF ALCOHOL.

After noting the effect of alcohol on the adult, it seems almost preposterous to think that such a depressant could be utilized as a remedy for any of the children's diseases, particularly those that are precipitated by hot weather and unsanitary surroundings. Their organization is too susceptible to such influences, and particularly so in the case of Summer complaints, as they are mostly made up of stomach and bowel troubles. We all know how quickly children in such conditions are restored to health and vigor by a short season at the seashore, where they are invigorated by a boundless supply of oxygen, otherwise called pure air, a better measure of cleanliness and freedom from the harassing noises of the city. To subject children, suffering with hot weather diseases, to the stupefying action of alcohol in any form, deserves to be ranked with that of cruelty to the innocents. What children in that condition need is a good warm bath to ensure perfect cleanliness, wholesome food that is adapted to their condition, an out-door life in pure air, and a little freedom from restraint, then nature will assert herself and restoration is soon accomplished.

There is a larger, broader spirit in which to invest this whole question. He does well who seeks the cause and endeavors to cure the disease, but he does better who aims to prevent it.

In seeking for the reason why narcotics are so much used, we find those who over-eat enjoy the wine or beer as well as the after-dinner cup of coffee and the cigar, not from any nutritive value they are supposed to possess, but because they drown the nervous rebellion that would certainly assert itself were it not for the deadening effect of the narcotic, whether it be alcohol, caffeine, theine, or the poison of tobacco.

Over-exercise, whether mental or physical, is one of the causes of inebriety, because of its depleting effect. Out of about 1,500 women in Blackwell's Island Insane Asylum, nine per cent. of them were hard workers during the day and hard drinkers by night. If exercise were a remedy for this disease, such results could not ensue.

The great mass of intemperance arises from the unfortunates who are thrown out of employment, those who are going down hill financially, and have no secure future in the mad rush of competition. When loss of business and financial wreck come to men, what is more natural for the short-sighted and improvident than to seek to drown their misery in the cup that intoxicates, otherwise poisons? It seems as though mankind were bound to have some nepenthe for their sufferings, and in narcotics they do find an expensive surcease for the time being. Teetotalism may not save a man from financial ruin, but financial ruin has driven tens of thousands to drink. An eminent English authority, after over thirty years of investigation of individual cases, found that eighty-six per cent. of drunkenness was directly traceable to financial depression caused by the present methods of competition. Financial success will keep the family together and insure all the happiness of which man's nature is capable. If man degenerates in the midst of financial success, it is because of his low mental grade, and is the exception rather than the rule, and the low grade of development may have arisen from the financial depression of his progenitors.

When the world realizes that each one is his brother's keeper, and then arises to the sense that in co-operation we have a cure for the social ills of our every-day life, and that the good of one is the good of all, the injury of one the injury of all, and when it is made impossible for anyone to get the good things of life to the exclusion of his brothers, when the unfortunate are tenderly cared for and made to feel that they are surrounded by the sympathy of their fellow-men, and that they and theirs will be amply provided for, then will the use of all narcotics diminish under the light of the knowledge that their use inevitably shortens their stay with their fellow-men.

That condition will usher in a new era, something like that of early Christianity, when man will not be obliged to exhaust himself in the mere struggle for existence, but will have ample time to cultivate the finer graces of life and learn that narcotism is not the definition of happiness.

FLOWERS—Graytham Havis Flowers, son of Ephraim and Mary A. Havis Flowers, was born Dec. 19, 1823; died March 21, 1898. Joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life at Meaville, Miss., under Rev. — Cassells; converted soon after at Cool Springs Church, same county. He lived a consistent member till death; died in the faith. There were ten children born to his parents; five are still living; one brother, Rev. T. Flowers, a superannuate preacher in the Montana Conference, and one brother, Rev. E. A. Flowers, a superannuate in the Mississippi Conference. Bro. Flowers was married three times. First, to Mrs. Louisa P. Byrd (McDaniels); five children, two living. Second, to Mrs. Hauriette Johnston (Porter); four children, two living. Third, to Miss Julia Strond; six children, three living, who, with mother, mourn for papa.

It was my pleasure to know Bro. Flowers well; was his pastor for the past three years. He was a good man; we miss him. The last visit to him, two days before death, he said to me, "God is with me." At another time, not long before death, to a friend he said, "I am going to fall soon, and fall my length in glory." Praise the Lord for victory! We laid his body to rest at Oak Grove Church, near his residence, four miles north of Meaville, in the presence of a host of relatives and friends.

Dear, sorrowing ones, press on, and you shall meet him where parting is no more.

WHITE—Dr. William Dee White, the son of Benjamin R. and Eliza M. White, was born at Franklin, Tenn., Aug. 21, 1836 and died at his home, Abbeville, La., Feb. 24, 1898, aged sixty-two years six months and four days. He was educated at Shelbyville University, and whilst he did not graduate, yet he attained to a respectable scholarship for those times. He graduated in medicine at the University of Nashville in 1859, and the same year he came to Louisiana and commenced the practice of his chosen profession. By his knowledge of the healing art, his skill in applying remedies, and great energy, he soon acquired a varied and extensive practice. He was a public-spirited man. He was a member of the Louisiana State Medical Society, which frequently honored him with important official positions. For twelve years he was coroner of Vermilion parish. He served as a private in the late Civil War, though his medical knowledge was called into requisition among the soldiers. He stood high among the Masons, not only as a believer in, but an earnest supporter of its institutions. On the temperance question of our times he was always in the front. In every movement which contemplated the enlightenment of the people, the moral good of every citizen, and the financial prosperity of his parish and State, he took the liveliest interest.

He was married to Miss Lucinda R. Lyons, Dec 24 1862. There were born to them fourteen children. Six of these had already preceded him to Eden's bowers, and waited for him, clad in the habiliments of immortality. Eight remain behind preparing to follow on. His home was a place of rest and joy, and where he could take refuge at any and all times from the cold and heartless world. He and his pious wife gave religious tone to the minds and hearts of their children, for all of them who had come to the years of accountability had entered the church of his choice. If he had any fault in his family government, it was in being too indulgent. His children loved him almost to idolatry, and obeyed him with readiness and cheerfulness. His generous hospitality was only limited by his resources, and it was always dispensed with such a liberality that all felt welcome. His home for many years was the home of the preacher. He always had strong friends and supporters in both parents and children. Had it not been for this family, he would have been homeless. He owned a lot on which he erected a Masonic lodge, but the lower story he donated to the use of the church, which was used until the present beautiful house was built at another place.

While young he joined the church in Tennessee, but rejoined when he came to this State. His new career, as a disciple of Christ, began in 1870. He served in nearly every capacity in which a layman may be appointed. Though he had a large practice, he rarely ever found it necessary to absent himself from the public services of the sanctuary. The interests of the church in Abbeville lay very near his heart, and for it he prayed and labored under the eye of the Master, until from a very small beginning it grew strong and very influential. His own life was evidence that he had acceptance with God.

At different periods of his life he had severe attacks of rheumatism, which tried, to the fullest extent, the strength of his faith. A few years since he had a prolonged spell of la grippe, which finally culminated in heart disease, which stripped him of all earthly help. Thus disrobed of the mortal flesh, he entered the gate which stood ajar for him. He went down into death's wide domain, which is enshrined in darkness and gloom, as the broad disk of the eternal sun setting in an unclouded sky in the distant West. When the last moment came he quoted:

"Just as I am without one plea,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!"

J. F. Sourlock.

BAILEY—We, the undersigned committee, appointed by the superintendent of the Acona Sunday-school, beg leave to submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased God to remove by death our friend, sister, and co-worker, Miss Eliza Bailey; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Miss Eliza Bailey the church has lost one of its most useful members, who was ever faithful to its interest; the Acona Sunday-school a zealous worker; her parents a loving and dutiful daughter, who was always anxious to sacrifice her own pleasures, that she might add to their comfort and enjoyment; her brothers and sisters have been bereft of an affectionate sister, and her neighbors a friend who was ever ready to respond to any call which they might make.

Resolved, That while we deplore our loss we bow with humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt condolence to the bereaved parents and sorrowing brothers and sisters, and beg them to put their trust in him who is too wise to err and too good to do wrong.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on our Minutes, and a copy of them be furnished the bereaved family, and the Lexington Advertiser and the New Orleans Advocate each be furnished with a copy, with the request that they publish it.

Miss Mary McGaa, for Com.

Acona, Miss.

GALE—Harrison Hunt, son of Rev. Robert S Gale, of the Mississippi Conference departed this life at the parsonage, Meadville, Miss., April 22, 1898, aged fifteen years nine months and thirteen days.

Harry was an obedient boy to his parents, kind to his brothers, sisters and schoolmates, and was a bright Christian. He became a Christian when quite young. In the year 1897 he was at Oak Grove, a church on his father's charge, and was gloriously sanctified, and was faithful to the end. He is sadly missed by the members of that church, yet we weep not, for God knows best.

Harry has only gone before,
To meet us on the other shore.

Cona V. Flowers.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, in his infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove one of the best members of the Oak Grove Epworth League, Harrison Hurst Gale, from our midst; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we, as a League, deplore his death, we bow submissively to the decree of Him who is mercy, truth, and love.

Resolved, That we cherish his memory, and will ever strive to imitate his life of consistent piety and christliness.

Resolved, That we tender to our beloved pastor and his family our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement, and rejoice with them that Harry's triumphant faith in the hour of death has made heaven seem nearer and the unseen beyond more of a blessed reality.

Resolved, That this tribute of respect be sent to the Franklin Advocate, and also the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication. Olive Sullivan, Chairman, RULES FOR CHRISTIAN LIVING.

A few rules for the regulation and guidance of the Christian life are suggested by the Temple Magazine, of Philadelphia; "They have proved effective in a considerable degree in our case, and they may do so in yours. Never partake of breakfast until you have pledged yourselves with God to do something for the welfare of your fellow-men, and the glory of his name, before you go to rest again. If, as the day wears on, you are in doubt as to whether a certain thing you want to do is right or not, just go away privately for a few moments and ask God's direction; if you can not do this, you may take it for granted that even your conscience condemns it, and, therefore, it must be wrong. Never neglect to read your Bible, for through the Bible God speaks to you. Never forget to pray, for by prayer you speak with God. Never measure yourselves by other Christians, or you will be found wanting when weighed in the balances; Christ is the only standard. If undecided what reply to give a man, or whether or not to grant his request, pause a moment and ask yourselves what would Jesus have done under like circumstances, and you won't make so many mistakes or pain so many hearts. If you have a pet idea on any question of doctrine, just read carefully what the Bible says about it, and believe that, whether it supports your theory or not. It may be hard to renounce old impressions, but you had better do it than risk your chances of life eternal."—Christian Witness.

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

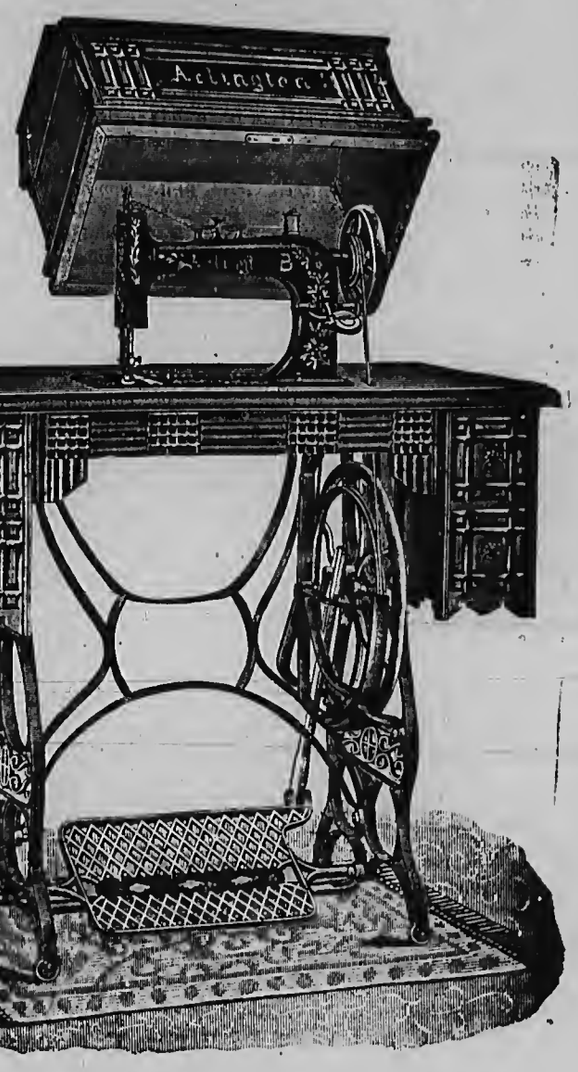
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

The Head is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

Needle Bar is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

Improved Automatic Bobbin Winder which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

Self Threading—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the look stitch.

The Needle is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

Self-Threading Shuttle—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

Loose Pulley for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

Parts Subject to Wear are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Union Pacific railroad has offered free transportation to the Omaha Exposition to about 2000 editors and their wives.

Before decisive action can be commenced in Cuba, it will not only be necessary to drive the Spanish ships from the sea, but also to equip the volunteers.

Official Washington is confident that the Spanish fleet is bottled up in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba. This confidence is not based upon any advices from either Rear Admiral Sampson or Commodore Schley. It is confidence begotten rather of the silence of these officers and of the situation which exists in official circles.

The news event at the Navy Department was the order to the "Monterey" to proceed to Manila to reenforce Admiral Dewey's squadron. The "Monterey" is a tower of strength in herself, and her addition to the admiral's force, together with the dispatch of thousands of troops to Manila, is ample evidence that the administration has assumed no half-hearted attitude toward the Philippine question.

The bill providing for the purchase of vessels to serve as a patrol fleet, and to create an auxiliary naval force to man them, passed the Senate on Friday in the same shape in which it got through the House of Representatives, with the exception that the numerical strength of the force is restricted to 3000 men; whereas the original measure did not limit the number to be enlisted, leaving that to the discretion of the President.

The present war with Spain has demonstrated most conclusively that our fleet is entirely insufficient to either carry on a successful offensive warfare or even properly defend our coast line. Although Spain is but a third-rate power, our entire naval force is required to watch the movement of her ships and attack a few points on the coast line of her colonies. In order to make an attack upon Spain's fleet and colonies, it has been necessary to entirely denude our vast coast line of a naval defense.

The past week has been a period of disappointment for our side of the controversy with Spain. No progress has been made. This does not mean that our arms have suffered a defeat, but it does mean that we have accomplished nothing, and have afforded the Spanish in Cuba additional time for preparation. They have not failed to profit by the respite given them to improve their defenses. Admiral Dewey has remained inactive before Manila, contenting himself with maintaining a blockade of the city. The absence of troops precludes any attempt to take possession. The government at Washington is making every effort to hurry troops to the Philippines. An expedition of fully 15,000 men is to be sent to that distant part of the world, under Major Gen. Wesley Merritt. Since the bombardment of Porto Rico by Admiral Sampson's fleet, the only affair of moment in which the fleet has been engaged has been the cable-cutting incident at Cienfuegos. In this affair there was some determined fighting and some loss on both sides. The cruisers "Marblehead" and "Wilmington" undertook to cut the cable at that place and sent out a party in the small boats to do the work. This party was attacked and fired upon by a considerable force of Spanish troops, but kept to the work assigned and partially succeeded in disabling the cable, although sustaining losses in killed and wounded. The ships shelled the Spanish troops, causing considerable havoc among them. The great event of the week was the successful evasion of the American fleet by the Spanish Cape de Verde squadron, under Admiral Cervera, and its safe arrival at Santiago de Cuba.

FOREIGN.

Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone, the "Grand Old Man," died in England last week.

The condition in Spain is growing more desperate daily, and a revolution is considered inevitable.

The active sympathy manifested by the French people and press for Spain in the present war goes almost to the extent of open hostility towards Americans.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The District Conference at Cleveland was a spiritual and edifying occasion throughout. The preaching was exceedingly good, and the deliberations were with an eye to the advancement of Christianity. All those present and participating felt that it was good to be there because of the Lord's presence and blessing. The great regret was the absence of six of the preachers and nearly all of the lay members. Of the latter there were but nine present—out of about one hundred—to vote for four delegates to represent nineteen pastoral charges and twenty-two hundred members in the Annual Conference. There should be improvement on this line in the near future.

Some of the preachers absent were known to be kept away by personal or family sickness, for which they had the prayerful sympathy of their brethren. The reports from the various charges were, in the main, encouraging, and the outlook is propitious for a successful year in the Greenville district.

Brother and Sister Dorsey and little Vivian at the Cleveland parsonage can entertain delightfully, as this writer, with Brother and Sister Parmer, can testify after several days' experience.

Rev. J. M. Bradley has been compelled to leave his charge for awhile on account of ill-health. We hope he will soon be able to resume his loved employ. Rev. W. O. Sadler, L. P., is supplying his place on Lula charge.

Most gratifying reports are being received from the observance of Children's Day. So far as heard from, Hollendale is in the lead, with several others not far behind.

We, of the North Mississippi Conference, do most heartily endorse the election of Drs. Morrison and Candler to the bishopric, and will most cordially receive them in their official capacity whenever it may be their turn to come to us, and at any time we should be very glad indeed to welcome them among us, personally and officially.

This scribe did well with his work at Cleveland, and hopes to do full as well or better at Coldwater next week.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

Joseph Barnes, Taylor County, Ga."

$1 a bottle—6 for $5. If your druggist has'nt our GRAYBEARD, order direct, deducting 50c on $5 worth to help you pay freight.

CURES PAIN

A few weeks since we published an editorial notice of the above-named book. Here is our editorial notice:

A NEW BOOK.

THE HOME OF THE BIBLE: WHAT I SAW AND HEARD IN PALESTINE. By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 446 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day; how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

"LIGHT SHALL BE AT EVENTIDE."

(Translation of a Welsh hymn by the late Rev. Dr. E. H. Evans.)

Keep me very near to Jesus,
Tho' beneath his cross it be;
In this world of evil doing
'Tis the cross that cleanseth me.
Should there come distress and darkness,
Let this hope with me abide;
After all the gloom and sorrow,
Light shall be at eventide.

Bring to mind my past experience,
That shall take my fears away;
For thy goodness and thy mercy
Shall be mine till close of day.
Through the tears, the clouds, the tempest,
Shine on me, O Crucified!
There's a promise in God's rainbow—
Light shall be at eventide.

Lead me onward to the future,
Where I fear one step to move;
Still the love of God will keep me—
Love beyond a mother's love.
Calvary has said sufficient—
Hear them sing on yonder side;
Tho' the cross stand in the pathway,
Light shall be at eventide.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

SIXTEENTH DAY—CONFERENCE ADJOURNS.

For sixteen days Conference has been in session in this city. At first the brethren took the work soberly and leisurely enough, but about the fourteenth day there were marked evidences of a desire to get through with the business. The election of Bishops over, some of the delegates began to depart; later more went. On the morning of the sixteenth day there was a heavy slump, and grave doubt arose with reference to a quorum. At the evening session the voting was so light that it became necessary to call the roll to ascertain whether a quorum were present, and so set at rest all doubts. The quorum was present, and the work went on. The third session continued till 11 o'clock P. M., at which time the calendar was cleared. The session throughout was harmonious, of good temper and spiritual tone. Conservatism characterized the actions of the Conference. A considerable part of the work was routine; some of it committing the church to advance movement. There was no spirit of selfishness displayed; the good of the church was placed above personal considerations. The Conference was quick to apprehend merit in a man, and was not slow to express its appreciation.

The report of the Committee on Missions was adopted. The legislation herein contained directs the presiding elders to hold missionary institutes once a year in their respective districts; also to preach at least one sermon a year in each charge in his district. This action is intended to keep the subject of missions before the people continually, and to insure their receiving fresh missionary information.

Another item of interest is the determination to establish a Publishing House in Shanghai, China. The Committee on Publishing Interests offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Book Committee be, and they are hereby authorized and instructed, if they deem it for the best interests of the church, to establish a Publishing House in Shanghai, China, the sum to be expended not to exceed $50,000, and the said expenditure not to be made so as to incur any debt on the part of the church.

The money to carry out this undertaking is to be appropriated from funds received from the government on account of claim made against the government by the Publishing House for damages.

An attempt was made to increase the powers of the District Conference, so that it should be not only the duty of the Conference to license men to preach, but also have the oversight of them, pass upon their character. This, however, failed to pass. The Conference held to the old way now in practice by a small majority. There was also an attempt to so change the law that a local preacher should be tried when the offense was committed. This also failed of passage; more, it appeared, on account of confusion than of intention.

The Conference authorized an increase of the salaries of the editor of the Nashville Advocate, the editor of Sunday-school literature, Book and Review editor, and the editor of the Epworth Era. The salary of each of these officers has been $2,500. It is, by the action of the Conference, increased to $3,000.

The report of the Committee on Education provides that $1,500,000 be raised for educational purposes. The years set for this are 1900 and 1901. This canvass is to be under the direction of the General Board of Education. There is to be no assessment for the purpose indicated, but all is to be free will offerings. Seventy-six per cent. of all moneys so raised is to be retained in the Conference where it was raised for aiding the Conference schools. Eighteen per cent. is to go to the Vanderbilt University to endow the Theological Department. The remainder is to be held as a fund to defray the expenses of the Board incurred in carrying on the canvass. This action of the General Conference to raise a sum equal to one dollar per member is in line with the undertaking of the Wesleyan Methodists, save they intend to raise five dollars per member, and with the M. E. Church and the Canadian Methodists.

"HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN" AGAIN.

This subject is of so much importance that it should be kept constantly before the mind of the reading public. It can not be too much talked of or too much written about for the good of the cause. In order to arouse people to action in anything, it must be kept in agitation; and what we want is to arouse the Methodist people of Mississippi to the point of providing the same educational advantages for our girls that our boys are getting at Millsaps College.

Thanks to the facile pen of lay brethren, ministerial brethren, doctors of divinity, and college presidents, the ball seems to be in motion on the subjects of higher education for women and an endowed Conference college for Mississippi girls. We hope this state of things portends something tangible in the future. Thought and agitation must precede action. When the rumbling within a volcano is heard an eruption is supposed to be near at hand. The waters are being troubled. May the day soon come when one of our Conference schools for girls can step in and be healed of her disabilities! There is much yet to be done, however, before the stepping-in time can come. There are difficulties to be overcome which will require time, thought, and effort. One of these difficulties is presented in the communication of Rev. J. W. Honnoll in the ADVOCATE of May 5—that is, the strain on our people to pay taxes for a State school, and at the same time to support a Conference school. If there is any way for this mountain of a difficulty to be removed, all others will become as mole-hills. Approach almost any church member on the subject of a contribution for the endowment of one of our church schools for girls, and he will hold up the "almighty dollar" of taxation for the support of the State school before his eyes, and it is large enough to shut out Christian education, church pride, and, alas! we must say, sometimes even love for Christ. I say "Amen!" to the suggestion to let those do so who prefer to patronize a State school, but let them pay for it, and leave our church people free to support their own schools. We can have both. Church people can support and patronize their own schools, and not interfere with the patronage of the State schools, and vice versa; and why not?

Another difficulty to be removed is to educate our people up to the point of realizing that a superficial education is no longer sufficient for our girls. The time has come when the girl must take her place by the side of her brother in the counting-room, in the telegraph office, and even in the doctor's study, as well as other positions for bread-winning now thrown open to her; and to cope with him in point of salary, she must be educated equally with him. Some are now contending that the ballot for women will produce the effect of equal pay for equal work; but I believe equal education will do more toward bringing about this much-to-be desired result than the ballot ever will.

Why should not Methodist people, or, bringing the matter still nearer home, why should not the Methodists of Mississippi have a school for their girls which can fit them for solving the bread-and-meat problem of life? And girls do have this problem to solve. If girls do not find in our church schools facilities to fit them for the practical duties of life—and that means higher education, for the better one is educated, the better fitted she is for life's duties in any capacity—they will go to our public schools and State colleges to seek these facilities. So, if we want to keep our own girls, we must prepare ourselves to give them what they need.

The resolutions drafted by the Conference committee on the correlation of Conference schools, at the meeting at Jackson a few weeks ago, are pointed, pithy, and practicable, well calculated to produce abundant fruit, provided our Methodist people will weigh, ponder, and consider them carefully, and act accordingly. If we are going to have a college in name, it ought to be a college in reality, and not a female seminary sailing under college colors. Our Mississippi Conferences ought to have an endowed college for girls, one which will give them equal advantages with the boys from a literary standpoint, and likewise furnish facilities for special departments of practical education, such as dress-making, book-keeping, stenography, telegraphy, and even medicine. Why should not our girls have opportunity to become physicians, and have this opportunity right here at home? There surely ought to be enough Methodist money and enough Methodist patronage in Mississippi to endow and support such a school; and while I do not believe in being selfish, I do believe that Methodist money and Methodist patronage ought to be for Methodist schools. I think, however, the wisest and most economical plan for us to adopt will be to lay hold of one of the horns of "Dr. Featherstun's dilemma" by electing one of our numerous schools for girls, that one to be chosen with a view to economy by taking into consideration the advantages it already affords as to locality, health, buildings, grounds, curriculum, apparatus, etc.; and, selling off all our other school property, let us consolidate, concentrate, and rally to the support of this one school, and thus we will be enabled to quit "playing at" running colleges for girls, and to make one which shall be an honor to Methodism and a blessing to coming generations, and that, too, free and independent of co-education.

"IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER OR WORSE?"

In answer to this interesting question, Dr. Hillis, pastor of Central Music Hall Church, Chicago, presented an immense array of facts on a recent Sunday. "When Washington died," said Dr. Hillis, "the streets of Boston and Philadelphia were unpaved. Benjamin Franklin tells us that, looking out from his office window, he saw daily horses mired in the streets of Philadelphia. From this came his plan for street pavement. At the same time in London the streets were filled with mire and filth, and the gentleman was carried about in a sedan chair by his servants. The use of street lamps was almost unknown. How miserable was the life that children led! Leather was so dear that the boys and girls went barefooted through most of the year. If the boy had a headache, he was bled profusely. When the bleeding intensified the headache, he was drenched with calomel. The schools of New England were open two months in the Winter for boys and two months in the Summer for girls. The schoolmaster's principal duty was flogging. Quincy tells us that he spent three weeks upon one question in long division, and was flogged every night for not being able to solve it. Sanitation was unknown. Streets were undrained, wells digged in the reeking soil, springs were horribly defiled, root cellars were under all the houses. Every fifth person on the street was terribly disfigured with small-pox. In the open country the death rate of 1790 was higher than in the worst tenement districts of New York in 1890. In 1790 the death rate in the towns was higher than the death rate to-day in the yellow-fever districts of the South.

"Many are pessimists by reason of the rum traffic, the gambling, and the speculative tendencies of our age. Dreadful enough are all these vices. They threaten our national life. Unless they can be checked, the future is dark. Nevertheless, the contrast with former times encourages hope. Some years ago, after a long struggle, the Louisiana State Lottery was finally expelled from our land. The sale of lottery tickets through the United States mail was made a criminal offense. In this victory the whole land rejoiced. But how striking the change in sentiment! Ninety years ago the lottery was the favorite form of benevolence. Schools, colleges and churches were built thereby. In the year 1800, in Providence, an Episcopal Church held a lottery, of which the grand prize was $8 000. In 1795 the Legislature of Rhode Island granted a lottery for 'the advancement of religion and the building of a church.' The library of Harvard College was built by the sale of lottery tickets, and good orthodox Princeton College adopted the same method of advancing its interests. Even the English government went into the lottery business. At one time the authorities of London were selling lottery tickets for twenty different objects.

"Drunkenness also was well-nigh universal. Births, marriages, funerals, the dedication of public buildings and churches—all were consecrated with liquor. Each business transaction was concluded with drink. For the hostess not to offer wine to her lady callers was an offense against good breeding. Dr. Chambers, of Philadelphia, tells us that in 1825 he went to a funeral of a prominent member of his church, and that he and the sexton were the only persons who were not in danger of falling into the grave through drunkenness. On the next Sunday he told his people that he would never again officiate at a funeral of a church member where liquor was freely distributed. As late as 1835, a deacon in a prominent church in Boston was, at the same time, a distiller of whisky and an agent for the Bible Society. If the scandals of to-day are great, the scandals of a hundred years ago were infamous. Many vices of that day are now utterly unknown, and not one single vice or crime can be mentioned that has not been so strikingly decreased as to encourage the hope of its final extermination.

"In Delaware in 1790 twenty crimes were punishable with death. In Connecticut the counterfeiter's ears were cropped. In Philadelphia the coin clipper was branded upon the forehead with a large C. The historian tells us that the tread-mill was never silent, the pillory and the stocks were never empty, the lash and the branding-iron and the gallows always in use. Jailers knew no way of silencing the moanings of insane persons save to hang them up by the thumbs and flog them until they were quiet from exhaustion. The whole world was horrified by the accounts of the Black Hole in Calcutta, but McMaster tells us that in 1820 the jails of New England exceeded the terrors of that Indian prison."—Advance.

WOMAN TO THE FRONT.

Methodism, beginning in a patriarchal form of government, has been gradually making its way to a vigorous and well-organized democracy.

Our forefathers believed that all ecclesiastical power was lodged with the ministry; that preachers were called to govern, and laymen to be governed. The war of the States perfected a revolution already begun; the South was defeated, humbled; the Methodist Church, South, had been almost torn to tatters. Something had to be done, and we had men wise enough to do it. To reorganize with vigor, to fortify against the second invading army, the M. E. Church, it was found necessary to throw the franchise to the laity, who did not formally demand it. This was resurrection from the dead, and since that day the M. E. Church, South, has made rapid strides in all departments of soul-saving work, as well as in wealth, numbers, and respectability.

Revolutions never go backward. The logic that freed the men has also freed the women.

Slow has been the evolution of ideas in the world as to the importance of women. At first a slave, then an object of worship, then a companion, she is coming to be recognized as man's equal and co-laborer in all departments of human activity.

In church work she was for ages the silent partner.

Fifty years ago only about three occupations were open to women; now they obtain employment in not less than three hundred. Woman's ecclesiastical enfranchisement has kept pace with her industrial enfranchisement. The churches are waking up to her power and influence. The enfranchisement of three-fifths of the church membership of Christendom was a tremendous augmentation of the working force of Christianity.

The propriety of organizing a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in the M. E. Church, South, was doubted. It equinted of "woman's rights," but it was organized, all the same, and time and results have demonstrated the wisdom of the movement.

But logic is omnipotent. No power can keep premises and conclusions apart. If women could help in the evangelization of the heathen, why could they not aid in carrying the gospel to the poor of the cities, the sparsely settled portions of our country, and to the Indians of the West? If she could aid in extending the work in heathen lands, why could she not aid in extending it in our own land? Why could she not aid in building churches in communities not able to stand alone? If it was necessary for the church to go to housekeeping, who could forward this work more successfully than the dear housekeepers of the church? If it was necessary to the stability and perpetuity of the work that the preachers should have homes, who knows the value of a home as do women, and who are more likely than women to enter enthusiastically into the work of building homes for the preachers and supplying them with furniture?

Women are the best financiers in the world. They are generally practical, seldom visionary; they look at finances in a dry light; they see by intuition what men reach by long and doubtful processes of reasoning; they do not build castles in the air—they build on the ground, or, rather, upon a rock. Hence their eminent usefulness in parsonage and home mission work.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society is the right wing of the great church extension movement, and it is a branch of the army that never falters and never quails in the face of the enemy. It is one of the chief factors in the onward progress of the gospel in our wide-extended country. It will share some of the chief honors in that glorious triumph when the mass of American citizenship shall have been imbued with the Spirit of Christ, and the nation shall have come out of the wilderness of ignorance and vice, clear as the sun in religious intelligence, fair as the moon in moral purity, and as terrible to the foes of God as an army with banners.—Midland Methodist.

Mrs. Martha Miller, of Chicago, is said to be the pioneer prison reform worker of this country, having begun her efforts in that line at St. Louis in 1854. Since then she has devoted her entire life to it. She visits a jail and talks with the prisoners, picking out those who have been deserted by their friends. For these she does errands and work outside the jail. She investigates their stories, and if they are found worthy of belief, she goes into court and pleads for them. She collects witnesses, and it is her one purpose above others that no innocent man shall suffer. It was the knowledge of the suffering of a man for a deed which he did not commit that first brought Mrs. Miller to her labor among criminals. She also does much work toward the reformation of released convicts and others. Mrs. Miller is sixty years old.—Zion's Herald.

The afflictions which are sent of God or permitted by him are never intended for his children's destruction, but for their discipline. The shepherd casts his flock into deep waters to wash them, not to drown them. "You will kill that bush if you put that knife into it so deep," said a gentleman to his gardener. "No, sir; I do this every year to keep it from running all to leaves; pruning brings the fruit." We pastors often find God's faithful ones bleeding under the knife, but afterward they yield the peaceable and precious fruits of righteousness and triumphant trust. It is that "afterward" that God has in his mind when he sends the trial. Affliction is the costly school in which great graces are often acquired and from which grand characters are graduated.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

Life is a succession of lessons, which must be lived to be understood. Vigor is contagious, and whatever makes us either think or feel strongly adds to our power, and enlarges our field of action. We owe a debt to every great heart, to every fine genius; to those who have put life and fortune in the cast of an act of justice; to those who have added new sciences—to those who have refined life by elegant pursuits. 'Tis the fine souls who serve us, and not what is called fine society. Fine society in the common acceptation has neither ideas nor aims. It renders the service of a perfumery or laundry, not of a farm or factory. Society wishes to be amused. I do not wish to be amused. I wish that life should not be cheap, but sacred. I wish the days to be centuries, loaded, fragrant.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

I CAN NOT LIVE WITHOUT THEE.

BY ANNA WILSON SIMMONS.

I can not live without thee,
Thou Savior of my soul;
In thee I safely hide me
When tempests darkly roll.

I can not live without thee,
O Friend, so true and near,
Without thy love to bless me,
Without thy tender cheer.

I can not live without thee,
I nestle in thy arms,
And feel thy peace enwrap me
Amid life's rude alarms.

I can not live without thee,
O Savior, all the way;
Tho' shadows oft beset me,
Thou art my light, my day!

THE PRACTICAL VALUE OF AN EPWORTH LEAGUE LIBRARY.

BY MISS VIC THOMPSON, TUPELO, MISS.

(Concluded.)

What a demand there was for Harris' books at our library afterwards, and now they are worn almost entirely out. So it was in regard to Thomas Nelson Page and all the Southern writers we studied at that time; and so it has been with numbers of standard authors whose books fill our library shelves. When you first create an interest in a writer there is no trouble about getting the books read. By meetings of this kind we have introduced our young people to our writers, and then our library aids by furnishing the books for which it is eagerly ransacked. "Scenes in Pioneer Methodism," "Heroines of Early Methodism," "Life of John Wesley," "Character of Jesus," "Manliness of Christ," "The Man of Galilee," "McTyeire's History of Methodism," and similar books which help to fill our library, can be made interesting to our young. I do not think our libraries should be filled entirely with books of this class, however; yet too much care can not be taken in the selection of books for League libraries. Some one should always be put on the committee for this who has given much care and thought to the study of books for the young. Two cultured Christian mothers and our pastor helped us to make our first selection. It is better to have no library at all than to have even a few worthless books in it. We have in ours history, biography, travel, poetry, and the best of fiction. We have, among others for seniors, the works of Prescott, Green, Longfellow, Tennyson, Holmes, Hawthorne, Ruskin, Irving, J. G. Holland, Milton, Cooper, Wordsworth, Lew Wallace, Victor Hugo, Bulwer Lytton, Ian McLaren, Dickens, and Scott; and for children those of G. A. Henty, Mrs. Bolton, Mary Mapes Dodge, Cooper, Eugene Field, Page, Mrs. Burnett, L. M. Alcott, The Pansy Books, etc.

Another thing: Don't resort to church suppers, bazars, and similar things, in order to raise money to buy your books. Leaguers should be educated upon a higher plane in regard to Christian giving. Some years ago we resolved in our League never to resort to things of that kind again, and, in order to test the matter, we asked for fifty dollars for our library through subscription cards on the following Sunday. The Lord blessed our effort so abundantly that we raised over that amount, and, consequently, those of our members who were doubtful as to the wisdom of our resolution were entirely converted to it, and we have never failed since to raise any desired amount when needed. Our leaguers believe in a religion that goes into their pocket-books. Shortly after this resolution in the League the Ladies' Aid Society of our town attempted to have what they called "An Old Maid's Auction" for the benefit of our church. Several of our League girls, who were leaders in the society of the place, refused to take part in it, and, in consequence thereof, nearly all the girls refused, and the affair had to be given up, when it was being supervised by some of the leading married ladies of our town, too. If they did claim that our reason for refusing was on account of the title being so appropriate for some of us, that did not make it true. Then the same thing occurred in regard to what we considered a theatrical performance, and so great is the sentiment that we have created there against all such that they can scarcely have a church supper—in fact, have not attempted to have but few since.

One other point: Be sure you have a librarian who will read ahead of the leaguers and be perfectly familiar with the books. Our library consists of books for both juniors and seniors, and it is very necessary for the librarian to know what books are best for the boys and girls, and, in fact, choose entirely for them. By your League library you will cause many of your young people to begin collecting individual libraries, which fact is of untold practical value. You know Ruskin says: "No book is serviceable till it has been read and re read, and loved and loved again, and marked so you can refer to the passages you want in it as a soldier can seize the weapon he needs in an armory, or a house-wife brings the spice she needs from the store." Many of your leaguers will realize that, and want their own books, especially their favorites.

And now, in conclusion: When I think of all the Epworth League has done for me, entering it, as I did, when the shadows had fallen so thick and fast across my pathway that all was darkness, not even a ray of light to pierce the gloom, with every spring of earthly joy dried up at the source, while from my over burdened heart went up the cry: "Oh, Father, how can I live on? What is it Thou wilt have me do?" Then how I was taught to drink deeply of the living fountain, the fountain opened up for us in the house of David, which has never allowed me to thirst again; and how my life was flooded with light from the very face of my loving heavenly Father, and how his hand has gently, tenderly and lovingly guided me on and on through the changing scenes of my life since, and how my experience has grown richer and broader and fuller, till I feel such a sense of security and know I am safe! Come what may in this life, I am safe in my heavenly Father's love, and his strength is sufficient. I say, when I think of all the League has done for me, and what it has done for thousands and thousands of young people throughout this continent, my heart is filled and thrilled, and I think, Surely it is the dawn of the age when Christ shall come unto us all. An earnest prayer arises from my heart that the recent accusation of Dr. Parkhurst, of Boston, which held the League responsible for the decrease in membership of the M. E. Church in 1897, may not be used against us in the General Conference, to meet in May, but that, on the other hand, the earnest, consecrated young people with whom I have joined hearts and hands now for the last four years in my own State may still be allowed to go forth, united with the vast host whom we met at Chattanooga, and then again at Toronto last year—a mighty army, whose tramp, tramp, shall shake the powers of darkness and conquer the world, "All for Christ." Yes, let every nation see our flag; let us plant our standard, "All for Christ," on every shore. "And if, in marching onward, some of our young soldiers should pitch their tents on the other side, and their names should suddenly be transferred to the 'roll' up yonder—all is well. That is the city of immortal youth. The inhabitants never grow old. There is no seared and yellow leaf on the tree of life. The air is always soft and balmy. No frost-laden breezes ever blow. The flowers never scatter their petals in the dust of the tomb. It is the land of fadeless day."

THE PHILOSOPHY OF A REVIVAL.

BY REV. J. MARVIN NICHOLS.

"From victory unto victory
His army he shall lead,
Till every foe is vanquished,
And Christ is Lord indeed."

Such is the triumphant shout of the militant hosts in their advance upon the territory of Christless millions.

Religious awakenings have their philosophy. The destiny of an immortal soul turns on a definite, pivotal point. There is an explainable reason why many are out of harmony with God. A disposition exists to locate all the responsibility of the unsaved state in the heart of the sinner. Any position assumed by the sinner relative to grace is the result, not the cause, of a revival. The point of religious upheaval is in the heart of the church. The hinge of destiny is the Christian world. The qualifications for the evangelization of the globe are locked up in Zion. That a sinner's conscience is seared; that men are ignorant of divine law; that grace, in its general diffusion, hath appeared unto all men—on these no revival is ever predicated. David asserted the philosophical basis of a revival when he said: "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

The complete conquest of the world revolves around some central point in the plan of redemption. To discover this fact is to discover the philosophic basis of a true revival. To control it is to solve the problem of the ultimate redemption of the world. The communities, strangers to revivals, are those dominated by lifeless, worldly churches. An inviting field is one in which sin is at high tide. Here, under holy guidance, a great awakening may be had. The circumscribed and almost hopeless fields are dominated by churches whose life indicates the form, but denies the power of godliness. Such are pregnant with the seeds of infidelity. Inconsistencies, like microbes, float in moral atmosphere. Where creed and life part company, unbelief is born. The atmosphere of a worldly church is freighted with moral microbes, the very breathing of which is soul destroying.

Four elements form the genesis of a revival. The Holy Ghost must do his office-work, the power of the gospel must become manifest, divine grace must abound, the church must recognize her relation of co laborship in the conquest of sin. In these basic facts must be found the explanation of the question, "Why are some yet unsaved?" Too many forget that religion, when forced in to recluse, hermit life, must perish. It is almost forgotten that every birth, in the course of human events, links an immortal soul to Calvary or invites its doom. We overlook the sense in which we are each other's progeny. No man liveth unto himself; none of us dieth unto himself. To this end were we born, that God, through us, might reveal the wonders of an endless life.

A sinner finds no refuge in the excuse that his heart is no longer responsive to the calls of the Spirit. A non-revival church finds no comfort in the thought that the Holy Spirit has ceased to woo. A worldly church can not predicate the absence of a revival on such flimsy fabrications. The Holy Ghost will perform his work. Before him the world must stand and listen to his ministry. He may knock at every heart, and yet a revival be postponed. He has come to reprove the world of sin, righteousness and judgment. If the ground of a revival lay in the efficiency of the Holy Ghost, nations would be born to God in a day.

Neither can an absent revival be explained in the fact that men are ignorant of the gospel. True, Paul said that he was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it was the power of God unto salvation. There is a close analogy between civil and divine law. As the power of the civil law lies in the sentiment of the people who made it, so the power of the gospel exists in the real Christ—the representation of the will of the Father. Again: the civil law is but the means by which the moral quality of an act may be determined. So it is with divine law. There is but one law—the law of right. Focalized in the Christ, it is the end of the law for righteousness. God's statute-book contains no law for sin; no law exists for murder, theft, profanation. God ordains the law of right; man creates the law of sin. The transgression itself is the sin. The law is the rule of right, whose opposite is the rule of wrong. The quality of the act must always be determined by the opposite to the law of right in the case. The law of sin is an earthly, human creation, since the violation of a law of right is sin—transgression is sin. Again: ignorance of the law excuses no one. No revival hinges on a knowledge of the Bible, even though primarily it is the power of God unto salvation. Many men, wholly unable either to read or hear, have been the happy recipients of divine favor.

The third element in the genesis of a revival is that grace abounds to all men alike. The absence of a revival wave is not due to the inoperativeness of the Spirit, ignorance of the Word, nor to the powerlessness of divine grace. The boundary between the saint and the sinner, in the realm of grace, is in the exercise of an evangelical faith. Up to that point they both alike approach. The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men. As the rich and the poor stand beneath the warming rays of the same sun, so the saint and the sinner stand beneath the rays of the same benign light. The pivot of a revival is in neither of these three elements, notwithstanding their pre-eminent necessity.

The fourth element in a revival is: the church must appreciate her colaborship in the conquest of sin. Here is the pivotal point; it is the incarnation of the other three. Human instrumentality is the contingency Christ made to all his possible victories. The Holy Spirit is invincible, the Word is destined to girdle the earth, the sway of Christ is world wide. Notwithstanding all this, Christ put certain boundaries to his work. Divine as it is, he limits it by the efficiency of personal work. "Ye are the salt of the earth," is a statement of possibilities. It has its limitations; "but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted?" "Ye are the light of the world," is an assertion of redemptive power. It has its boundary, "Let your light so shine before men." The sweep of the cross is in, "I will draw all men unto me." Christ circumscribed his ordained plan by the limitation, "If I be lifted up." The gospel is no purer, in its outward effect, than the heart through which it is filtered. The human soul is the canvass upon which the whole plan is to be described. A saved man must be the illustration of redemption. Theoretically, "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them which are lost;" practically, "It is given unto you to know the mystery of the gospel." As a church, we represent the kingdom. In the absence of Christ we beseech the world to be reconciled to God. The genesis of a revival is in the fact that the gospel a sinner reads is the living demonstration of Jesus' power to save.

We must recognize our place. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is a sin." Necessity creates duty. The Eggleston light-house bears the inscription, "To give light and save life." God intends that we stand near the reef. The point of danger is the point of duty. The deeper seas float a vessel above the instruments of death. There are no shipwrecks in mid-ocean. The basis for a great revival wave is in the truth that the Christ life revolved around the point of duty, "He went about doing good." His people must, therefore,

"Rescue the perishing, care for the dying,
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave;
Weep o'er the erring one, lift up the fallen,
Tell them of Jesus, the mighty to save."

The church is doomed to irreparable loss who forgets that

"Down in the human heart, crushed by the tempter,
Feelings lie buried that grace can restore;
Touched by a loving hand, wakened by kindness,
Chords that were broken will vibrate once more."

Destinies are interlinked, the race is intertwined; break one thread, and the immortal fabric is marred. The world's great heart is like an organ vast; the sweep of the individual hand may produce harmony or discord. No man reaches heaven or hell alone; we go at least by twos. No man sins but what the painful jar moves the realm of spirit. Disturb one, and you disturb all. Wreckage is the inevitable when atoms are in commotion. "Am I my brother's keeper?" Yes, in that with my own hand I shapen another's fortunes. Shadowy spirits, ghastly from their impending doom, await our mutual condemnation. Destiny knows no individuality; we are all partners in the struggle; so much so that the wail of one is the doom of another, the shout of one another's victory.

"FAITH . . . WORKETH BY LOVE."

(Gal. v, 6.)

BY REV. J. M. DEAVENPORT.

On every hand many bewail a lack of faith. "If I only had faith," is the yearning cry of many hungering souls. To aid such to a sweeter repose in God is the object of this paper.

In the first place, let us discern between that "faith" commonly treated of by philosophers, which is a mere habit of the understanding whereby we assent to the truth upon the authority of the testifier, and that "faith" which not only believes the truth testified and promised in the gospel, but also knows Christ. (St. John xvii, 3.) With that cold intellectual assent to truth commonly called "faith," this paper has nothing to do, but with "faith which worketh by love." Love is the soul of faith. So closely are they allied they can not be separated. Faith without love is like the light of the sun without warmth—inactive, dead. Such faith wicked men and devils have. We can not exercise faith in anyone. In fact, we can not have faith in a Being we do not know. The Jews made this fatal mistake. They claimed God as their Father, and did not know him. (St. John viii, 54, 55.) We may know of God as Job did, "by the hearing of the ear," or we may believe, in an intellectual way, the Bible to be a revelation from God; but "to know God and Jesus Christ, whom he has sent" (John xvii, 3), is infinitely beyond this.

In order to faith, we must not only have a revelation from God, but also a revelation of God. In the Holy Scriptures we have all the revelation from God needed, but, in addition to this, we must each of us have an individual revelation of God; must not only know of him, or believe in him, upon what others say, but, like those of Samaria (St. John iv, 42), be able to say, "Now we believe, not because of thy saying, for we have heard him ourselves" (St. John x, 27), "and know that this is indeed the Christ."

We all study the same Bible, but we do not all see the same God revealed there; hence we do not all worship the same Being. We agree, however, in calling the object we worship God, but the God we really worship is as varied as our conceptions of God, and our conceptions differ so widely that each may be said to worship a different God. The Being we inwardly conceive to be God is the Being we worship. If our conceptions of the character of God be distorted, all else with reference to him will be so, for the tendency of all worship is to conform us to the object worshiped. The character of the God we worship will always determine the quality of our faith, and the character we attribute to God depends altogether upon the state of our own hearts. To the supremely selfish and sinful God must always appear the opposite to what he really is. It is written, "God is angry with the wicked every day." God is really the opposite. "God is love," but to the soul dominated by sin he appears "angry." To the pardoned soul the predominating attribute of God is "mercy," while to those "made perfect in love" God is love. As we ascend the spiritual altitudes from sin to holiness, faith becomes more natural, and is at once seen to depend wholly upon altitude.

Our conception of God depends altogether upon our spiritual nearness to him; our nearness to him upon personal purity. Those nearest him are most like him. Those most like him are those "made perfect in love," for God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. (I. John iv, 16.) To those "made perfect in love" God is seen as love, and the heart instinctively has faith in him. This is an inexorable law. The beautiful in man can not help admiring the beautiful anywhere; so, out of the abundance of love we love. This is the apostle's argument: that because God is love, we must be made perfect in love to love him. So Christ (St. John xvii, 26) prayed "that the love wherewith the Father had loved him might be in us," knowing that if the same love was there, faith and obedience—"the obedience of faith"—would be forthcoming. Surely, if we loved God as Jesus did, we would both trust and obey him. "Faith worketh by love." Here the question arises, Can God reveal himself as love to any but those made perfect in love? Or, in other words, Until we are made perfect in love, will not God always appear otherwise to us than as love? None but the pure in heart see God (Matt. v, 8), because God is pure. "Without holiness no man in this or any other world shall see God," for God is holy.

The law of affinity with the same unvarying constancy prevails here. Those beings most like God by an inevitable law are nearest him and see him clearest. The "pure in heart"—those made perfect in love—are most like God. The pure in heart see God as he really is—as love. Seeing him thus, they can no more help trusting him than a body above the earth's surface can help falling. The "law of faith" is as immutable as the law of gravitation. The earth's gravity is the cause of the body falling. When the cause of "faith" is present—which is "perfect love"—the law is as fixed and unvarying. This perfect confidence and repose adheres in love. It is impossible to love and not trust. "Faith worketh by love." Faith is the effusion of love. To know God is to love him; not merely know of him, or know him as Creator, etc. There is another way to know him which is "life eternal;" an individual personal revelation of God in the person of Jesus Christ to our inner consciousness; a soul-satisfying, spiritual cognition as profound as the Spirit of God can make it, that God is love. Unless you know God thus, he will never be real to you; and unless he is real to you, how can you trust him? When you really love God you will trust him. From whence shall I have this revelation of Jesus "as the chiefest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely?" First, upon bended knees and uplifted heart look into your Bible until you have a revelation of yourself. Having seen yourself as God sees you, one glance will cause you to cry as Job did. (See Job xlii, 5, 6.) Then, by separation from "all sin and self, continue in the revelation from God until you have a revelation of God." (St. John xiv, 21, 22, 23; xvi, 21, 22, 23.) This revelation of God in the person of Jesus Christ will change eternally the current of your life as it did Isaiah's (Isaiah vi, 1-8) and Paul's (Acts ix, 3), and forever settle the questionings of faith.

"ALL RIGHTS RESERVED"

These words are well enough on the covers of magazines or title-pages of books, as a precaution against literary piracy; but when they appear stamped on the faces of folks, it is quite another thing. We have all seen such people. They are full to the brim of a sense of their own importance, and extremely jealous of the slightest encroachment upon their precious privileges. "No trespassing" appears in bold letters on every portion of their anatomy. They stand upon their dignity with a stiffness that rarely permits them to sit down or take much ease. Their high claims are set forth—if not in words, at least in manner—on every occasion, and they plainly show that not an atom will be abated from them on any account. They are sticklers for the last farthing, and would rather die than yield a point of precedence, or allow to pass without challenge and resentment whatever they consider an infringement on their honor. They are continually suspicious, most uncomfortable to be with, and so fond of justice that they entirely ignore mercy and are very chary of common civility. Alas! for such. We pity them. Few things are more effective in producing a thoroughly unlovely habit of mind than the perpetual insistence upon the utmost limit of our rights. There is far greater nobility in the cheerful waiving of rights for the comfort and pleasure of others. Generosity is better than justice in this matter. Instead of "all rights reserved," let the motto be: All duties thankfully acknowledged and faithfully performed.—Zion's Herald.

Thirty years ago the Bible was read a great deal and studied very little. Now it is studied a great deal and read very little. Whether anything has been really gained by the swing of the pendulum it doth not yet appear; but it is pretty clear that neither the old nor the new way is going to bring about the desired results. He who uses the Bible as a reading-book only misses many things according to the letter, but he who uses it as a text-book only misses many things according to the spirit. We need to get at the letter as well as the spirit, but what we should be reminded of to-day is that we need to get the spirit as well as the letter. We can not live by merely analyzing our bread; we must eat it.—Bible Reader.

INDIAN MISSION.

In my last article I promised to submit a plan, in the near future, by which the Choctaw Indians within the bounds of our Conference can be speedily evangelized, which I herewith submit, namely: 1. To serve as far as practicable Choctaw preachers for the work; place one of them in charge of two settlements, who shall live in one of his respective settlements, and preach to each of these settlements twice per month. Four months in each year have him to teach a school among them—one school in each settlement. This will require but eight months in the year. Let him close his Winter term the last of February; then in March, April and May have him to make a crop of corn, cotton, potatoes, cane, etc., which will yield about as follows:

Eight months' teaching	$175
Corn, 100 barrels, 50 cents	50
Cotton, 2 bales	50
Potatoes, 50 bushels	15
Cane, 50 gallons	20
Total	$310

These are no imaginary calculations which can not be effected, but which can be realized even by a Choctaw preacher, and, without a cent's appropriation, is far more than they usually make. And should we use more white preachers, till we can secure enough Choctaw preachers, they can even do better than this. They can realize at least $200 teaching school, and if he shall be furnished with land, the Choctaws will readily assist him in cultivating ten or fifteen acres of land, and make a bountiful supply of everything he shall need in the way of farm produce. And, at most, $200 appropriation from the Board will give him a comfortable living among them.

2. To colonize them. This can be easily done by selecting the settlements already occupied by them largely and purchase such lands as are practicable, and sell to each one of them who has no home a suitable amount for his working force—say from 10 to 40 acres, and have them make annual rent payments on it with a low rate of interest, and within five or six years they will have paid for it; and the original amount expended, with a moderate interest, will again be in our hands to reinvest, and so on. So that with a moderate sum of money—say $1,000 or $1,200—the whole population, consisting of about fifteen or eighteen settlements, can another year be put under the influence of the gospel. And then, as our finances increase, we can from time to time purchase lands as above stated, and in the course of ten or fifteen years we can have them Christianized, educated, and largely, if not entirely, colonized. And by this time they will be practically self-sustaining.

3. How this money can be raised. Let each pastor in our Conference appoint a committee of one in each congregation to raise as much as $5 and upwards annually for the Indian Mission—say for the next five years—provided the mission is continued. There are 433 church organizations in our Conference. Averaging $5 each, will give us the sum of $2,165. To make sure, we will divide it by 2, which gives us still $1,082.50. Let our Board of Missions petition the Parent Board to take a half interest in the mission, which I believe they will do. Let some one interested in the mission correspond with our congressmen and induce them to use their influence in securing to these Indians their pro rata share of the appropriation made by Congress annually for the education of the Choctaws, which, when secured by our State, will greatly increase the salaries of their teachers and afford increased facilities for their education. Let applications be made to and help secured from the Board of Church Extension and parsonage building as for other circuits and missions, and you have the solution of the problem. This will place upwards of $2,000 annually in the church's hands; $1,000, or $1,200, to be used in supporting the preachers, and the balance to the material development of the mission.

But to adopt this plan it will be necessary for one man to be put in charge of the entire enterprise, whose duty shall be to travel from one settlement to another, work up and secure schools for the helpers or preachers, to counsel, advise and direct them, and, if practicable, to teach the teachers and preachers (should they be Choctaws) one or two months in the year, to select and buy suitable lands, make sales to the Choctaws, collect payments, direct in building houses of worship and parsonages, to preach whenever and wherever practicable, more especially to assist in revival services, which, if done, the mission will prove a success; otherwise it will be a slow and tedious effort, and attended with more or less failure.

Yours fraternally,

J. N. TUCKER.

FAILURE AND SUCCESS.

Failure and Success passed away from earth and found themselves in a foreign land. Success still wore her laurel wreath which she had worn on earth. There was a look of ease about her whole appearance; and there was a smile of pleasure and satisfaction on her face, as though she knew she had done well and deserved her honors.

Failure's head was bowed; no laurel wreath encircled it. She was wan and pain-engraven. She had once been beautiful and hopeful, but she had long since lost both hope and beauty. They stood together, these two, waiting for an audience with the Sovereign of the foreign land. An old gray-haired man came to them and asked their names.

"I am Success," said Success, advancing a step forward and smiling at him, and pointing to her laurel wreath.

He shook his head. "Ah," he said, "do not be too confident. Very often things go by opposite names in this land. What you call Success, we often call Failure; and what you call Failure, we call Success. Do you see these two men waiting there? The one nearer to us was thought to be a good man in your world; the other was generally accounted bad. But here we call the bad man good, and the good man bad. That seems strange to you. Well, then, look yonder. You consider that statesman to be sincere, but we say he was insincere. We chose as our poet-laureate a man at whom your world scoffed. Ay, and those flowers yonder; for us they have a fragrant charm; we love to see them near us. But you do not even take the trouble to pluck them from the hedges where they grow in rich profusion. So you see, what we value as a treasure, you do not value at all."

Then he turned to Failure. "And your name?" he asked, kindly, though indeed he must have known it.

"I am Failure," she said sadly.

He took her by the hand. "Come, now, Success," he said to her; "let me lead you into the Presence Chamber."

Then she who had been called Failure, and was now called Success, lifted up her bowed head and raised her weary frame, and smiled at the music of her new name. And with that smile she regained her beauty and her hope. And hope having come back to her, all her strength returned.

"But what of her?" she asked, regretfully, of the old gray-haired man; "must she be left?"

"She will learn," the old man whispered. "She is learning already. Come now; we must not linger."

So she of the new name passed into the Presence Chamber. But the Sovereign said: "The world needs you, dear and honored worker. You know your real name; do not heed what the world may call you. Go back and work, but take with you this time unconquerable hope."

So she went back and worked, taking with her unconquerable hope and the sweet remembrance of the Sovereign's words, and the gracious music of her real name.—From "Ships That Pass in the Night," by Beatrice Harraden.

MINISTERIAL TEMPTATIONS.

In an article on "Ministerial Temptations," the Rev. James Stalker, D. D., warns against the danger of professionalism. He thus speaks: "The solemnity of even the most solemn scenes may wear off. Through constant repetition the experiences which at the first move the heart to its depths may cease to impress. There is a sense in which a minister's work is business like that of other people. He must, if he is to retain his position, give certain hours to study and certain hours to visiting, and he must make certain appearances in the pulpit; and he may come to perform these duties with an eye to those by whom he is employed. Thus he may descend from the pulpit feeling that he has done his duty and that his task is over, but with no anxiety as to whether or not any spiritual results follow. Only, if a minister yields to this state of mind, his work loses all its value and his own soul dies. He is no longer a minister of Christ, but only the mask of a minister; and though his talent may be brilliant enough to maintain his position, his success is only a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. It is only when a minister, as he visits, really carries on his heart the sorrows of his people, and as he studies, feeds first his own soul with the Word, and as he preaches, keeps in his eye, first and last, the spiritual profit of his hearers, that he merits the name he bears. I sometimes think that the causes of failure in the ministry are to be found mainly in this region. Failure is not due to want of ability or lack of diligence; but the unseen fibres which should take hold on the divine realities have withered; and if this has happened, a man may be a respectable ecclesiastic, or learned professor, or an eloquent orator, but he can not be a spiritual power."

CONCERNING HASTE TO BE RICH.

The Scriptures place covetousness among deadly sins. Several recent events have impressively taught the danger of undue haste to be rich. We have seen men, who were deemed respectable citizens, found guilty of sacrificing honor and honesty for sordid gain. In a Western town two men are at this moment on trial, accused of the unprovoked murder of a near relative to secure the insurance on his life. Such things teach an emphatic lesson to all. If he that hateth his brother is a murderer, he that hath a selfish greed of gain cherishes a feeling that has prompted many to deeds of dishonesty and crime. And yet this haste to be rich is one of the most common characteristics of the times. Every man has a right by industry and honest enterprise to improve his circumstances. But many who are fairly supplied with the necessaries of life betray extreme impatience of the ordinary methods of gaining wealth, and spend much time thinking out schemes to get wealth without earning it. All such men are standing in slippery places. Charges of dishonesty and corruption are hurled about without arousing any strong indignation. It seems as if the consciences of many have become blunted by familiarity with charges of corruption. This state of things largely arises from the slavish worship paid to wealth. Mammon worship is the sin of our age. Money is with many the cure-all for all earthly ills. The majority greatly need to learn the lesson that what a man is is more important than what he possesses.—Guardian

HERITAGE BY WILL.

He lived in England and worked as a porter in a railway station. One day a gentleman went up and inquired his name. "John ——," was the reply. "Then I have come to tell you that you are the Earl of ——, and entitled to a large estate."

Do you think that man stood about the station touching his cap for tips any longer? Not he. He took possession of his inheritance at once.

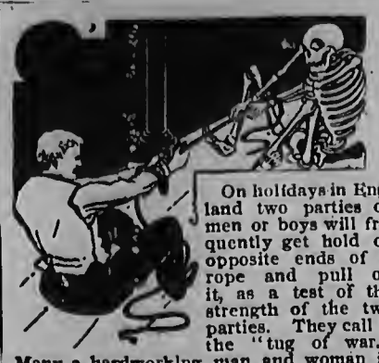
That is just what we Christians should do, says one of our contemporaries. The Holy Spirit tells us that we are "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ;" therefore, let us take full possession of our inheritance, as Christ has done. He has condescended to call us brethren; we, if we believe him, must humbly claim our brother's help in all our difficulties, instead of begging from those who have not our privileges.

While Christians live below their duties, they also live below their privileges. If a Christian man could but realize he was an heir of God and co-heir with Christ, there would not be much grambling on his part at this or that, nor depression of spirit, because things turned out differently from his expectation. Suppose we were to try living by this thought for an hour or two.—Southern Churchman.

When a man has not a good reason for doing a thing, he has one good reason for letting it alone.—Thomas Scott.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jas. M. Martin, P. C., Delhi, La., May 26: "The eighth day of this month was a day which will not soon be forgotten by the people of this little city. First, because the day was a perfect one. Not a cloud could be seen from the dawn of the morning till the sun was hidden behind the western horizon. Second, it was the occasion of the annual 'Children's Day' service for our church. The decorations on the interior of the church were superb. The children acquitted themselves to the delight and, I trust, the profit of the immense audience, reflecting credit on themselves and on the skillful training of the managers, Mrs. W. P. Sims and Mrs. W. S. Buchanan. Our faithful organist, Miss Irene Mason, discharged her duty to the entire satisfaction and pleasure of all. Some of the services were profoundly impressive. The collection was good—$7.35.—I have been informed that this was the most interesting 'Children's Day' ever held in Delhi. About the happiest one present was this scribe. He did not have to preach; nothing to do but to listen to the children, and receive nice things—a basket of beautiful flowers. The flowers were presented to me by ten little girls. Every pastor should make an effort to have 'Children's Day' in his charge, as the Discipline suggests."



On holidays in England two parties of men or boys will frequently get hold of opposite ends of a rope and pull on it, as a test of the strength of the two parties. They call it the "tug of war." Many a hardworking man and woman in each day's toil, is pulling a "tug of war" with death for an antagonist.

They fail to take proper care of their health. When they suffer from indigestion or a slight bilious attack they "wear it out." After a while these disorders wear out the reckless man or woman and the result is consumption, malaria, rheumatism, or some blood or skin disease. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser tells all about these diseases. It is free to all. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all the maladies named. It cures the cause. It makes the appetite hearty, the digestion perfect, the liver active and the blood pure. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and nerve tonic. Don't let a druggist impose on you with a more profitable substitute.

"I had a very severe pain in the small of my back, where my hips join on to my body, and it hurt so that I thought I was going to come apart," writes Wm. Z. Powers, Esq., of Erin Shades, Henrico Co., Va. "My doctor came and pronounced it rheumatism. He gave me a prescription, but I got no better, but worse. I purchased a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from my druggist and commenced to use it. I began to improve at once and got well. Now I am in perfect health,—no pain, no rheumatism."

Nearly every disease known to doctors and the treatment is described in Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. One thousand and eight pages and over three hundred illustrations. FREE. Send twenty-one one-cent stamps, to cover mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y., for paper-covered copy. There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

AT THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

No 1.

I left Baltimore on the night of adjournment for Washington, arriving before midnight. Next morning I chanced to fall in with a party of genial Missourians en route home from Baltimore, and with them took in Mount Vernon and Arlington. These were: E. B. Craighead, president Central College, lay delegate from the Missouri Conference; J. A. Rich, lay delegate from the Southwest Missouri Conference; Mrs. Rich, Miss Mary Rich, Master Homer Rich, and Miss Goode. On this trip our little party had the good fortune to be chaperoned by a Missouri congressman, Judge Cooney.

Although I had been to Washington before, I had not visited Mount Vernon. This shrine of American patriotism is sixteen miles from Washington, down the Potomac. The old way of reaching it was by steamer. Now you can choose between steamer and trolley car. We chose the latter in order to save time. En route to Mount Vernon you pass through Alexandria, a place well worth visiting because of its historic associations. Christ Church, where Washington worshiped, looks on the exterior just as it did in his day. Some changes have been made, however, in the interior. The pews of colonial days have been substituted by others constructed in accordance with modern ideals; all except the one in which "the Father of his Country" worshiped. This remains just as it was when "Col. Washington" bought it, Feb. 27, 1773. It is marked by a silver plate with a facsimile of his autograph. The communion table, the reading-desk, the chairs, the chandelier, the chancel rail, and the mural tablets of the Lord's Prayer and the Apostles' Creed, and the long-handled purses, alias collection baskets, also remain just as they were in that early springtime of our country's history. The pew occupied by the Lees is inscribed with the name of R. E. Lee. The building also contains two mural tablets in memory of Washington and Lee. All this is authentic, albeit we did not have time to verify it "by the seeing of the eye."

On arriving at Mount Vernon, I was exceedingly surprised at the great natural beauty of the place. I had always thought of it simply as Washington's home and burial-place. I found it, however, a remarkably attractive spot, aside from its historic associations. The Mansion stands on the summit of a hill, which I judge to be about two hundred feet above the broad, placid Potomac, which partly encircles the hill, and then sweeps away to the right beyond the reach of vision. The view from the piazza of the Mansion, and especially from the attractive little Summer-house in front—which the State of Louisiana has the honor of maintaining—is one of enchanting beauty. And the grounds about the Mansion are beautiful in the extreme. The Manslon is built of wood in imitation of stone, and at a little distance the deception is complete. It is 96 feet long by 30 feet wide, exclusive of the piazza, which is fifteen feet wide, with massive square columns 25 feet high. It has two stories and an attic, with good-sized dormer windows. It contains 18 rooms, besides the two kitchens, one at either end, which are obliquely in the rear at a distance of, perhaps, forty feet, but are connected with the main building by colonnades. One of these kitchens was used ordinarily, the other only on great occasions. The two rooms of the Mansion nearest these kitchens were dining-rooms. The "family dining-room" at the right end of the building is not larger than an ordinary family dining-room in use at the present day. This room contains a side-board that belonged to Washington. On the walls are oil portraits of a number of Revolutionary warriors—Marion, Pickens, Moultrie, Sumter, etc. The other, usually called "the banquet-hall," is quite spacious. The ceiling and walls of this room are stuccoed and ornamented with numerous designs, most, if not all, of which are agricultural. The greatest attraction of this room is the mantel-piece, which is constructed of Italian marble and ornamented with such a profusion and variety of carvings as I have never seen elsewhere on one piece of furniture. These carvings are said to have been made by the illustrious sculptor, Canova. On a large mahogany table which stands in the center of the room is a large plateau which was used on great occasions. In this room are numerous articles which were once the property of Washington—vases, silver bracket-lamps, mahogany flower-stands, a surveyor's tripod, and various other things too numerous to mention.

The walls are adorned by numerous portraits of Washington, the most celebrated of which is "Washington before Yorktown," by Peale—a very large picture. There are also portraits of such celebrities as Lafayette, Hamilton, etc.

In the "Main Hall" are three of Washington's swords, the key of the Bastile sent to Washington by Lafayette, bronze medallions of Washington and Lafayette, and several pictures which have hung here since Washington's day.

In the "East Parlor," usually called the "Music Room," one of the chief objects of interest is a harpsichord which Washington ordered from London at a cost of $1 000, as a bridal present for Nellie Custis.

"The West Parlor" contains several articles of interest. We mention a portrait of Louis XVI. of France, a gorgeous carpet made for Washington by order of the same monarch; a portrait of Admiral Vernon, after whom the place was named, and several chairs that belonged to Washington.

"The Library" contains a number of articles that have come down from the time of the great warrior statesman, and with the same brief remark (for want of time) we must dismiss "Mrs. Washington's Sitting-Room."

This completes the apartments on the first floor. Ascending to the second floor, you find in the hall a cabinet containing a suit of clothes worn by Washington, a compass, a reading-glass, and other articles of less note. The chief object of interest on the second floor is the room in which Washington died—an average-sized room, with dressing-room and linen closet. The furniture in this room remains just as it was when the great American closed his eyes upon the scenes of earth. There is a mahogany-table. There are the bed on which he breathed his last, and the chair on which lay at the moment of his death the open Bible from which Mrs. Washington had been reading to him but a short time before. Solemn feelings come over you without your bidding as you look upon these sacred relics.

After Washington's death Mrs. Washington never again occupied this room, but chose a room in the attic immediately above this. This room is quite small, and strikes the beholder as being an unfit tenement for so noble a spirit as Martha Washington, but it had one attraction to her above any other apartment in the great mansion. Through its dormer window (it has only one) she could see the tomb of her saluted dead. In this humble little attic chamber she saw the last of earth, and from it ascended to the skies.

One room on the second floor is called "Lafayette's Room," it being the one occupied by the illustrious marquis when visiting here. It contains portraits of a number of the celebrities of those stirring times.

Another is called "Miss Custis' Room." The furniture in this room is the same as in her day. Few ladies of our time would be willing to swap bedsteads with her. The couch on which she slumbered and dreamed was so high that she had to use a small ladder to get into it. Besides the bedstead, this room contains an antique mirror and a quaint bureau, or chest of drawers.

Several of the bed-chambers on the second floor are very small—much smaller than would be built by any man of means in these times.

The banquet-kitchen is not open to visitors, it being occupied by some of the officials in the employ of the Mount Vernon Association.

"The Family Kitchen," however, is open to all comers, and is never slighted. The broad, deep fire-place appears untouched by the corroding tooth of time. In it swings the old-fashioned crane just as it did when it furnished toothsome viands for "the Father of his Country." The huge brick oven built in the wall also remains to tell its story concerning the culinary customs of the olden time. In this antique kitchen you can buy milk, books, photographs, etc. At a stand near by you can procure quite a variety of Mount Vernon relics, such as wooden hatchets, vases, cups, napkin rings, etc., each having a picture of the Mansion painted on it.

Not far from the family kitchen stands the barn, which was built in 1753 with bricks imported from England. In the coach house near you see the coach in which Washington and Mrs. Washington drove to church at Alexandria, and wherever else they chose to go. A mere glance at it suffices to convince you that it belongs to a past age, so entirely different is it from the wheeled vehicles of the present day.

The spinning house is an object of interest. There stands the antique loom, as rough and clumsy looking an implement as one can well imagine, just where it stood more than a century ago, when it helped to furnish the raiment wherewith the great farmer clothed the slaves who tilled his immense farms along the Potomac.

There are several other houses such as one would naturally expect to find contiguous to the Mansion of a wealthy Virginia farmer in the olden time—meat-house, wash-house, butler's house, ice-house, green-house, servant's houses, etc.

Under the hill immediately on the river bank in front of the left wing of the Mansion is the deer-park. This well-wooded park was used as a deer-park by Washington. After his death, however, it ceased to be used for this purpose until 1887, when Jay Gould gave sufficient funds to put it in proper order and stock it with these nimble-footed denizens of the forest. Here they may be seen at all hours enjoying themselves as they list, unterrified by savage dogs or savage men.

In rear of the Mansion, and near the servants' houses, is the flower garden, which is indeed a thing of beauty. It is kept in fine order. Each square is enclosed by a hedge of box about three feet in height. These hedges were planted many years before Washington's death. These beds of flowers, some of them quite unique in design, are a delight to the eye. Here you see the famous Mary Washington rose, so called by Washington in memory of his mother. Here grows a coffee tree sent to Washington by Thomas Jefferson; also a willow from Napoleon's grave at St. Helena. Cuttings from the various plants in this garden are sold to visitors, and the funds thus procured go into the treasury of the Mount Vernon Association.

To the right of the Mansion, about equi-distant between it and the river, is the new tomb of Washington. The great chieftain was first buried in what is now known as "the old tomb," which is some distance nearer the Mansion. In 1831, owing to an attempt to steal the skull of the illustrious dead, the body was removed to this new tomb. This vault is, I judge, about thirty feet square. It contains forty bodies of the families of Washington and Custis. In 1837 the bodies of Washington and Martha Washington were disinterred and placed in two new sarcophagi, which had been carved each out of a single block of stone for the purpose. The huge stone covers were placed in position and sealed so as to defy the skill of vandalism. These sarcophagi lie in an open space just inside the vault. But though you see them, you can not touch them, for the key to the gate of the vault was thrown into the Potomac the day these bodies were here deposited.

Near the tomb are some historic trees. One is an elm planted by Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, in 1876; another is a maple planted by the W. C. T. U. folks, or some of their kin, in 1881, another a British oak planted by the Prince of Wales in 1889. The ivy which enshrouds the tomb was planted by the Sigma Chi fraternity.

An old Virginia darkey, sixty-five years of age, who was born a slave in the Washington family, and has been at Mount Vernon more than forty years, stands as a sentinel near the tomb day by day, year in and year out. No act of vandalism can you commit unless you first walk over his dead body. Moreover, if you have time to listen, he can entertain you almost indefinitely with talk about "the general" and various members of the Washington family, and a host of other things.

It may not be known to all our readers how this historic spot came to be forever open to the public. In 1855 John Augustine Washington, who had come into possession of Mount Vernon by inheritance, being financially embarrassed, offered it for sale. Thereupon Ann Pamela Cunningham, a South Carolina woman of high character, conceived the noble purpose of making it a shrine of patriotism and the heritage of the nation forever. The price asked for the estate was $200,000. Undaunted by the magnitude of the task, she resolved to raise this sum, and never did she rest until the task was accomplished. Her appeal struck a responsive chord throughout the nation. Contributions came from all sections. By far the largest contributor, however, was the distinguished statesman, orator, and man of letters, Edward Everett, who, by the proceeds of his famous lecture on Washington, put into the treasury of the Mount Vernon Association the magnificent sum of $69,000. The estate was deeded to the association in 1860, and has been ever since in its keeping. Every citizen of this great Republic, "the land of the free and the home of the brave," owes a debt of gratitude to the noble woman through whose instrumentality this lofty purpose was realized. The number of visitors to Mount Vernon averages 150 per day, year after year. Last year the number was far in excess of that. Each visitor pays an admission fee of twenty-five cents. The funds thus raised go into the treasury of the association. That a good deal of money is needed for the maintenance of the place is evident when it is known that the association has eighteen employees on the grounds. Then, too, repairs and repainting are always in order.

One thought gave me pain as I stood with uncovered head on this sacred spot, viz.: that my own native State, Mississippi, has had no part or lot in this matter from the beginning until now. It has no representation in the Mount Vernon Association, and contributes nothing to its treasury. Most of the States have some particular part of the Mansion or grounds for whose maintenance they are responsible. Alabama keeps up the Main Hall; Georgia, Mrs. Washington's Sitting-room; Louisiana, the Summer-house; Virginia, the room in which Washington died, etc.; but Mississippi is a name unknown in the records of Mount Vernon. Will not the day soon draw near when, through the influence of some good woman, the name of Mississippi will be placed upon that roll of honor?

We invite special attention to the notice of "The Louisiana State Chautauqua" on our fifth page.

We are pleased to record the fact that Sister Keener's health is considerably improved within the past few days.

The number of visitors to the General Conference, not including Baltimoreans, was, perhaps, equal to the number of delegates.

The grounds of the Naval Academy at Annapolis are spacious and beautiful, but the buildings are far less imposing than we expected to see.

Let our readers take note of the fact that the name of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society has been changed to "The Home Mission Society."

We had the privilege of preaching every Sabbath during our absence—once for the Baptists, once for the Presbyterians, and once for the M. E. Church. In each case there was close attention and apparent interest.

For the fourth page notes which have appeared in the ADVOCATE during the last three weeks (excepting, of course, those from Baltimore) our readers are indebted to Misses Clara and Ada Black, who have had charge of the office in our absence.

Rev. W. W. Woollard will commence a meeting at Aberdeen, Miss., June 5, assisted by Rev. W. M. Leftwich, D. D. The meeting will last about twelve days. The prospect is thought to be good for a successful meeting.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Minutes of the sixth Annual Session of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Louisiana Conference. This is a neatly gotten-up pamphlet of forty-odd pages published by the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. It contains full information concerning the operations of the society during the past year. The secretarial work is admirably done.

A large proportion of the delegates to the General Conference seem to have stopped awhile in Washington en route home. They were so ubiquitous and in such numbers that we almost expected to hear a babel of voices crying: "Mr. President, I rise to a point of order;" "I move to lay on the table," "I move the previous question," etc. Bishops and their families were also numerous.

The General Conference abolished the Annual Conference Colportage Boards. The selection of colporteurs is left to the Book Agents, with the proviso that if they select a traveling preacher, he can be appointed only on recommendation of the Annual Conference, or in the interim between sessions of the Annual Conferenceon recommendation of the Book Committee.

From a private letter from Rev. T. B. Clifford, Enterprise, Miss., bearing date of May 29, we quote as follows: "Bro. and Sister Leggett's little babe went to heaven this morning about 8:30. Their hearts are sad, and they need our prayers just now. The meeting grows in interest, and many had been to the altar convicted of sin. Our faith is in God, and we are expecting to see many souls saved."

Our return trip over the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad gave us an opportunity to see some of the most magnificent scenery on the continent; but we saw it only by snatches. With typewriter before us on a sleeping-car table, we were too busy writing up Washington, Mt. Vernon and Arlington to spare more than a few moments at a time for enjoying the vast panorama which unrolled its variegated scenes of beauty and splendor before us for hour after hour.

Druid Hill Park, Baltimore, is said to be the most beautiful natural park in the world, and we do not doubt that the claim is well founded. It is not a work of art like Central Park, New York, very little money, comparatively speaking, having been spent upon it. Its natural beauties, however, are unrivalled within the range of our observation. It comprises 785 acres. It contains a lake nearly a mile and a half in circumference, besides a number of small lakes or ponds. It has carriage drives aggregating thirty miles.

We saw very little of Baltimore during the three weeks of our sojourn there. Our mornings were taken up with Conference sessions and our afternoons with committee work to such an extent as to leave no time for sight-seeing. Of course, we went with the Conference on the famous excursion up the Chesapeake to Annapolis. We attended the reception at the Woman's College. We also took a short drive through Druid Hill Park, and with our friend, Dr. C. G. Andrews, visited Mt. Olivet Cemetery to see the graves of the illustrious dead who are there interred. With these exceptions, we saw nothing of Baltimore except what could be seen en route to the Conference-room, and to the churches at which we dispensed the Word. We had visited Baltimore, however, a decade or more ago, and taken in its principal points of interest.

Our times of greatest pleasure are when we have won some higher peak of difficulty, trodden under foot some evil, and felt day by day so sure a growth of moral strength within us that we can not conceive of an end of growth.—Stopford Brooke.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

The session of the next General Conference will begin on the first Wednesday in May, 1902.

Rev. F. N. Parker and Dr. A. F. Watkins went to New York to refresh their minds with reference to the Greater New York.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, of the New York Christian Advocate, was introduced to the Conference and made a most felicitous speech.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade and wife, Miss Caroline Fullilove, Miss McCutchen, Miss Doke and S. B. McCutchen went over to spend a few days in New York.

Vanderbilt University is now our great connectional school. It has been placed, according to the request of the trustees, under the direct control of the church.

Bishop C. C. Petty, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, visited the Conference on the closing day, was introduced, and presented the greetings of his Conference, which is now in session in this city.

The disposition of so many of the delegates to leave the Conference before the close of the session called forth a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the Book Agents not to pay the traveling expenses of any delegate to the next General Conference until he promises in writing that he will remain until the close of the session.

Miss Margnerite Crain, who was a member of Dr. LaPrade's party in attendance upon the General Conference, went over to Washington, where she will visit a friend until the other members of the party return from New York.

The new Bishops were given a turn at the gavel, and pretty vigorously did they handle it. Bishop Morrison pounded away until he broke the handle. He is going to hold the reins—handle—even if the Conference—gavel—fly off.

Miss Tucker, who has for some time been writing up the Sunday-school lesson for the primary classes in the Teachers' Magazine, is a resident of Baltimore. One would expect from the exceptionally fine work that she is doing, to see a woman of advanced years; but, no. She is young, and this must be the secret of her wonderful success—in touch with the child-heart.

Dr. C. G. Andrews preached for the Presbyterians last Sunday. The staid old blue-stocking Presbyterians, it is said, sat still, wrapped in wonderment, wondering how it could be that a Methodist could preach such a good Presbyterian sermon. The Doctor brought away with the good wishes of his hearers their high praises, and some elaborate floral offerings.

There are many things about the city of Baltimore which are interesting to the visitor. The other day I was strolling through Greenmount Cemetery, and came upon a tomb standing alone in a little triangular plot of ground beneath a great spreading oak; and as had been my wont, I glanced at the name. I was attracted by what I saw, and I read: "Sacred to the memory of Elizabeth, daughter of William Patterson, and wife of Jerome Bonaparte. Born Feb. 6, 1785; died April 4, 1879. After life's fitful fever she sleeps well."

On the last day of the Conference, Rev. J. O. Wilson, on behalf of the members of the General Conference, displayed in open Conference the token of regard which it was intended should be presented to Bishop J. C. Keener; but, owing to illness in his family, Bishop Keener had gone home. The token will be forwarded to him. The present consists of an elegant gold watch, inscribed, "A token of love from the General Conference, Baltimore, Md., 1898" Also a silver tea set appropriately inscribed. This mark of regard is fitting, and expresses a profound, true esteem for the great man who has spent a life of wonderful power in the service of the church.

I desire to call the attention of the members of the Ministers' Education Aid Association of the Louisiana Conference who have not paid their back dues, to the fact that the session of Centenary College will close in a few days and that money is needed to fulfill our obligations. A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

I have berries, grapes and peaches a year old, fresh as when picked. I use the California Cold Process; do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold; keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last year I sold directions to over 120 families in one week; anyone will pay a dollar for directions when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such, and feel confident anyone can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days. I will mail a sample of fruit and complete directions to any of your readers for nineteen two-cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the samples, postage, etc. I am going to begin work at once to catch the Spring trade. W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

What can be more pleasurable than to turn aside from the common walks of life for a season, and mingle with God's people in their efforts to purify and uplift human sentiments and customs? This has been our immeasurable privilege in our recent attendance upon the W. C. T. U. State Convention. It was held in the Methodist Church of this city, and convened last Saturday evening, May 14, holding until this date, May 18. Our sweet and saintly president, Mrs. Curlee, of Corinth, presided with grace, dignity, and untold patience through multitudinous trials and vexations, originating from the fact that women can not always control that unruly member of our anatomy to which Solomon refers in several of his proverbs. But, spite of these little interruptions, everything was peaceful, harmonious, and enjoyable to the end.

Our two distinguished visitors, Mrs. Unruh and Miss Brown, together with our own Southern jewel, Miss Belle Kearney, contributed largely to the strength of our convention, and we deem ourselves most fortunate to have had them with us.

Mrs. Unruh is a highly intellectual and gifted woman from Oregon, and is chairman of the Board of Organizers of W. C. T. U. work in the United States. She is thoroughly posted in regard to our work and its necessities, and is also well informed upon the subject of parliamentary usages—in short, this charming woman was the "sage" of our convention. But, while this was a fact patent to all, still she could just as gracefully and ably adapt herself to the fact that "a little nonsense now and then" "is relished by the best of men," and, when so inclined, her flights of repartee and sallies of wit convulsed her audience and turned grave to gay in a most pleasing style.

Miss Anna D. Brown is a fair, sweet, rosy Alabama girl, midnight in the wavy mazes of her hair, heaven's cerulean blue in the child-like glance of her eye, and an earnest, undaunted zeal accentuating her life, impelling her to devote the sweet, pure years of her youth to the work, "for God, for home, and every land." Her talks were principally to the young folks.

It is scarcely necessary to elaborate upon Miss Kearney, our own Miss Belle, who is so dear and so well known to all Southern folk in her zealous works and efforts to uplift humanity and also to broaden the usefulness of woman's sphere; but 'tis with pride that we proclaim in this brief sketch the fact that she is still making rapid strides toward the top, and was the peer of any who formed a part of the convention. Her talk upon the Bible passage, "Sir, we would see Jesus," has never been surpassed by lips of woman—so far as our knowledge of our public speakers extends.

It is not our policy to change our State officers any oftener than necessary, for the longer we retain them the better they work, and so, upon the announcement being made that we were ready to go into election of State officers for another year, everything moved off so quietly and expeditiously that we were accused of "cut-and-dried lobbying," although none of the votes cast were unanimous in their nature—expressing, at least, sufficient diversity of opinion, or, rather, preferences, to convince a logical mind that the elections were all true and honest and unbiased. One change was made, to wit: Miss Madge Montgomery, who was our corresponding secretary, was made vice-president, while our former vice president, Mrs. H. Walter Featherston, took her place as corresponding secretary.

Time would fail us in this brief article to mention all of the interesting features of the convention—the decorations, the fine singing, the addresses, the complimentary boat-ride by the transportation company, etc., which, all summed up in one pleasant and enjoyable whole, rendered the fifteenth Annual Convention of the State Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union so delightful, profitable, instructive, and impressive, that we shall cherish it long in memory's sacred precincts, even as a faded flower is preserved and prized when the departed donor is slumbering in the stillness of the tomb.

OUR LOVED ONES.

BY MRS. E. T. F.

They are not here, their ransomed spirits fled
As birds set free, from out their cage of pain.
Think, oh, ye mourners, while sad tears ye shed,
Your loss, though great, is their eternal gain!

Together here they traveled hand in hand,
The same sweet path, the way of life and truth.
Together they in Jesus' presence stand,
Robed in the raiment of immortal youth.

They are not dead, we will not think them dead,
Our loved ones who have crossed to yonder shore.
For, as the odor of sweet flowers is shed,
A fragrance from their lives forevermore.

Nor will we wish them back, though dear they be,
Though their companionship we daily miss;
Ere long their faces we again shall see,
And live eternally with them in bliss.

MAKING FRIENDS.

Unless we are capable of being true friends ourselves it is impossible to have true friends. It is only selfish to imagine true friends should be ours when we do not make ourselves worthy of their friendship.

Just as the wayside wildflower very often exhales a rarer fragrance than the more beautiful hothouse flower, so, too, very often the little things of life cast more sweetness into it than the greater ones. A pleasant greeting; a few timely words of congratulation or sympathy; a few flowers sent to the sick or distressed, and desire to make others feel the kindly helpfulness and cheerfulness of one's company, are the little common, every-day things which not only gain friends, but make one truly loved. A thoughtful, refined mind is never oblivious to the feelings of others, but, on the contrary, is ever solicitous to make them happy. Such a mind is doubly repaid in its own beautiful, priceless possession.

Beautiful characters are required, not by life dealing more kindly with them, but in their dealing more kindly with life. There is an old saying: "Life is what we ourselves make it." If we are easily dissatisfied and always on the alert for slights; if we deem kind words valueless, and cultivate hauteur, it is not surprising that happiness should hold itself aloof from us, and that our society be neither sought for nor desired.

In making friends, kind words are worth much and they cost little. They prevent a great deal of that perverseness which censorious usage often produces in otherwise generous minds. Goethe says: "Kindness is the golden chain by which society is bound together," and Lamartine tells us: "Kindness is virtue itself."

True friendship is born from true character. He or she who is true to self is true to everybody. Those who prove themselves to be always loyal, always true, frank and upright toward us, yet kind—not afraid to compliment us and not afraid to reprove us for our own good—are what Alcott beautifully terms them: "The leaders of the bosom, being more ourselves than we are, and the complement of our affections in theirs."

Love is the synonym of God, and friendship is so closely akin to it that love clothes it in its own beauty. If we were more earnest in exercising the true spirit of religion, true friendship would not be such a rare thing, and the world would be made the brighter and truer.—Julia Teresa Butler.

FEARLESS AND HONEST.

A Scotch lad landed at Castle Garden, the brightest, yet the loneliest passenger of an emigrant ship. He was barely fourteen, and had not a friend in America, and only a sovereign in his pocket.

"Well, Sandy," said a fellow-passenger who had befriended him during the voyage from Glasgow, "don't you wish that you were safe now with your mother in the old country?"

"No," said the boy, "I promised her when I left that I would be fearless and honest. I have her fortune to make as well as my own, and I must have good courage."

"Well, Laddie, what can you do?" asked a kind voice behind him.

"I can be loyal and true to anybody who will give me something to do," was the quick response.

A well-known lawyer, whose experience with applicants for clerkships in his office has been unfavorable, had taken a stroll down Broadway to ascertain whether he could find a boy to his liking.

A canny Scotchman himself, he had noticed the arrival of the Glasgow steamer, and had fancied that he might be able to get a trustworthy clerk from his own country.

Sandy's fearless face caught his eye. The honest, manly ring in Sandy's voice touched his faithful Scotch heart.

"Tell me your story," he said, kindly. It was soon told. Sandy's mother had been left a widow with little money and a child to bring up. She had worked for him as she could, but when her health failed she had bought his passage for America, and given him what little money she could spare.

"Go and make your fortune," she had said. "Be fearless and honest, and don't forget your mother who can not work for you any longer."

Sandy's patron engaged him as an office-boy.

"I'll give you a chance," he said, "to show what there is in you. Write to your mother today that you have found a friend, who will stand by you as long as you are fearless and honest."

Sandy became a favorite at once in the office. Clients seldom left the office without pausing to have a word with him.

He attended night school and became an expert penman and accountant. He was rapidly promoted until he was his patron's confidential clerk.

After sharing his earnings with his mother, he went to Scotland and brought her back with him.

"You have made my fortune," he said, "and I can not have luck without you."

He was right. When he had studied law and began to practice at the bar, his fearlessness commanded respect and his honesty inspired confidence. Juries liked to hear him speak. They instinctively trusted him.

His mother had impressed her high courage and sincerity upon him. His success was mainly her work.—The Household.

TO GIRLS WHO MARRY.

The execution of Millionaire Arthur Dnestrow, of St. Louis, for the murder of his wife and baby boy, should point a moral for all women contemplating marriage. Duestrow was the pampered son of wealth. He had a profession, but his riches left no incentive to practice it. Money brought good cheer and gay fellowship, indulgence and sin. Look at him when his wife accepted him: young, talented, handsome, social rank, rich with an ample fixed income, but "fast." She took her chances. She immersed herself in a conjugal hell. Her only escape was by the cruel bullets he fired into her shrinking body, and through the head of her little boy! It seems plain enough now, her awful mistake. But, doubtless, she was envied by many a girl in her set. Her "catch" was the greatest of the season.

Right now, another Duestrow is paying court to a lovely girl, dazzling her with his wealth and accomplishments. She knows his vices, but what are these to an assured place in society, supported by ample means? Wait, girls, long enough at least, to look into the chamber of horrors where the drunken brute, heedless of his wife's agonizing entreaties, empties his revolver into her body and into the head of their prattling babe. Such an ending is a hundred-fold more probable than the husband's reformation and faithful love. Though he were a prince, and offered you the crown-jewels, and yet were a drinker and a debanchee, my dear girl, spurn him as you would a deadly viper!—Western Christian Advocate.

THIS IS HOW THEY RISE.

A young woman recently found employment in a queensware store. She immediately began a course of study, in her leisure moments, upon glassware and china. Then she read some recent works upon the appointments of the table, and in a short time, by applying herself to her business, became the most valuable employee in a large store.

In a millinery establishment, the young woman who found time for reading a book or two on colors and their harmonious combination, found her own taste greatly improved, and her ability to please patrons much greater. She was soon a favorite with the employers and customers.

The young woman who, to earn an honorable living, went into a lady's kitchen, and instead of gossiping every evening, found time to read a few good books and household papers, was soon too valuable a housekeeper to be kept in a subordinate position in the kitchen. She knew how a table should look for a formal dinner; she knew what dishes were in season; she knew how to serve a meal in its proper courses; and, more than that, she knew something about the food-value of different dishes.

Of course, this sounds like an old-fashioned Sunday-school book, but the fact remains that there is always "room at the top," and that no unusual amount of intelligence is needed to reach the top. A fair average of good sense and a proper amount of application will accomplish everything.—Womankind.

BREAD, POTATOES and MILK.

A Dyspeptics daily diet.

Dyspepsia is one of the most prevalent of diseases. Thousands of people suffer from it in a more or less aggravated form. Few diseases are more painful to the individual or more far reaching in their effects on human life and happiness. What the dyspeptic needs is not local treatment, not mere temporary stimulus. The real need is the toning up of the entire system. Fortify the system and it will do its own fighting, and promptly eject any intruding disease. The success of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla in curing indigestion and dyspepsia is due to just this quality which it possesses, of renewing the vital forces, repairing the waste and loss of the body. The ordinary treatment brings the food down to the level of the weak stomach. Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla puts strength to the stomach, and brings it up to the level of the strong food fit for men. It does this by strengthening the entire system. The stomach cannot stay weak when all the other organs are gaining strength. What Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla will do for dyspepsia is best illustrated in cases like that of M. S. Shields, Meridian, Miss. Mr. Shields had got down to the last level of dyspepsia. But let him tell his own story:—

"For years, I was afflicted with dyspepsia which gradually grew worse until I could eat nothing but bread and potatoes seasoned with a little salt, and drink only a little milk. I became so bad that a trifle too much of even these caused terrible suffering in the regions of the stomach, darting pains back of the eyes, attended with dizziness and partial loss of sight. The only way I could get relief was by vomiting. Finally I had such a severe attack that the entire left side of my body was numb and partially paralyzed, and in this condition, I was taken to my room unconscious. The physicians failed to help me, and none of the many remedies I took did me any good. At last a friend presented me with a bottle of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla and before I had used half of it, I could see a decided change for the better. I used three bottles and was so completely cured that for four years I have not been troubled with the old complaint, but am rugged and hearty and able to eat anything that can be eaten. It would be impossible to say too much in praise of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and I would not give one bottle of it for a dozen of any other kind."—M. S. SHIELDS, Meridian, Miss.

Try Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla if you are dyspeptic. If you want more testimony to the value of the medicine, get Dr. Ayer's Curebook. It is sent free on request by the J. C. Ayer Co., L.

THE POWER OF SILENCE.

The power to repress ourselves under trying circumstances is an inestimably precious virtue. Sometimes silence wins the victory just as a soft answer turns away wrath. It is a great thing to possess one's soul in patience. A constant talker is rarely a wise man. Garrulity and folly are generally inseparably linked. There are times when we must seal our lips. Too often one bitter word has alienated two hearts forever. Here is one of the tests of character—the ability to say nothing and to bide one's time.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Hygiene.

TO BE RESPECTED.

"Respect the stomach," says an advertiser in one of the papers.

It was old Dr. Abernathy, if our memory serves us, who asserted people treated their stomach as if it were a copper kettle. This is more a subject for the medical than the church papers. But it is a moral question as well as physical. If we eat improperly, there is bad health as a consequence, with more or less peevishness and bad temper; they are not the pleasantest of guests to have in one's household. With all this, there is inability to do the duty to which we are called. This is a serious matter, or not to do it as well by reason of ailments. Worth considering. Unfortunately there are those who will not consider; their appetites are too much for them; they eat what they like, though they know they will be injured thereby. Human nature, at its best estate, is "altogether vanity." All this having been said for the thousandth time, what is the use of saying it again?—Southern Churchman.

A good hearty laugh each day, even if it is at first somewhat forced, will go far toward removing a tendency to morbidness.

There is nothing so important in all nervous diseases as the exercise of the will power. It is a common habit of nervous people to think that they can not avoid yielding to the various manifestations of their disease. This is true to a limited degree, but all such manifestations can be greatly modified by a resolute turning to some other subject, not waiting for some one else to work the diversion.

Plenty of out-door exercise that will start the blood circulating, the muscles growing, and the mind working, will bring a light heart and a healthy body.—Demorest's Magazine.

SENSATIONAL PREACHING.

Another form of sensationalism is that which seeks to captivate the multitude by covering up whatever may be distasteful in the gospel, and presenting only such negative shades of truth as are likely to commend themselves to the natural heart. So long as the world says, "Prophesy unto us smooth things," there will be no dearth of churches where every thought of justice and retribution is kept in the background to make room for sentimental platitudes, where "smooth things" are promulgated in most elegant and meaningless phrases, and where watchmen, set upon the walls to cry aloud and show the people their sins, cry nothing but "Peace! peace!" to souls that are standing on the brink of spiritual and eternal death. The gospel thus presented has lost its power to save, and he who preaches it is no better than a charlatan—for he who seeks his own advantage is withholding the truth.

No amount of fine rhetoric and poetry and classical expression can save his ministry from failure and condemnation. His periods may be rent and rounded as delicately as cameos; he may be as learned as Erasmus and eloquent as Chrysostom; crowds may flock to hear him, and all men may speak well of him; but, nevertheless, he is a blind leader of the blind—an unfaithful servant of Christ.

It is folly to dream of making war on the elements of this world and the "prince of the power of the air" with no better ammunition than fine rhetoric and sentimentalism. All Platonic dreamers and rhapsodists that ever sought to adorn the cross of Christ with garlands of fancy and elocution have not rendered an aggregate of service equal to that of one old-time Methodist itinerant, who traveled about through sun and storm and freshet, and preached the everlasting gospel in the dialect of the backwoods, but with a power like that of Thor's hammer in argument, and a harvest of souls to show for every thrusting in of his red sickle, because his lips had been touched with a coal from the altar of the vicarious sacrifice, and his heart sprinkled with the precious blood of the Lamb. The blessing of God came down upon the whole city of London like rain upon the mown grass when Dwight L. Moody, unlearned in the schools of theology or polite literature, came in between the people and their smooth-speaking clergymen, and pointed first to the flames of Sodom, and then to the refuge of hills, and cried, "Escape for your lives!" The church has need of such men—who care more for souls than for applause, who are not afraid to preach as well the gospel of Sinai as of Calvary, nor ashamed to be accounted "fools for Jesus' sake."—Rev. James Burrell, D. D., in Christian Intelligencer.

FRANCES WILLARD AS A SPEAKER.

Frances Willard had the gift of eloquence. She was a subtle, thoughtful, thrilling talker. If her presence was not imposing, it was at the beginning always tranquilizing and afterward full of sweet surprises. Her voice was clear and melodious and strong, with a peculiar quality of blended defiance and deference, of tenderness and intrepidity, that gave it an indescribable charm. Her diction was singularly simple, her reasoning luminous and homely, her illustrations full of poetry and humor, her pathos as natural as tears to a child. She was wholly unaffected, taking her audience so deftly into her confidence that she conquered them, as Christ conquers, by self-revelation. The New Jerusalem of the twentieth century, the transfigured homes of a new commonwealth, seemed to be so near and so real. And there was always, when she talked to women and to men, such a sublime confidence in their latent nobility and their ultimate righteousness that for the time, at least, they became in their own eyes the beings that she pictured them, and sat enchanted with the glorious revelation. The blending of prophetic ecstacy with practical shrewdness, of raptnre with woman's wit, gave to her tongue the accent of both worlds. The note of gladness with which she mentioned Jesus Christ (and she did it often) lifted her auditors into the presence of her divine Companion, and the childlike mockery with which she pelted some feminine folly or some masculine stupidity dissolved the radiance again into ripples of human merriment that brought her listeners safely back to mother earth. Webster was majestic in the days of his grandeur; Beecher trembled at his god-like flashes. Beecher was superbly human, conquering and controlling multitudes by his rich and robust and royal manhood. Wendell Phillips was democratic, casting his auditors into chains, and arousing within them all the elemental passions. But Frances Willard attracted and enchanted. She spoke as never man spake, and yet with the charm of Him who conquered the grave to restore the shattered home at Bethany.—"Frances E. Willard," by President Charles J. Little, LL.D., in The Chautauquan.

HOW TO BE A GOOD PUBLIC SPEAKER.

Composure or self-possession, the capacity to think over one's feet, and the having of something to say, are the prime requisites for becoming what my friend calls "a forcible pabla speaker." No school of elocution can do anything for him without these, no matter what may be his voice, his presence, or his education. The orator who commits a speech to memory, and delivers it with the grace and distinction of Henry Armitt Brown, for example, is a rhetorician, usually more pleasurable to read than to be heard. But the speaker who has the fitness to say something well on any occasion without literary preparation is usually a product of constant practice in the church, the prayer meeting, the debating club, the moot court, or the political stump. The one training which is essential to him, and he can never have too much of it, is the study of words with something of the same earnestness of Pitt when he went through Bailey's Dictionary from cover to cover, and of a crystal-like clearness and exactness in using them.

That excellent clergyman, Rev. Dr. Richard H. Allen, who succeeded Brainerd in the pulpit of the old Pine Street Presbyterian Church, was in the habit of telling a story which all young men who think of becoming public speakers should note well. The Doctor was not a brilliant sermonizer, but he was cogent, practical, and impressive, never flying over the heads of his congregation with his discourse, and adapting it to the understanding of all kinds of hearers. One day an old colored man, an ex-slave, came up to him as he was leaving the pulpit. Tears and gratitude were on his face. "Oh, Massa Allen, that was a heap good sermon yo' gave to-day. I understood every word. Yo' preach'd it just as if yo' were one of us niggers yourself." Dr. Allen always said that Spurgeon himself could not have received a higher compliment as an orator than this old darky's comment.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

WOMEN AND INTOXICANTS.

It has been recently observed that drunkenness has universally declined in the United States among men in the professions, the higher classes of artisanship and trades, and in commerce. Is it not true, on the other hand, that the use of intoxicants has increased among American women?

A few years ago the sight of a respectable woman drinking an intoxicant at the public table of an American hotel was unknown. To-day it is so common as almost to have ceased causing surprise. At almost any first-class restaurant women, apparently rational and refined, take the cocktail, which a few years ago they knew nothing about, with as little embarrassment as their men companions; nor is it as rare as it should be that woman will order and drink cocktails even when unaccompanied by men.

The latest phase of the increase of intoxicants among women is found in the fashionable candy establishments, where, under various names, small quantities of intoxicating liquors are mixed for the accommodation of a constantly enlarging demand.

American physicians are largely responsible for the increased use of all kinds of liquor among American women. They prescribe stimulants in a large number of cases of invalidism among women, with the inevitable result that, whether salutary or not for the sick, the habit grows among the healthful. It is not a long step from bops to beer, from the brew to the still.

It would surely be a melancholy phenomenon of the closing decade of the century if intemperance, declining among intelligent American men, should have made substantial and general advance among intelligent American women.

It might be worth while for the Federal and city authorities to inquire into the legal liability of liquor-decocting candy-shops to pay the proper license fee.—Chicago Times-Herald.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

It is astonishing how few good readers are found among ministers of the gospel. There are men who preach well, who are eloquent, and whose emphasis and enunciation are just what it seems they should be. Their risings and inflections, their tone, all are united to impress in the most forcible manner the ideas of the speaker; but when the sonorous stanzas of the hymn, or the verses of Scripture, are read so as to deprive plain language of its meaning, the preacher is only a half preacher who is so miserably at fault in his reading. The great object in reading is impressiveness, and the minister who has not been taught to be impressive has failed to be educated in one of the most essential qualifications for the office of a preacher.—Christian Observer.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

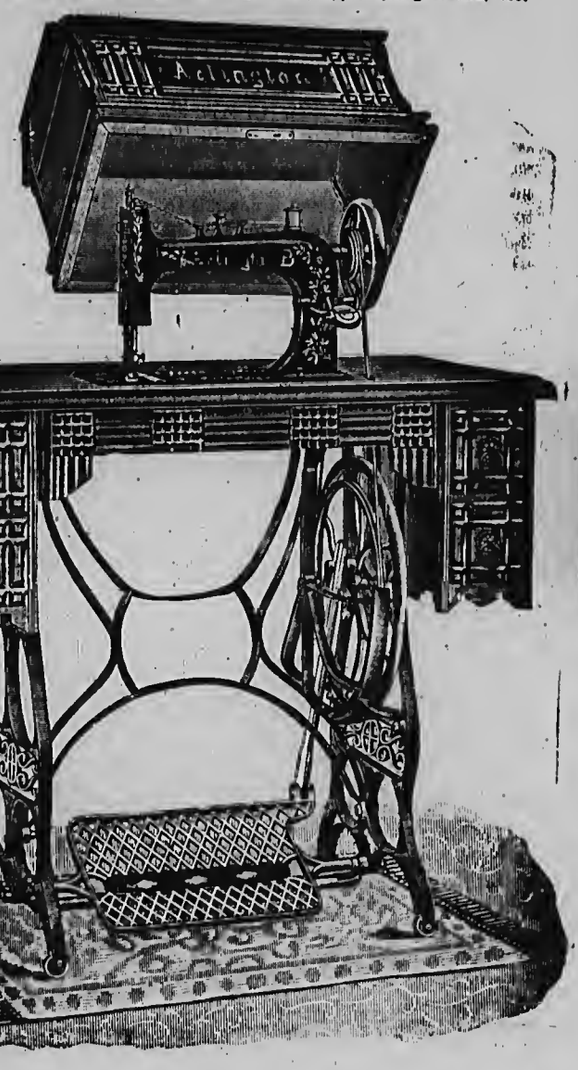
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm. Its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is an positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The United States army now numbers 118,000 volunteers and 37,000 regulars.

The Second Louisiana Volunteer Regiment broke camp on Monday and went to Mobile, near to the scene of war, with a thousand gallant men in a steady column.

An amendent providing for the annexation of Hawaii has been added to the war tax bill in the Senate, and senators declare that there will be no war tax without annexation. Since the United States have assumed the role of making foreign conquests and establishing foreign colonies, the annexation of Hawaii becomes a necessity. A coaling station and home port on the way to the Philippines is absolutely indispensable.

Governor McLaurin's attempt to veto the conditions of the Industrial Institute College (of Mississippi) appropriation bill has been declared unconstitutional and, therefore, void. The college must now be closed, or the people, already tired of too much legislation, must pay for another session—all because the governor would not accept the bill as passed by both Houses with many votes to spare, showing that it had the sanction of the people.

There now appears to be no doubt that the Spanish Cape de Verde squadron is safely anchored in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba, and is being blockaded by Commodore Schley's squadron of heavy armor-clads. Some reports from Washington claim that a force of 15,000 regulars is to be sent to southern Cuba to effect a landing in the neighborhood of Santiago, so as to assist the fleet of Commodore Schley in disposing of the Spanish squadron now anchored there.

There are unmistakable signs that a forward movement has at last been decided upon. General Miles, the commanding officer of the army, has left Washington with his staff, for Tampa, a fact which would seem to indicate that the purpose of his journey is to personally superintend the embarkation of troops for Cuba. The presence of Admiral Sampson's fleet at Key West also lends color to the probability of an early movement of troops, as it is understood that his ships are to convey the transports and to aid the troops in effecting a landing on the Cuban coast.

The past week has been entirely barren of results, so far as the war is concerned. It is true that there has been no fighting, as far as the public has been informed; but there has been considerable maneuvering and making of preparations which promise some active fighting later on. The most important event of the week was the sailing of the first section of the re-enforcements to be sent to Admiral Dewey, at Manila. It is a fact worth noting that the first contingent of troops to leave the country bound for the seat of war was composed mainly of volunteers. The next event of importance was the issue of a second call for volunteers by the President. The second call was for 75,000 men. The call for additional troops must be accepted as an indication that the authorities at Washington now realize that the war with Spain is likely to assume more important proportions than was at first supposed. The general idea at the outbreak of hostilities was that Cuba would be at once invaded and the war brought to a speedy close. This idea has been completely abandoned as impracticable. It is now understood that an invasion of Cuba will require at least 100,000 men well armed, equipped and supplied. Then, again, there is the unhealthy season to contend with, which may necessitate delays over and above those essential to the organization of an army as large as 100,000 men.

FOREIGN.

It is said that Spain intends to delay the war as long as possible, hoping that either the Americans will grow tired of spending money, or that Europe, disturbed by the interruption of commerce and the rise in the price of wheat, will intervene and insist on peace.

It is reported from Spanish sources that Commodore Schley made a determined attack upon Morro Castle, at Santiago de Cuba, and forced his way into the inner harbor, where he engaged the Spanish fleet under Admiral Cervera. The reports indicated that the fire of the American ships did great execution, but were silent as to the details.

We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Pooneville, Miss., EDITOR.

Rev. Horace Mallard DuBose, D. D., was, last week, elected by the General Conference, General Secretary of the Epworth League and editor of the Epworth Era.

Rev. William Belton Murrah, D. D., received the largest number of votes for Secretary of the Board of Education, and was thereby elected.

Each of the above-named distinguished ministers are Mississippians, and all leaguers hereabouts will remember that their names have frequently appeared upon Epworth League programmes.

Mississippi has been highly honored in that she has been asked to furnish on two occasions the General Secretary of the Epworth League and editor of the Epworth Era.

Let Mississippi and Louisiana, like twin sisters, keep step in this mighty movement for the salvation and Christian education of their sons and daughters.

We are very anxious to hear from the different leaguers, and wish here and now to impress upon them the fact that this department in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was set apart that it might prove a medium of communication between the Leagues throughout Mississippi and Louisiana.

Send in postal card reports—"tidings from the field," "bugle blasts"—in order that we may provoke one another to love and good works.

Circulate the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. It is your own Conference paper, and ought to be well supported. Let us, as leaguers, be loyal to our church, and "support its institutions."

The Epworth League movement has impressed itself upon the whole church as being a power for good. This was demonstrated by the tone of speeches delivered upon this question during the recent session of the General Conference in Baltimore.

Bishops Key, Fitzgerald and Morrison will preside over the North Mississippi, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, respectively, during the coming year. They are warm-hearted men, who have a special love for young people.

The protracted meeting season is upon us, when special efforts will be made to strengthen believers and save sinners. Let the leaguers everywhere assist the pastor in the revival, and earnestly pray that the power of God may be made manifest in the salvation of many souls.

We pen these lines at Enterprise, Miss., where we are engaged with Dr. I. W. Cooper in a meeting, assisting the pastor, Rev. J. T. Leggett. Several young men and young women have asked to be remembered at a throne of grace, and we are looking to God for a great blessing.

"Saved and saving," should be our motto. Having tasted of the good things of God, we are under obligation to tell to all the world around what a dear Savior we have found.

We have received from Recording Secretary W. N. DeLoach, of Grenada, copy of resolutions passed at Meridian during session of our recent State Conference, and subjoined we publish the same:

Whereas, Thousands of railroad men in Mississippi are forced to labor on Sunday, or lose their jobs, and as much the greater portion of their Sabbath labor is no more necessary or merciful than the plowing of a field, and as these employees are powerless to help themselves; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the "Railroad Sunday" be the subject of an address or paper at each one of the District League Conferences to be held between now and the next session of the Legislature.

Resolved, That we, as individual leaguers, will study the railroad Sabbath question, and do all we can, by precept and example, to protect our day of rest and worship.

Resolved, That the Epworth Leagues of Mississippi, in their fourth Annual Conference—300 delegates strong—do hereby memorialize our next Legislature to so change our code as to give relief to those railroad men employed on the runs, in the yards, in the shops, in the offices, and otherwise; and that the secretary of this Conference furnish a copy of these resolutions to the clerk of each branch of the next Legislature.

A few weeks since we published an editorial notice of the above-named book. Here is our editorial notice:

A NEW BOOK.

THE HOME OF THE BIBLE: WHAT I SAW AND HEARD IN PALESTINE. By Marion Harland, author of "Common Sense in the Household," "The Royal Road," etc. 446 pages.

A more charming book of its kind it has never been our pleasure to examine. Many excellent books on Palestine have been written by travelers and others; but a volume on this subject from a woman's point of view is rarely met with. Hence this one is all the more pleasing for that reason. Miss Harland is a close observer, a gifted writer, possesses great warmth of heart, and is withal a woman of superior intelligence. In the volume before us she gives us a realistic and delightful account of her recent journey through the Holy Land, the scenes, customs, and people there—all being described in the most graphic way. "My object in going to Palestine," she remarks in the introduction, "was to see with fresh eyes and judge with unprejudiced mind what this, the most interesting of lands to the Christian, is like to-day; how the inhabitants look, and live, and think, and what traces the traveler finds in the ruins of the past of the nations who flourished, battled, and were, in turn, swept from home and country by the march of God's providence."

This work is by no means a tedious diary of travel and moralizings, nor is it burdened with dry statistics. It abounds in beautiful descriptions, pleasing and, in some instances, touching incidents and valuable information. Miss Harland calls attention to the remarkable fact that the people of Palestine have changed less in their manner of living, customs, and prejudices, than those of any other country, being almost the same to-day that they were two thousand years ago.

This book is profusely illustrated with fine engravings from photographic views taken in Palestine. Many of the illustrations occupy a full page. Added to Miss Harland's work is "The Thrilling Story of Armenia," and their cruel persecutions by the Moslems, by G. H. Sandison, of the Christian Herald.

The volume before us will delight young and old alike, and is worthy of a place in every home.

A FIELD OF LABOR.

BY MRS. E. H. GATES.

If you are too weak to journey
Up the mountain steep and high,
You can stand within the valley
While the multitudes go by.
You can chant in happy measures
As they slowly pass along;
Though they may forget the singer,
They will not forget the song.

Do not, then, stand idly waiting
For some greater work to do;
Fortune is a lazy goddess,
She will never come to you.
Go and toil in any vineyard,
Do not fear to do or dare;
If you want a field of labor,
You can find it anywhere.

IN WHAT DOES THE LEAGUE ANSWER THE NEEDS OF THE CHURCH?

BY MRS. R. H. WYNN.

(Read before the Epworth League Conference at Alexandria, La., April 28-30, 1898.)

It has not been many years since our church discovered it was desirable to formulate some plan by which we could interest, save and educate our young girls and boys, especially those who have grown up in our Sunday-schools, but have reached a point where they considered themselves too old for Sunday-school pupils, and not of an age to be eligible to the positions of stewards, Sunday-school teachers, choir leaders, and the like. We know that at every period of Methodism young hearts have been drawn to the Divine Teacher and taught of him; but one of the needs of the church to-day, with the numerous and insidious inroads of worldliness upon it, seems to be a definite effort to reach and hold the constant output of the Sunday-school rather than allow the young people to drift away from us. The world steals too many of our rarest plants at the most promising period of their existence. We covet everyone of them for the Master's kingdom, that they may grow and blossom, shedding forth the fragrance of holy lives while time shall last, and may then be transplanted on the farther shore, to bloom eternally in the garden of the Lord. It may require care and labor on the part of the husbandmen, much nurturing and wise superintending, but it is for our Father's glory we are striving, and we must needs devote to it our most painstaking efforts.

We have cause for gratitude that such a scheme as that embodied in the working plan of the Epworth League was decided upon, for it seems, by its various departments, to be eminently equal to the accomplishment of our threefold object. Its machinery is not complicated, but simply arranged ready to be set in motion by the pastor or other suitable person of consecrated energy and zeal. There are many different conditions to be met and suited, from our large city churches to the rural charge, where the congregation is scattered; but no better plan than that adopted by the originators of the Epworth League could have been chosen which could be more easily adapted to the varying requirements of the work. There is no conflict between the League and any of the established modes of worship, as the Sunday-school is the natural feeder of the League, and the League lends its forces and influence in behalf of the church.

In the prayer meetings of the League we find one of the most valuable means of conserving the strength of the Sunday-school, for it is here the young folks gather and listen to the simple story of faith in Christ and redemption from sin falling from the lips of their youthful associates, rendered doubly weighty because of its very simplicity. Newcomers and indifferent members may be unwilling at first to participate, but if the attracting and vitalizing spirit of our Lord be present, we may be sure that impressions will be made which will mature into sincere heart longings for the life that is hid with Christ in God.

The boys and girls learn to feel a sense of proprietorship in their meeting, and take part when too timid to do so before the assembled congregation. The prayer meeting becomes in this way an excellent training for Christian work, and admirably a very important need in nurturing the young Christians who enter our communion, who desire to flee from the wrath to come, but need spiritual strengthening and encouragement. Young persons uniting with our church need some regular Christian work to perform, or will lose interest and soon drop out of line. The cottage prayer meeting is found a good variation in our religious exercises. Families who are not church goers can often be reached in this way, brotherly love and Christian fellowship engendered. Indeed, in all our meetings social distinctions should be cast to the winds. Rich and poor should meet on a common footing, for the love of God in our hearts makes us all one in Christ Jesus.

The study of the Bible is emphasized in this department by the regular topics suggested, and a searching of the Scriptures is stimulated thereby. Nothing is more helpful than the original expressions of opinions on the subject discussed, or the offering of appropriate testimonies. The young Christian, at first afraid of the sound of his own voice, will be surprised to see how greatly his effort strengthens him, both spiritually and otherwise, at the increased confidence which is his each successive time he attempts to speak for the Lord. We fear there are some homes in which the Bible is almost an unread book. If that be so, and our leaguer is driven to the precious, though unused, volume, we will have seen the desire of our hearts.

At the present day organized effort is regarded with favor. It is for this reason we prize the Department of Charity and Help. Through its instrumentality many cases of temporary or continued distress can be expeditiously handled, and substantial, as well as spiritual, aid dispensed. This furnishes the young Christian with spiritual exercise, and he learns the truth and sweetness of his Master's statement, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Prominent among the needs which suggested the organization of the Epworth League was that of proper preparation for entrance into the church. The complaint was made that our young people were received as members with little or no knowledge of the polity and doctrines of Methodism, whereas in the Episcopal Church—and others, perhaps—the applicant must be versed in the history and familiar with the doctrines of that church. The educational feature, then, is an answer to a long-felt need. We have to admit, on the score of candor and truth, that we too often confine the Literary Department to a social evening, devoted to a superficial study of a favorite author and the rendition of a few songs and readings; but that is certainly far beneath the original purpose of the founders. A course of study was provided, but for some reason was met with indifference, and has not been pursued in many sections. Whether this arises from the books being too expensive for every leaguer to purchase, or whether they are too advanced for their use, or both, we do not know; but we are still young in the work, and have to learn by experience and trust that ere long our leaguers will be earnestly prosecuting a course of study along Methodistic lines. It is not intended that the League should furnish its members with a thorough literary education (though I know of one League, that of the Hanson Place M. E. Church, Brooklyn, where the Chautauqua course is followed with marvelous success and profit), but it is intended to furnish them with such instruction as will make them intelligent Methodists, so they will know what differentiates them from other denominations.

The League does not overlook the fact that all work and no play is not conducive to mental sprightliness or any other sort; therefore, we have given us considerable scope in the way of furnishing entertainment of a healthful sort for our young people. During an evening spent in social pastimes under a hospitable roof, they can become better acquainted, showing a kindly interest in the stranger or newcomer, welcoming him into their circle, and making him feel he would like to meet again with such warm hearted friendliness.

So, my brethren and sisters of a common and glorious cause, let us redouble our efforts to make the Epworth League of untold value to the young people now growing up amongst us, and with earnest devotion apply the aid offered to us to the needs of our respective fields, working always in our Master's name and in his strength.

"THE LAND OF ILL-SUCCESS."

The fall, as well as the rise of nations, as of men, is not due to chance, but to definite causes. Not from excess of territory or power or of longevity, as some suppose, does a nation die, or from any inevitable disintegration of forces. If any nation dies, it is because its soul is dead, its character gone. Loss of integrity, in man or nation, is the beginning of decay—not when a government loses some battle, or makes some honest blunder in diplomacy, or experiences an earthquake or an epidemic, but when it loses its character.

WHY ROME DECLINED AND FELL.

Disturbances and threatening rivalries there were in imperial Rome, winds of discord and opposition from all quarters blowing fiercely over her vast realm; still, up to the fatal hour, a certain sense of law, as the supreme arbiter in the state, was accepted and prevalent, in the minds of all. Chafe and fret and storm as he might, the individual at last brought himself to submit. But the day came when one individual, a splendid man, destined to give Rome a great administration, we must admit, did something which planted the evil root of death in his country's soil. When Cæsar came to the Rubicon, as Plutarch tells us, that small stream which divided the provinces from Latium, he hesitated, because he felt that he must respect the law of his country, and not enter, armed, into her territory. He pondered long, but at length, putting all scruples aside, he determined to cross, and push on to Rome.

"He plunged, he crossed,
And Rome was free no more."

He was not oppressive and tyrannical, but from that hour the idea was introduced of the individual will of one man, of a "Cæsar," good or bad, overriding all law, human or divine; and Rome began to show signs of decay. Good Trajans and Nervas there might be, and undoubtedly were; but, after all, they were so from personal characteristics; but as emperors, they acted as if they were practically irresponsible to man or God. This had its extremest expression in Caligula, who, when it thundered and lightened terribly, to his disturbance, declared it was intolerable, that while he was divus, a god, there should be another who could act in that manner. The very thought galled him.

It is an error to attribute Spain's decadence to any dire necessity born of poverty, because prosperity gained like hers must inevitably lead to decay; because her enterprise had tired itself out and its unearned opulence has begotten effeminacy and weakness and sown the seeds of disintegration.

THREE THINGS GIVE VITALITY.

The "Spectator" ascribes Spain's decay to lack of organization and administrative power; but Prescott does not appear to favor that opinion; and a Spanish mind—that of Ignatius Loyola—organized the most powerful ruling and administrative body, in some directions, the world has ever seen—the Jesuit Society. We must look deeper; there is no inherent trouble with the Spaniard; he is of noble stock. Three things give life, and, as long as they exist, in individual or nation, no tempests or waves of disaster can overwhelm them.

Daniel Webster, when asked what was the greatest thought he had ever had, replied, "My individual responsibility to God!" The first great source of life is that each man shall keep himself where he can personally hear the messages of the Almighty and obey them. Out of them spring life's great issues.

Secondly, a nation or a man lives only when free and unhindered by others from thinking clearly on all subjects, especially on matters of duty.

Thirdly, a man or a nation truly lives only when each, loving his neighbor as himself, accords to everyone else the same untrammeled freedom, the full enjoyment of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Given these three vital conditions, and their permanence and pervasive indwelling, and decay, or possibility of decay, is out of the question.

PALMY DAYS OF GLORY.

"In the beginning of the sixteenth century," says Prescott, "Spain occupied, perhaps, the most prominent position on the theater of Europe. The numerous states into which she had been so long divided were consolidated into one monarchy. The Moslem crescent, after reigning there for eight centuries, was no longer seen. The authority of the crown did not, as in later times, overshadow the inferior orders of the state. The people enjoyed the inestimable privilege of political representation, and exercised it with manly independence. The nation at large could boast as great a degree of constitutional freedom at that time as any other in Christendom. Under a system of salutary laws and an equitable administration, domestic tranquillity was secured, public credit established, trade, manufactures, and even the more elegant arts, began to flourish, while a higher education called forth the first blossoms of that literature which was to ripen into so rich a harvest before the close of the century. Arms abroad kept pace with arts at home. Spain found her empire suddenly enlarged by important acquisitions both in Europe and Asia, while a New World beyond the waters poured into her lap treasures of countless wealth, and opened an unbounded field for honorable enterprise." Into the strong masonry of this monarchy came the seed which grew, displaced the stones, and rent the masonry. Torquemada sowed the seed, and Isabella permitted it.

WHEN SPAIN'S GREATNESS BEGAN TO DECLINE.

On that day when Torquemada constrained the gentle Isabella to attempt the "extirpation of heresy," and she consented to ask the hierarchy for the Inquisition—the bull dating Nov. 1, 1478—Spain began to totter. During Torquemada's power, declares Prescott, ten thousand two hundred and twenty were burned, and ninety-seven thousand three hundred and twenty-one "reconciled by various other penances." In the year of Spain's discovery of America, Torquemada rushed into the presence of Ferdinand and Isabella, and, flinging down the crucifix, dared them to keep the Jews in their dominions. Overborne by his fanatical earnestness, they yielded, and announced, in effect, that "From Spain shall be expelled men, manly souls—which no nation can spare without impoverishing herself—men who prefer to be exiles rather than close that door through which they see straight up to God; and, in Spain, no man shall think, unless in a way prescribed by others, whether as to his duties, or, even, as in Galileo's case, as to whether the sun or the earth is the centre of all; and that means that the other man, the 'neighbor,' is also to be forced to think only as he is circumscribed." "Torquemada," says Prescott, "waged war upon freedom of thought in every form. In 1400 he burned Hebrew Bibles, and more than six thousand volumes of oriental learning at Salamanca, the seat of learning."

"Expel those who think; compel those not to think who remain," cried Torquemada—a fiat which has hastened Spain's ruin.

When Spain received this order she began to obey, and her decay was slow, but inevitable. And it is not a little singular that a Madrid editor complains that "Spain is controlled by worn-out minds."

TO STOP THINKING MEANS IGNORANCE AND INEFFICIENCY.

To stop thinking means, to a nation, terrible mischief. First, it means what appears on the surface—that ignorance is to prevail; that Spain shall have only four millions out of seventeen millions who can read and write. How can a nation be alive with progressive activities where the order has been since Torquemada, "Stop thinking"? Stop up the lake, its inflows and outflows, and you make a stagnant pond. There may be bulk of water, and on it the brightness of scum, but no longer the rippling glitter of living, moving water. Men can not know how to do the right thing; they are not progressive. Blanco—while all the world laughs at the ignorance and folly—can hold high carnival in Havana over the "news" that Boston and New York are in ashes, and can make these people whom Torquemada stopped from thinking believe his tale.

But men who do not think will do everything but think. That, to a great, proud, active-minded race, means splendid, showy, shallow work and play, external honor in place of integrity; swelling boastfulness, "finjo de palabras," the flux of words, in place of realities or conscientious performance.

Then, when the advantages of superior armor and weapons, of undoubted courage and cunning, and of the awe which their very presence inspired in the minds of the Aztecs and the Incas, had enabled them to plunder the fabulous wealth of Mexico and Peru, such unrivaled riches, augmented still further by excessive revenues wrested for four hundred years from the Indies, East and West, gave the haughty Dons the means to live lives of gilded idleness and folly, deprived alike of the healthful stimulus of competitive industry which has spurred the Anglo-Saxon race to change the face of the material world, and of that untrammeled freedom of thought and aspiration which has inspired its possessors to almost "explore the illimitable and grasp the infinite" in art, science, music, literature, and all other worthy mental and spiritual achievement. Let him who doubts the power of luxury and bigotry to fetter progress turn carefully the pages of Spanish history for four centuries, and note how few have been her great men other than Cervantes and Murillo, Lope de Vega and Coronado, since the days of Torquemada, Cortez, and Pizarro. Let him note that her territory in 1900 bids fair to be only about one-fiftieth of what it was in 1600.

Instead of exploring a broad field of intellectual or semi-intellectual activities and enjoyments, such as political harangues, vast religious and philanthropic conventions, lyceum lectures, Shakespearean plays, and the expanse of free literature—all of which require thought and create thought and freedom of thought—the Spaniards have frequented the arena, with its bull fights, devoting Sunday, the day of thought, home and humanity, to such brutal enjoyments. And so the mind of the Spaniard, perhaps inherently as fine as that of the Anglo-Saxon, is degraded into watching the torments of a bull or the pugnacious antics of two feathered bipeds.

CUBA LIBRE AND A NEW SPAIN.

Will this decline of Spain stop short of a "fall?" I believe it will; I trust it will. The turning-point may be near. America will free Cuba and hand her over to the native Cubans, after exacting guarantees that will allow her people to think. She will deal in a similar liberal spirit with Porto Rico and the Philippines. Then Spain may begin to realize, as China did in the astonishing lesson she received from Japan, that character born of thought rules in this world. Spain must be allowed to think, must be aroused to think. By revolution of government, or of society, some great leader—Sagasta, perhaps, who seems sagacious and good-willed—may come to the front and give Spain religious toleration, public schools, a free press, and inaugurate industrial and philanthropic and social reforms. Then, perhaps, a new Spain, whose millions will read and write, will make character Godward and manward as a natural result of spiritual freedom, mental training, and industrial activity. Such a Spain will remember the bull fights and the other gross pleasures of to-day only as relics of barbarism. She may not change her creed, but she will not retain the bigotry with which she has narrowed it for ages, even in its noblest tenets. She may not be less wealthy than in the past, but her possessions will be sanctified to her use and enjoyment by the honest toil which will be necessary to acquire them. Thus it may well happen that Spain, no less than Cuba, may become free and regenerate in the truest sense, as a result of American conquest.—Conrad Williams, in Success.

TROUBLES THAT DO NOT COME.

Most people have troubles. Some of these may be great; others may be slight. It is almost universally true, however, that the heaviest burdens that are borne are those of anxiety, solicitude, and apprehension. There is the fear of possible evil that is about to befall, but that oftentimes does not; of loss that is about to be suffered, but that often does not occur. If we were willing to leave the future in God's hands as we are to leave the past, and if we are ready to live simply in the present, accepting his grace and help for each passing moment, our lives would be more happy, as they would certainly be more efficient. It has been said that most people suffer their troubles three times—in apprehension, in actuality, and in memory. The worst of it is that a very great part of this is positively unnecessary, owing to the fact that many of the troubles that are dreaded never come. Very few possibilities are probabilities, and exceedingly few of the probabilities become certainties. The one who builds air-castles, who dreams instead of working, and who counts chickens before they are hatched, is, at the best, engaged in profitless occupations, and is sure to have disappointment in the end. But even this disappointment, after the fair and pleasing dreams, is not so severe on one's vitality as is the habit of worrying over possible ills that threaten. The Lord Jesus Christ warns and commands us against this worse than idle habit of worrying about the future. We are not to be anxious as to the morrow. To-morrow will take care of itself. Sufficient to each day is the evil thereof. God will see his children through each day as it comes, but he does not promise grace to help before the trouble comes. Let it alone. Leave the future in God's hands.—Methodist Recorder.

LITTLE THINGS

If any little word of mine
May make a life the brighter,
If any little song of mine
May make a heart the lighter,
God help me speak the little word,
And take my bit of singing,
And drop it in some lonely vale,
To set the echoes ringing!

$50 A DAY.

MR. EDITOR: Kindly allow one to say a word anent the financial nondescript familiarly known as an "evangelist." Before starting out, I wish to remark that every general rule has its exceptions, and that these exceptions pro e the rule, and that in making the remarks which follow I except the lonesome crowd making up the exceptions above referred to; hence they are not expected to take offense or get hurt at what I may say.

Well, my animosity towards the class under discussion has culminated in consequence of the result of an effort to secure one of them for service at San Jones Camp Meeting, to be held in July. At the semi annual meeting of the Camp Meeting Association in April, the Committee on Public Worship was directed to secure, if possible, the services of an evangelist who had no fad of his own, and had the reputation of feeling an interest in the salvation of the race for which Christ died, etc. In conformity with this requirement of the association, the committee wrote to a some what noted and alleged successful evangelist, stating what was wanted, and asked what he could do for us in the way of calling sinners to repentance, etc. In reply, he said that his time was engaged for the entire year, except four rest-days in the first week in August, which four days he was willing to devote to the association for a consideration of $200. Fifty dollars per diem for the services of one man to proclaim a gospel, the Author of which had not where to lay his head! Recalling the statement in the BOOK that "God so loved the world he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but shall have everlasting life," I can hardly conceive that in the councils of the Infinite it was ever imagined that one of the beneficiaries of this tremendous sacrifice, 1900 years after its consummation on Calvary, would presume, or dare, to put a price upon the delivery of this message of salvation and infinite mercy! The fact remains, however, and the thought reverts to the scene in the temple—the scourge of small cords and the characterization of this sort of cattle by our Lord on that occasion. These people who make merchandise of the blood of the covenant and the sacrifice of the Son of God a subject of barter and sale in the light of nineteen centuries of the beneficence and benefactions to our race of the gospel of our Lord, are infinitely worse, in the eyes of God, than were the Jews who took advantage of the devotion of the people to their temple and its worship, to use the structure as a store for the sale of their commodities. In order to give this class of preachers a semblance of authority to proclaim the gospel, there must be a radical revision of the commission to the twelve, as recorded in the Gospels. Something like this would cover the ground if we could only find some musty old Greek manuscript to cover the case: "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized," etc., at $50 a day, and board and lodging! "Freely ye have received," but you can sell salvation for just as big a price as you can get from those interested. "Lo, I am with you always," even when you make merchandise of my death and passion. When John the Baptist sent and asked the Master, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" the answer should have been, in order to justify modern conditions, 'Go tell John what you have seen, and especially that the poor have the gospel preached to them now and by me." But later—say in the nineteenth century and among the people called Protestants—this same gospel will be preached to the masses at $50 per diem and board!

Compare the ministry of the apostles, as recorded in the Gospels, and put there as a pattern for their successors in the work, especially that of Paul, whose own hands ministered to the wants of himself and those that were with him; who coveted no man's silver or gold, but determined to know nothing among the people save Christ and him crucified. How different is the spirit that actuates the gentlemen under consideration! They not only desire the silver and the gold, but they make the assurance of its payment, in exorbitant amount also, a condition precedent to the rendering of service in the Lord's vineyard. Think of one of these unselfish Simon Magnuses snatching brands from the "eternal burning" at $50 a snatch and grub. Suppose the call from Macedonia for help had come to one of these peripatetic gospelers—the question of compensation would have had to be settled before anything else was done, though the whole nation of the Greeks had made their beds in hell as a result.

There is not a word or sentence in the Book that gives the semblance of license for traffic in the gospel of Christ, and the vendors of doves and the money-changers of the temple at Jerusalem were Christian gentlemen in comparison with these people who, in the light of nineteen centuries of that gospel, and who are witnesses of its benedictions and blessings on the children of Adam, yet do not hesitate to make merchandise of the message of love and peace to a fallen race, and the sacrifice of the Son of God a means for the filling of their own coffers! These are they to whom the Master referred when he said to the multitude: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you! Depart from me, ye that work iniquity!" In every instance where lasting spiritual benefit results from the ministrations of these perambulating sky-pilots, it is because our Lord never fails to honor his gospel, even though preached by the devil himself.

I earnestly pray the good Lord to save our camp meeting from the presence of these traffickers in the plan of salvation, and that instead he will send us some consecrated itinerant who, fresh from his own field of labor, has a deeper interest in the salvation of souls than he has in the loaves and fishes, and a higher regard for the prosperity of the church of God than of the size of his bank balance.

Time was—and not so far back, either—when the divine Shekinah was not chained to the chariot wheels of such avaricious perambulating pulpiteers. On the contrary, each faithful itinerant who was armed with a commission from the Great Head of the church had a revival of his own each year, the results of which for good are demonstrated in the mighty strides and spirituality of primitive Methodism.

The "perilous times" referred to by Peter as being in the womb of the future seem to have arrived, when men shall become selfish, covetous, and otherwise unholy and unclean; now have the right of way, and among the hell-wethers of the flock are found our friends who are willing to work for the salvation of men at $50 a day, and their board and lodging! May the infinite mercy that redeemed our race pity and forgive any man, or set of men, who measure the value of a human soul in dollars and cents, or who would make the gospel of God an article of merchandise!

I think the above is a correct expression of the larger volume of sentiment among the rank and file of the church, and of the world itself, touching the matter at issue; and in order that no one may be blamed for what I have said except myself, I sign my full name to this article, and ask its publication in the ADVOCATE, holding myself personally responsible for, all and singular, its utterances. I ask only such perambulators as the coat fits to put it on; it has no reference to anyone else.

Yours truly, E. G. DELAP.

FLASHES OF THOUGHT.

We only know God as he reveals himself through his Word and Spirit. In like manner we do not know individuals until they reveal themselves unto us. The human spirit, with its various powers and capacities, operates in and through a material vehicle. Thus the ego—the real character of every individual—is hidden from the scrutiny of men. The elemental forces of the individual personality will find expression in the sphere of thought, feeling, and action. Every man gives the world a revelation of himself. No man can be false to his conscious personal self. The inner and outer life are the two hemispheres of his being. The latter is only an expression of the former. They correspond with each other. The copy of the individual taken in the sphere of action is identical with the picture in consciousness. He can not suppress nor hide his real self. He will unfold and write himself upon the age in which he lives. Life is not all reception, but includes self-revelation; therefore, no man can be an impostor. I mean that it is impossible for an individual to act, think and feel in direct opposition to his conscious life and the primary forces that underlie mental phenomena.

Beneath the realm of actual mental phenomena there lies the unexplored depths of the human personality. Here is the inconceivable substratum of all mental phenomena, embracing the elemental forces, the primary power of spiritual being. These primary elements unfold in harmony with the character of external environments. To a certain extent he is both the creation and the creator of his environments; but the sphere of action and influence in which the individual moves is determined by the power and state of the inner life.

In this age of material progress the externals of character and the conventional usages of society and religion dominate many minds, failing to perceive that the "externals" which touch man's life in the sphere of action are the creation of his conscious life. Man's works are great, but the human spirit, the creator, is greater. The aggregate forces of modern civilization are the product of the spiritual and intellectual power of the soul. Civilization was wrought out in the conscious life of the race; then projected upon the stage of visible activity. The forces that touch man's life are the material, animal, intellectual, and spiritual. The spiritual is the highest, the intellectual next; the others are subordinate. There are only three doors that open up into the human personality — perception, intuition, and consciousness. Through the first there comes the elements of knowledge, the images and symbols of thought and language. Through the second there comes the primary ideas, such as space and duration. Through the third the Holy Spirit comes in contact with the soul. This is the "sanctum sanctorum" of man's being, into which the Divine Infinite comes with the fullness of divine grace, purchased with the blood of Christ. The conscious center of the personal life, from whence all thought, feeling and volition flow, is also the Spirit's field of influence and operation. Man's relation to God is twofold. The intellectual, emotional and volitional constitute the subordinate relation of the soul. But the soul's higher relationship is spiritual, viz.: salvation from sin and communion with the Holy Spirit. The spiritual is higher than all mentalities. Religion is not in itself an emotion, nor a mere cognition, nor an act of volition, nor a transient state of consciousness, but a living, active principle of divine life. The individual reception and manifestation of religion is termed an "experience of religion." When the soul has realized the transforming power of divine grace, then man's conscious life is in a normal relation to God. The fountain of man's being is purified, his inner life is completely renovated, and he is a "new creature in Christ." The soul is conscious of its transition from a state of sin into one of holiness. It is possible for an individual to lose himself in abstracted idealism, denying all material entities; but it is impossible for the soul to deny the facts of consciousness without entering the darkness of insane nihilism. The activities of the soul, and the facts transpiring in the sphere of consciousness in an experience of religion, are as real as the phenomena of material entity. The substratum of both mind and matter is beyond human comprehension; the keenest thought can not penetrate the hidden depths. There are depths unexplored in every human personality. It is only the phenomena of both spirit and matter that enters the sphere of human comprehension. Thus we only "know in part." But this much we do know: that the conscious life of the race underlies the world of action, and, in order to purify, elevate and strengthen man's exterior life, his internal life must be made right. To accomplish this, two factors must come in contact with the soul, viz.: divine truth and the personal agency of the Holy Spirit.

All man-made systems of religion and philosophy have utterly ignored the needs of man's conscious life; but it is only in Christianity that complete provisions are found to meet the demands of the human soul in the two departments of being, viz: the conscious life and the sphere of action.

BRO. DAVIES ON "SUMMATION OF CHURCH HISTORY."

MR. EDITOR: It is not my purpose in this paper to discuss the tenor of Bro. Davies' "Summation," but to attack his premise, if such it may be called. Why any writer in this advanced age of theological discussion and ecclesiastical history should proceed along the old ruts, ignoring 4,000 years of the formative period of the church, is a thing, to me, beyond comprehension. The very foundation of Armenian theology and of Methodist usage is laid upon the foundation "of Moses and the prophets."

If Bro. Davies will kindly show us any foundation for this error of Bishop Hurst, and others, into which he has fallen, he will very greatly improve the results of their labors and enlighten the public mind. The error followed by Hurst is almost verbally assumed by Bro. Davies, viz.: "Church history naturally divides itself into four great periods. Period 1—From the advent of Christ (B. C. 4 to A. D. 1) to the conversion of Constantine, A. D. 312."

If Bro. Davies will read Acts vii, 38, he will find that nearly, or quite, fourteen centuries before "the advent of Christ" there was a church; and if he will pursue the apostolic record just a little further, he will find that "the church in the wilderness" was transferred to "the land flowing with milk and honey," and was domiciled in that splendid house which "Solomon built."

Furthermore, if the first period of church history begins with "the advent of Christ (B. C. 4 to A. D. 1)," when did that church having such history begin? The history of anything is the account of that thing from start to finish. A history of the United States from 1865 up to this time would be accepted by no one as United States history. The most important part of our history dates beyond that period. So of the church. All law and all gospel which we now have were in the world long before the "advent of Christ." The gospel was "preached before to Abraham." (Gal. iii, 8.) Here was an organization, a gospel, and men to preach the gospel—"ordinances of divine source"—and all the essentials of a church. Why, then, should anyone speak of church history as "beginning" four thousand years after the introduction of all the constituent elements of a church?

In the perusal of more than 50,000 pages of church history, one of the most flagrant assumptions I have anywhere met is, that the church first began to exist in the world after "the advent of Christ." In Mosheim, Neander, Haganbach, Fisher, and a number of other authors of fame, not one plausible reason for such assumption has been given.

That running construction based on the passage in Daniel (ii, 44), including the seven dynasties and the conversion of Constantine, puts the origin of the church beyond human comprehension, and constitutes the chief element in the historical assumption above alluded to. The puzzle, to my mind, is in fixing the time (under this supposition) when there began to be a church. Here is a period of three hundred years, "from the advent of Christ to the conversion of Constantine," and not a scintilla of evidence at any point in that long period of the establishment of the church.

If at "the advent of Christ," or the choosing of the twelve, or on the "day of Pentecost," or at the sending out of the seventy, or at the resurrection, or the ascension, why do not some of these assumers give us some solid reason for their assumptions? Indeed, somewhere, according to these assumptions, at some place and some time during these three hundred years, there was a 'beginning" for the church of God on earth; but they never tell us when nor where.

If these writers will study history as all history must be studied in order to understand it, by retrospection (from what we have back to the beginning of that thing), it will not be necessary to assume a "beginning," because, by the simplest guidance of facts, we will inevitably reach the beginning, and can go no farther.

J. A. PARKER.

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

Nearly nineteen hundred years ago He who spake with authority answered this question for all time; yet to-day, in a Christian land, with open Bible before us, we, the Christian women of America, are called to pass by on the other side, and, turning our eyes from the homeless, perishing multitudes in Cuba, fix them in admiration on the palaced, Pope-befriended Queen of Spain. To her must go our sympathy and our prayers, while our brethren die unpitied at our doors. And this because, in her efforts to preserve the dynasty of which she is regent, she has refused to yield to the dictates of justice and humanity, choosing rather that thousands of other mothers shall see their children die of starvation before their eyes than that her son should fail to sit on a throne. But we must sympathize with and pray for her. Pray for her? Yes, as we would for any sinner, not as for a saint.

It is significant that while a body representing a portion of the Christian women of America (not the whole) were telegraphing their sympathy and endorsement to Queen Christina, Miss Clara Barton, whose mission of mercy even heathen Turks count holy, was preparing to leave Cuba, because the Red Cross flag is no protection from the brutal soldiery of the peaceable Queen of Spain.

Under these circumstances, is it to be marvelled at that Spanish newspapers are ridiculing our religion, scoffing at our Bible, and pouring contempt on our ministers? They have yet to learn—and, please God, the lesson will soon be taught them—that not all the Lord's people are crying, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace."

SWEET CONTENT.

"What makes you always so cheerful and contented, auntie?" asked a young woman of a dear old lady who had passed through the sunshine and shade of nearly ninety years. "You never seem to mind what comes to you; you take it all as if it was just the thing you wanted, whether it pleases you or not. When I get to be a real old lady I wish I might be just as sweet as you are," and she tenderly kissed the beautiful, wrinkled cheek.

The old lady smiled, pleased at the genial compliment, and then she said: "I never let myself get so used to anything that I can not do without it. I made up my mind years ago that I would not get 'set in my ways.' People who are set in their ways have a hard time. You know we can't always be just where we prefer; we can't always have the things we like best, nor do the things that are easiest. So it is a great deal better not to let yourself get so used to certain ways and certain things that it is hard to change. Now," she said, smiling, "if I find I always want the same chair, and don't like anyone else to occupy it, I make myself get up and sit somewhere else, because I think it is better for me to be contented in one place just the same as in another."

"You dear old philosopher," said the other. "I wonder, if I should begin right away, if there is time yet left for me to grow into such sweet content before I die."

Since we are not all such Christian philosophers as this woman who had not lived here more than fourscore years for naught, the Lord, our teacher, uses in our training those methods which we are not wise enough to use for ourselves. By frequent changes in our lot he accustoms us to be content with such things as we have. He teaches us that the "life is more than meat," and that true life does not consist in outward circumstances.

This is the meaning of many providences which we call "mysterious." The wine of character is emptied from vessel to vessel until it is pure and clear—ready for the marriage feast of the church with her Lord.

A heart resting in anything less than the divine fellowship is sure to be, in the end, a disappointed, unsatisfied heart. How good is God to show us this by tearing away the earthly supports upon which we lean, by revealing the thorn beside every rose we gather, by transplanting us from place to place for stronger growth until we have within us the life that triumphs above all change.

Not those who are "at ease from their youth" are to be congratulated; but those who have met vicissitude and hardship, and have learned the sweetness of that life whose springs are in God, independent of all lower sources—these are the happy ones. This is the life hid with Christ in God; this is the life eternal.—New York Advocate.

GOD'S STUDIO.

You go into an artist's studio, and all about the walls are fragments of pictures, blotches of paint, suggestions of scenes, mere hints, and you say, "You call this man an artist?" But your friend replies: "You are only in his studio; these are only his sketches, these are his unfinished works; if you want to know what he means, you must go to the galleries where his finished pictures are gathered."

This world is God's studio. There are sketches, blotches, of what is to be; but the finished work is gone, it is not here; when the picture is ready, it is taken to a higher gallery and a nobler service. The best saint on earth is like a potted plant; when the roots get too great for the pot, and the gardener sees that the pot, which was intended to preserve it, is dwarfing and killing it, he breaks the pot, and takes the plant out and transplants it

"To those everlasting gardens
Where seraphs walk and angels are the wardens."

—Dr. Lyman Abbott.

The minister who succeeds to day is a man who knows how to use his people to the best advantage. He does not attempt to do everything himself. The more work he gets out of others the better the people will like it, and the more time he will have for study and work that no one else can do. That, however, will necessitate a knowledge of human nature. The minister must know men as well as books. If he knows God, the Bible and man, he is in league with a triple alliance that will insure a glorious success. Sometimes you hear "organizations" talked against flippantly. "Organized to death" is a phrase often used. Well, it all depends upon who is at the helm. If the preacher in charge is lacking in administrative ability, he may not be able to handle with effect even one "organization," but if he has the "gift of government," of which Paul speaks, or as the margin reads "wise counsels," or in common parlance "common sense," he has every department of his work thoroughly organized. He knows how to utilize everything and everyone within reach. He has that peculiar skill or faculty which we call tact, which is worth more than a fortune to any preacher who has it.—The Christian.

Prayer is the breath of the spirit that is in harmony with God. Learn the conditions of effectual prayer, and conform to them just as you obey laws of gravitation, of electricity, of physical life. Daily see that the life aim is right and high; that the ruling desire of your heart is toward truth and love; that the will is set with immovable fixedness on right-eousness; that the words and deeds of daily life are in the direction of and in harmony with aim, desire, and purpose, and that you trust in the God revealed in Jesus Christ and abiding within you. Rest in him. Talk to him. Wait in silence before him. Let your whole life of business, of hard labor, of social intercourse, of recreation, of intellectual, artistic, scientific, professional service be in harmony with this doctrine of prayer—this life of prayer.—Bishop Vincent.

If we celebrate the day of the birth of the Son of God at all, let us so celebrate it that he may be well pleased, and that his name may be glorified.—C. L. Reinke, D. D.

MEETING AT WESLEY CHAPEL.

MR. EDITOR: I presume that my good Bro. Abney will advise the ADVOCATE of the results of the meeting at Wesley Chapel, in this city, which began two weeks ago last Wednesday, and was closed last night with a manifest feeling of solemnity and the presence of the divine Spirit in the large audience. That much good was done, the church revived, and precious souls born into the kingdom of grace, I believe the last great day will fully demonstrate.

The advent of Bro. Abney as the pastor of this "Little Church Around the Corner" was a benediction to it and a blessing to the spiritual interests of Methodism in this place. Earnest, zealous, consecrated, he came determined to know nothing among his people save Jesus Christ, and him crucified, and he has been instant in season and out, using all his own powers, and relying upon the promises of the Great Head of the church for an awakening and a revival of the Lord's work among the people over whom the Master has set him as a shepherd.

Thursday, the fifth, brought Bro. Riggs, of the Louisiana Conference, stationed at Vidalia, and from that hour until Wednesday night of the current week this man of God, young in years and an almost novice in the ministry (his third year), labored day and night, early and late, in conjunction with Bro. Abney, in arousing the dormant spirituality of the church membership, and in calling sinners to repentance, and God has honored their efforts, and the fruits are apparent on all sides. Bro. Riggs possesses a peculiar knack of talking to the people about their spiritual condition, their shortcomings and general meanness, that makes him a power for good in meetings of this kind especially, and he does it in such a pleasant, loving way that he wins their love and never repels. His ideas in regard to the utter worthlessness of the average official member of the church, who is so dead in trespasses and sins that Gabriel's trump would not awake them, are original and eminently correct, and the Official Board of Wesley came in for its full quota of attention along these lines. With Bro. Riggs to do the most of the talking, and Bro. Abney to lead the singing, good results were, under God, bound to follow. I commend these brethren to such pastors as are preaching to people who are not endued with more style than religion, and with less sense than godliness. Congregations peculiarly esthetic and refined, and church members who don't know whether they are children of God or the devil, by experience will not take kindly to either one of these consecrated servants of the Master, and as this sort of folks are generally furnished with a pastor to suit their idiosyncrasies, it is not likely that they will be sent for right away. Any church, however, that believes in old-fashioned Methodist religion, and that would enjoy a revival of such religion in their own hearts and in their church, will find it profitable to get the help of these brethren, if they can.

Bro. Riggs tells me that only one family that he knows of indulges in the religious duty of holding family prayer in all that land! I knew of one, some years ago, but he died and went to heaven! I am glad he has a successor, and hope that my beloved Bro. Riggs will succeed in increasing the number of these. The fact that both the others are, and were, Presbyterians, while it is honoring to our brethren of the eternal decrees, it leaves us Methodists in something of a hole, spiritually and numerically. May God abundantly bless the labors of my beloved brother and friend, give him many souls for his hire, and as seals to his ministry, and as stars in his crown of rejoicing, after he, like Paul, has "fought the good fight, finished his course, and kept the faith!" That he will, if spared, make his mark in the itinerancy, and win many souls for his Master, I feel sure. I only pray God to bless both him and Bro. Abney, and keep them humble! That their people will keep them poor, there is no room to doubt. Bro. Burton, of "The Home," did excellent service the two last days of the meeting, besides mingling again with those whom he once served as pastor, and who have not ceased to love him after all these years.

Yours truly, REX.

BRANDON DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

HELD MAY 15, 16, 17, 1898.

The above-named dates will long be remembered by all who had the pleasure of being participator or spectator of the above-named exercises. This institution of learning is located at Montrose, Miss.

I feel sure the sentiment of the people is voiced when I say that this was one of the most enjoyable occasions of our life.

The commencement sermon was preached by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of Forest. Bro. Sullivan had selected as a text the eighth Psalm, and fourth and fifth verses. It was a masterly sermon, and, judging from the many expressions of approbation which we heard on all sides, no better sermon has ever been delivered since the founding of the school in 1881. No one could possibly sit under the soul-stirring words of this eloquent man of God without being constrained to feel the great importance of a higher and more godly life.

Next we attended the concert given by the primary department on Monday night. The little folks reflected great credit on the part of the faithful and efficient faculty of the primary department.

The exercises of Tuesday surpassed our most sanguine expectations. Beginning at 10 o'clock A. M., we were given a series of recitations and declamations interspersed with most charming music. The annual address was made at 11 o'clock by Rev Ira B. Robertson, pastor of the Montrose charge. Bro. Robertson had selected as a subject for his address the word "Character," which he said spoke for itself. The audience was charmed into perfect silence by the eloquence of this grand old soldier of the cross. Many were the secret resolves made then and there to try, by God's help, to build up a more noble and laudable character. The recitations and musical exercises of the evening were followed by the awarding of diplomas to the graduating class by the president of the school.

Last, but not least, came the grand concert on Tuesday night. "It was good to be there."

To the efficient and faithful faculty, both of the literary and musical departments, with Prof. Geo. W. Burton at the head, we can say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," by their earnest and faithful efforts to promote the ambitions and aspirations of our young people to help them to set their mark high and to strive earnestly and persistently to attain it. They have gained a warm place in our hearts and minds. SPECTATOR.

ABOUT THE MINUTES.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me space in the ADVOCATE for explaining the cause of the error reported in the Minutes of Carrollton Avenue charge. The preacher in charge, Bro. P. H. Fontaine, left before Conference, and I submitted a report to Dr. Sawyer on Jan. 6, 1898, which was taken from the Quarterly Conference records up to date of our fourth Quarterly Conference, which was held Oct. 9, 1897. Up to that time there had been but two accessions on profession of faith. Afterward, before Bro. Fontaine left, there were five more.

Respectfully, JACOB COHEN.

New Orleans, La., May 30, 1898.

A man's attitude toward the circumstances of life is a test of his wisdom. Some succumb to the force of their environments, others utilize it to their advantage. A true general will organize victory out of defeat. A philosopher will find a jewel in a toad's head. Bunyan, when in prison, instead of repining, wrote an immortal allegory. Milton, though blind, used the eye of his imagination and saw the wonders of the universe. Out of our trials we can secure a serener patience, if nothing more. Faith, patience and zeal can transform even the most untoward circumstances.—Texas Advocate.

Never be discouraged because good things get on so slowly here; and never fail to do daily that good which lies next to your hand. Do not be in a hurry, but be diligent. Enter into the sublime patience of the Lord.—George Mac Donald.

FROM THE WORK.

A PLEASANT VISIT TO NATCHITOCHES.

On the thirteenth instant I left home for Natchitoches to assist Rev. Houston Armstrong with a revival meeting. I arrived early next morning, and was soon hard at work with three services a day. Bro. Armstrong had opened up the meeting the night before with favorable indications. Bro. A. is very popular with his congregation, and is regarded as a fine preacher, and spiritual. The meeting lasted just one week—only long enough to get well started. The congregations were good—sometimes large, and the interest increased from the beginning to the end. While we had but few conversions, the church was greatly built up and strengthened. It was pronounced a good meeting, and if it could have continued some ten days longer there would have been a gracious revival of saving and sanctifying power.

In the years of 1879-'82 I traveled the Natchitoches and Sabine circuit, and in those days visited Natchitoches quite often. It was quite pleasant to meet so many old friends among whom I mention: Mrs. Walmsley, Hon. Trechels' family, D. C. Scarborough, Esq.; Messrs. Thomas and Charley Porter, Mr. Tatom, Mr. O'Quin, with their respective families, and many others. I had the pleasure of meeting not a few of the "Normal" folks. It is well known that this excellent institution of learning is in fine condition and worthy the patronage of the citizens of Louisiana. I was sorry that I did not find time at suitable hours to visit the college. I met but one of the faculty, Mrs. A. D. McVoy, who is a valuable and able teacher. Mrs. McVoy was very helpful in the meeting as a fine organist and vocalist. My home was with Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Gibson. Mr. Gibson was from home on business; therefore, I was denied the pleasure of his society. Mrs. Gibson was Miss Belle Presley, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. F. Presley, of Sabine parish. No man of Sabine ever did more for his country than Bro. Presley. As a legislator, lawyer, editor and preacher, he stood firm in his day for his country. He has since passed away to his reward. It was my happy pleasure about twelve years ago to celebrate the marriage of Mr. Gibson and Miss Presley. They have four sweet little daughters. I never knew sweeter and better children. Sister Gibson is a lady of excellent spirits—always cheerful and happy.

Our church at Natchitoches is being supported, morally and financially, principally by ladies. Very few men belong to the church. Those ladies, with Mrs. Walmsley, Mrs. Trechel, and others in the lead, never fail to look after every interest of the cause. Sister Gibson more than does her part in taking preachers to her home, and looking after them as a member of her own family. God bless those dear, good ladies, and make them strong in the grace that is in Jesus.

The ADVOCATE should have a larger circulation in that congregation, as it would do a great deal of good.

I failed to mention my pleasure in meeting the Rev. Mr. Weaver, the popular pastor of the Baptist Church of Natchitoches. Bro. Weaver was with us in most all the services, and took part with us. Bro. Weaver is an educated young man of gifts and graces. This is his sixth year at Natchitoches.

I am at home again, and hard at work for the cause of God in my own pulpit. God be with you. R. M. BLOCHER.

Jeanerette, La., May 23, 1898.

Jno. H. Bass, Belzona, May 24: "On the third Sunday we observed Children's Day at Belzona. The programme, as prepared by the Publishing House, was rendered nicely. The children deserve great credit for their nice behavior and close attention. We had a good attendance, and the collections amounted to $7.25. The choir made excellent music for the occasion. We have fine musical talent at Belzona, and then add some of the Silver City's best voices to them, and I would not exaggerate to say that the State can not afford a better choir. We are getting along nicely. The ladies have added some new furniture to the parsonage, which we very much appreciate. We are now taking proper steps to build a new house of worship; expect to begin the building the first of September. Our finances are well up, nearly one-half of the salary having been paid, and more than half of the general collections in sight. I never had an appointment whose people I loved more than these. They are all kind to us wherever we go, and we are made to feel at home with both poor and rich. God bless the people of Belzona circuit, and send us a gracious revival this year all over the work. We are highly pleased with our presiding elder. He is kind and fatherly, and rules with a tender hand of love. We are glad to have him come, for he brings cheerfulness and sunshine with him. We have announced for him to lecture at Belzona on the first Sunday night on 'Over the Sea,' and let the collections go towards our new house at this place. Love to all the brethren. We have gotten twenty new subscribers to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and are taking collections in every congregation for the Orphans' Home."

Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, P. C., Crowley, La., May 30, 1898: "Our work has been progressing splendidly in the last three months. We have received twenty-five accessions during the regular services—about one-half of them by profession of faith, and eighteen accessions during our recent protracted services, conducted by Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker, of Louisiana Avenue Church. We have received a total of forty-three since Conference. Some of these converts bid fair to make pillars in the church. Some six or eight solid young men have been soundly converted, and have started out to work for God. Financially, the church has done good work. The Ladies' Aid (Mrs. D. A. Burton, president) has papered the parsonage richly, and are fast making our home one of the most desirable in the State Conference. They have raised in all about $115, which has not been reported. This money has gone for putting carpet in church, papering parsonage, etc. We have raised for all purposes $1000 since Conference. About $600 of this has been or is being expended on the parsonage, painting it externally, paying debt, etc. Everything indicates that God is going to give us an abundant success this year."

The young man who starts in business life with a good athletic training back of him will be able to stand more than the man who has not had the same advantage. Nevertheless, if he overworks and neglects his health, he is likely to fall a victim to some fatal malady like his less fortunate brother.

There is only one safe road for a man to tread in the matter of health. That is the road of eternal vigilance. No man, no matter how strong he may be naturally, can with impunity neglect the little ills and indispositions of life. These little disorders are what make the big ones. When a man suffers from headaches and loss of appetite, feels drowsy and dull during waking hours, cannot sleep at night and is nervous and shaky at all times, he is in a dangerous condition. If he long neglects his condition he will find himself a very sick man. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of all medicines for the many diseases that are caused by an impaired digestion and insufficient and improper nourishment. It creates a hearty, healthy appetite; it makes digestion and assimilation perfect; it invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and nerve tonic. It is the best of all medicines for nervous disorders and it cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, if taken in its earlier stages, before the lungs are too far wasted. For chronic, bronchial, throat and nasal affections it is an unequaled remedy. An honest dealer will not suggest some inferior substitute.

Rev. C. M. Lemond, (P. O. Box 207), Quanah, Hardeman Co., Texas, writes: "I write to say that during the late trouble between the States it became my duty as well as privilege to speak in the open air at night, which produced slight hemorrhages and loss of voice from which I had suffered more or less for a number of years, until that God-send 'Golden Medical Discovery,' given to the world by the inventive and scientific brain of Dr. R. V. Pierce, was obtained. After six bottles had been used the pains and aches in my lungs began to give way, and now I feel that, with a judicious course of life I may live many years. I thank God for giving to the world a man who has done so much for suffering humanity."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

AT THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

No 2.

Having seen about all there is to see at Mt. Vernon, our little party boarded the trolley car and sped back to Alexandria, and thence to Arlington. Here, as well as at Mt. Vernon, we were able to see the points of greatest interest without waste of time through the efficiency of our well-posted and courteous chaperone. The entire party were delighted at both places. You enter Arlington through an immense stone gateway exactly like the gate of an ancient Egyptian temple. Its colossal columns are engraved with the names of several of the illustrious generals of the late war. To reach the Mansion, you must make a gradually ascending journey of a quarter of a mile, or more, Mt. Arlington being, perhaps, as high as Mt. Vernon. The Mansion is of Grecian architecture. Its massive Doric columns, modeled after those of a famous Athenian temple, make it a very imposing structure. The view from the portico is beautiful beyond description. Not even the view from the summit of Lookout Mountain can eclipse it. Not far away rolls the majestic Potomac, and beyond it a vast and variegated landscape stretches away beyond the reach of vision. Alexandria to the right, Georgetown to the left, and Washington in front—what a magnificent scene! Washington is so near by that all its objects of interest can be plainly seen. What a world of meaning there is in this to one who knows what Washington is! And the grounds about the Mansion are exceedingly beautiful. This Mansion was built in 1802 by George Washington Parke Custis, grandson of Mrs. Washington, and at his death became the property of his only daughter, Mary Custis Lee, wife of General R E Lee. Lee, then a colonel in the United States Army, was living here when the Secession War broke out. From here he went, April 22, 1861, to Richmond to unsheathe his valorous sword in defense of what he believed to be the cause of truth and righteousness. Immediately after his exit the Mansion and the grounds, which are of vast extent, were seized by the Federal Government, and used for military purposes. The Mansion became headquarters for United States generals, whose commands, numbering many thousands of blue coats, were here encamped. Thousands of cords of wood were cut from the magnificent forests. A hospital was here established, and finally, before the war closed, it became a cemetery, and a cemetery it will remain until the archangel's resurrection trumpet shall sound.

At Arlington you are not allowed to inspect all the apartments, as at Mt. Vernon, most of them being occupied as a residence by the superintendent of the grounds. The central hall, however, and one of the front rooms, which is quite large, are open to the public. Here a register is kept in which every visitor is expected to enroll his name. What good purpose this serves, who can tell? Here, in this very room, in 1831 Robert E. Lee was married to Mary Custis. Near the Mansion in the rear are several structures of interest. "The Temple of Fame" is a circular colonnade, surmounted by a graceful dome. On its majestic columns are inscribed the names of a number of Union generals, and also the names of Washington and Lincoln.

Another structure of interest is a sylvan temple in which services are held annually on Decoration Day. It has no roof except on Decoration Day, when it is overspread with canvas. Its tall, well-proportioned columns of marble, and its elaborate cornice, wreathed with a rich profusion of evergreen vines, form a veritable "thing of beauty." Not far distant are the tombs of the generals. These are quite numerous, and also quite diverse in size and style. Near by sixteen thousand soldiers lie entombed. As in other national cemeteries, the graves are arranged in rows with equal distances between, and each grave is marked with a small marble or granite stone bearing the name of the soldier, his State, and the number given to his grave in the records of the War Department. Away, away, far beyond the reach of vision, stretch these silent mementoes of the ravages of grim-visaged war. There are here 2,111 stone slabs that bear no inscription. These mark the resting-place of soldiers who could not be identified. A massive monument of stone, with an appropriate inscription, has been erected in memory of these nameless warriors. Here and there you see engraved on a bronze tablet a stanza from O'Hara's "Bivouac of the Dead." At no one place do you find more than a stanza; but by inspecting all the tablets you get the whole poem. As many of our readers may not have seen it, we give it entire:

"The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet
That brave and fallen few.

"On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

"No rumor of the foe's advance
Now swells upon the wind;
No troubled thought at midnight haunts
Of loved ones left behind.

"No vision of the morrow's strife
The warrior's dream alarms;
No braying horn nor screaming fife
At dawn shall call to arms.

"The neighing troop, the flashing blade,
The bugle's stirring blast,
The charge, the dreadful cannonade,
The din and shout are past.

"Rest on, embalmed and sainted dead!
Dear as the blood ye gave!
No impious footsteps here shall tread
The herbage of your grave.

"Nor shall your glory be forgot
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where Valor proudly sleeps.

"Nor wreck, nor change, nor Winter's blight,
Nor Time's remorseless doom,
Shall dim one ray of holy light
That gilds your glorious tomb."

On the same day, before starting to Mt. Vernon, we had taken in the "Corcoran Art Gallery." Of this I shall not speak in detail, as it would require much space to do so in a satisfactory way. This magnificent collection is worthy of the attention of all lovers of art. The average traveler, however, needs to read up on Greek history, Greek mythology and Greek art, in order to appreciate the masterpieces in the department of sculpture. Many of the paintings, too, are invested with a new significance when you have conferred with the muse of history. I had seen all these years ago, but was glad to have an opportunity to see them again.

"The Corcoran Art Gallery, Mount Vernon, and Arlington—that is enough for one day," said one of our party as the sun approached the western horizon, and to this all agreed.

Next morning our same party, minus Craighead, who had left for home, took in the Congressional Library and the Capitol. This time we were chaperoned by two congressmen and three congressmen's wives, viz: Mr. and Mrs Loyd, Mr. and Mrs. Vandiver, and Mrs. Cooney—all Missourians. Their courtesy and kind attentions were highly appreciated by all.

"The Library of Congress" is, next to the Capitol, the greatest attraction at Washington. It is a new building, commenced in 1888, and completed in 1897. It is contiguous to the Capitol. The lot on which it stands comprises ten acres, for which the government paid $585 000. This price will not seem extravagant when it is remembered that these grounds then comprised two blocks containing seventy residences. The cost of the building, exclusive of site, was $6 032.124 54. The building covers three and a half acres, exclusive of the approaches. The dimensions are 470 by 340 feet. It contains four open courts, each 150 feet long by 75 feet wide. The exterior is of New Hampshire granite. Its dome, which towers up to the height of 195 feet, is covered with gold, which glistens in the sun's rays as if burnished in the finest style of the goldsmith's art. The building is absolutely fire-proof. True, it contains a few wooden floors, but these are merely a thin covering resting upon a foundation of stone or terra cotta. It contains 2,165 windows, and is the best-lighted library in the world. The shelving aggregates 44 miles, and has a capacity for more than two millions of books. There is room for enough additional shelving to make 100 miles in all, thus making room for 4,500,000 volumes. The number of volumes at present is a little over 1,000,000, including pamphlets. It is universally conceded by architects and world-wide travelers that the interior of this building, especially "the Main Entrance Hall" and the adjacent apartments, surpasses any on earth in beauty and magnificence. Exhaust the common stock of eulogistic adjectives—"beautiful," "grand," "splendid," "magnificent," etc.; then get out your "Standard Dictionary" and "Roget's Thesaurus," and make out a catalogue as long as the moral law, and when you have finished the task, you will realize that human speech is inadequate to the task of describing the variegated scenes of splendor which burst upon the vision as you enter these classic halls. Painting and Sculpture, in their loftiest reaches of magnificent achievement, here appear as the handmaids of Architecture, while she exhausts her sublimest energies in a supreme effort to erect a temple worthy of the occupancy of the goddess of knowledge. Such a variety of colors and tints and hues, such prodigality of artistic skill, such uniqueness of design and delicacy of execution, such exquisite symmetry running through the whole, such perfection of taste, were never before conjoined in one architectural plan. My imagination, in its loftiest flights, had never pictured a scene half so beautiful. It is gratifying to know that this structure, the most beautiful product of architectural skill the world ever saw, is wholly American. Of the fifty sculptors and painters employed in the construction of these matchless ornamentations, everyone was a native of this "land of the free."

Two spacious apartments, most luxuriously furnished, are set apart for the exclusive use of the two Houses of Congress. These apartments, however, are open to visitors under certain restrictions. The Library is connected with the Capitol by telephone. Moreover, the two buildings are connected by a subterranean pneumatic tube for the purpose of conveying books from the one to the other. When a congressman wants a book from the Library he orders it by telephone, and here it comes underground almost instantaneously. And not only a book, but a cart-load of them can be thus conveyed. If congressmen fail to post themselves preparatory to debate, the fault is their own.

It would be a great mistake, however, to suppose that this library is for the use of congressmen alone. All the rich resources of this vast conservatory of the world's literature and science are at the command of the humblest citizen. Exactly in the centre of the building is an octagon-shaped apartment, about 100 feet in diameter and 125 feet high. This is the reading room. It is admirably lighted, and amply supplied with desks and chairs. In the center of the room is "the distributing desk." A reader seated at any of the desks, when he desires a particular book, communicates with the official at the distributing-desk, who immediately, by telephone or a pneumatic tube, orders it from the particular room where he knows it to be (he has a catalogue before him), and presently here it comes in a small cable car propelled by electricity. Only those who wish to read are admitted to the floor of this reading room. Spectators, however, may enter the spacious galleries which environ it on the third floor, and look down upon the workers as long as they like, provided they keep their mouths shut. Should you forget the proviso, an aid to memory will be furnished you from the tongue of "an American citizen of African descent," who looks and talks as if he owned Uncle Sam and all his subjects. Our little party can testify that not even a congressman's wife can spin a yarn in this apartment.

From the library our party went to the Capitol, and took in its principal attractions. I shall make no attempt at a description of this noted structure. Everybody knows that it is regarded as one of the most magnificent pieces of architecture the world ever saw. Viewing it from the exterior, you can not fail to write it down as one of "the wonders of the world." Its beauty and grandeur grow upon you the more you contemplate it. The interior is in keeping with the exterior. Few spots on earth leave such an indelible impression upon the mind as does the rotunda, with its opulence of high-art products and the indescribably splendid dome that overarches it.

Under the guidance of our distinguished chaperones we saw the Senate and the House in session, but could not tarry long enough to become interested in what was going on. We visited the Supreme Court Room, the President's Room, etc., to the end of the chapter.

The National Museum, the Smithsonian Institute, the Navy Yard, the Pension Bureau, the Patent Office, the State, War and Navy Building, the Treasury, and the White House, are places visited by everybody that goes to Washington; but I shall attempt no description of them here.

One structure more I shall notice, and then bring these notes to a close, viz: the Washington Monument. This magnificent obelisk towers up to the amazing height of 555 feet. Until the erection of the Eiffel Tower in Paris, a few years since, it was the tallest structure ever erected by the hand of man, being more than 30 feet higher than the tower of the celebrated Cologne Cathedral. The shaft is 55 feet square at the base and 34 feet at the top. It can be seen for many miles in any direction, pictured, as it were, upon the sky. Ascending to its summit by means of an elevator, or by means of a spiral stairway of 900 steps, if you prefer, you have a view of Washington and vicinity such as you can get nowhere else—magnificent in the superlative degree. The cost of this monument was $1 300,000.

MANSFIELD COMMENCEMENT.

On Sunday, June 5, we had the privilege of preaching the commencement sermon of Mansfield Female College. The spacious college chapel was well filled with an audience that gave close and apparently interested attention, to what we had to say. Elegant music was furnished by the college choir. In the afternoon we attended an Epworth League service, presided over by Miss Sligh, a member of the faculty. The service was an exceedingly interesting one. A number of essays were read, some by representatives of the college, both teachers and pupils; some by young men of the town. Several of the essays were of a high order of merit, and were most effectively read. An appropriate service of song was rendered in excellent style. At night we had the pleasure of listening to the annual Epworth League sermon by Rev. Paul M. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference. The sermon was appropriate to the occasion, and was both interesting and edifying. We were glad of an opportunity of hearing this gifted young minister. Monday morning, at five o'clock, we were aboard a T. and P. train, homeward bound.

We regretted that we could not remain to enjoy the exercises of the entire commencement. During our stay at Mansfield we made headquarters at the college. We were delighted with what we saw and heard. Prof. Sligh and his excellent wife are born teachers, and they have had many years of experience in the school-room. With a good curriculum and an efficient faculty they are doing educational work of a most excellent type. Nor are their efforts restricted to the development of the intellectual powers. Both are Christians in the highest sense of the word, and they seek to mould the characters of those who are placed under their care in accordance with Christian ideals. The atmosphere of Mansfield Female College is that of a Christian home of the very best type. Most heartily do we commend this school to the consideration of parents who have daughters to educate. Here they will find a school in which intellectual culture and development of the moral and religious powers go hand in hand. The Methodists of Louisiana ought to fill this institution to overflowing at the very next session. The buildings are spacious, the grounds are ample, and the climate exceedingly salubrious.

A write-up of the commencement exercises will be furnished in due time.

During our brief stay we had the privilege of visiting the parsonage-home of Bro. and Sister Harper, and enjoying their cordial hospitalities.

THE ALABAMA CHAUTAUQUA.

The fifth Annual Session of the Alabama Chautauqua will be held June 25 to July 9. It has on its programme a number of distinguished lecturers, and some smaller fry, such as the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. It has a number of schools such as properly belong to an up-to-date Chautauqua—Art, Oratory, Physical Culture, Pedagogy, Kindergarten, etc. This Chautauqua is located in Talladega, a city of 5,000 inhabitants, in the mountain region of North Alabama, whose inhabitants compare favorably in intelligence and culture with those of any city in the State. It has the advantages of easy accessibility, an invigorating climate, and health-giving mineral waters. Here you find a multitude of refined and cultivated people gathered from an extensive region to spend a brief Summer vacation, not in dissipation or hurtful idleness, but in such occupation of the mind as is restful and at the same time conducive to culture, refinement and high-grade sociability. This we take pleasure in saying after having attended this Chautauqua at one of its sessions.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference convened at Hattiesburg, Miss, 9 o'clock A M, May 26, with Rev. C. A. Powell, P. E., in the chair. Rev. C. F. Emery was re-elected secretary, with Mr. J. W. Dean, assistant.

The inquiry into the spiritual state of the various pastoral charges was most gratifying. Notable advancement along this line was noticeable in the churches at Moss Point, Biloxi, and Hattiesburg.

The opening sermon of the Conference was a very impressive one from the text, II Cor. v, 11, preached by Rev. J. P. Drake at 11 A. M., Thursday.

A plan for raising money to rebuild the district parsonage at Hattiesburg was adopted, by which the sum to be raised is apportioned among the pastoral charges.

The character of the following local preachers was passed and their licenses renewed: R G. Williams, M. P. Jones, W. C. Biheron, H. B. Gilmore, S E Flenrry, John Flenrry, James King, J. H. Havens, W. W. Broom.

Dr. W. L. Hightower, of Moss Point, was granted license to preach.

The resignations of L. N. Dantzler and J. C. Clower, as trustees of the Seashore Camp Grounds, were accepted, and Dr. E. F. Griffin, H. A. Camp, J. S. Otis and T. M. Evans were elected trustees.

The several pastors reported that the assessments ordered by the Annual Conference were being raised, and the amounts collected to date compared favorably with the usual collections in hand at this season of the year.

A communication was read from Rev. M L. Burton, manager of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, regretting his inability to attend the Conference. Rev. J. W. Chambers addressed the Conference in behalf of this institution, and the following resolutions offered by Rev. N. B Harmon were passed, and publication requested in the ADVOCATE:

"We have heard with pleasure the message sent us by Rev. M. L Burton, agent of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, and we congratulate the Methodists of Mississippi on the establishment of the Home, and commend it to the liberal support of our people, hoping that the suggestions made by the agent, through Bro Chambers, will be immediately heeded by usall. We extend a hearty welcome to Bro. Burton to all our pulpits and charges."

Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth Female College, made a very interesting report of the work being done in that institution of learning.

The following resolution, offered by Rev. J. P. Drake, was adopted, and publication requested:

"We have heard with pleasure the report of Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth Female College, and we heartily commend to the people of the Seashore district all colleges, male and female, under the auspices of the Mississippi Conference, and we deprecate deeply the spirit that causes any of our people to patronize State institutions rather than those under our own care, for we should put moral and religious instruction above every other consideration."

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: T. M. Evans, A. J. Clark, S. J. Johnson, A. P. Cox, with the following alternates: Dr. E F. Griffin, W. K. Ramsey.

The following resolution, introduced by Rev. George P. McKeown, was adopted by a rising vote:

"Whereas, By limitation Rev. C. A. Powell is holding his last District Conference for this district, it is considered appropriate to record some expression of him as its presiding elder; And, whereas, During his incumbency in office, which, during the past three years and a half, has been characterized by events of serious moment, requiring the exercise of wisdom, prudence, and ability, rejoicing in the evidences of success that are apparent throughout the district, and recognizing that these results are largely due to his faithfulness, we offer to Bro. C. A. Powell our affectionate regard, commend him to the care of the Great Head of the church, and pray for his permanent restoration to health."

A resolution offered by Mr. T. M. Evans was adopted, memorializing the Board of Church Extension to grant a donation of $1000 to supplement the contributions that may be raised by a loan, so as to provide for the erection of a church at Gulfport, not to cost less than $2500.

Biloxi was selected as the next place for holding the District Conference.

A resolution offered by Rev. C. F. Emery, thanking the people of Hattiesburg for their kind hospitality, the Picayune and Times-Democrat and Gulf and Ship Island railroad Company for appreciated courtesies, was adopted by a rising vote.

After covering the entire field of inquiry as provided by the Discipline, Conference adjourned at 12:30 P. M., Saturday, May 28.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Cleveland, Miss., from the eighteenth to the twentieth at noon, was the scene of one of the most interesting and spiritual District Conferences that has ever been held in this, the Greenville, district. The Holy Spirit was with us in great power from beginning to the end, and we would like to say at this point that the preachers were not the only ones that were blessed, but all the lay delegates got a large part. The reports show that there has been a wonderful improvement in the district, both spiritually and otherwise. There will be five or six new churches erected in this district within the next few months, all of which will be or nearly clear from debt. Our district parsonage is at last a fact, and is now ready for its occupants. There were several resolutions offered during the Conference, all of which were good and to the point, but send you below two or three resolutions offered and adopted:

Resolved, That we, as a District Conference, deplore the fact that the boys and girls of Methodist homes in our district do not attend our own schools in preference to others as they should, and that we kindly request the presidents of Millsaps College and Grenada Collegiate Institute to give this territory special attention, and assure them of our hearty co-operation.

(Signed) C. H. PITTMAN,
H P. CROWE,
W. C. HARRIS.

Resolved, That the District Conference recommend that the various pastors and churches of the district be, if possible, more earnest and vigorous in the prosecution of the illegal liquor dealers.

Resolved, That we recommend that our pastors and churches consider the advisability of establishing and maintaining constantly a fund for the prosecution of all violators of the law governing the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That if our churches see proper to heed these recommendations that the territory of each church be made the control of the local church, with the understanding that there may be a confederated action and co-operative use of the funds of the church.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to each pastor of this district.

(Signed) R H. B. GLADNEY,
C. H. PITTMAN.

Resolved, That we express to the people of Cleveland our sincere appreciation of the kind hearted and open-handed hospitality to the members and visitors of this body, and that we pray the blessings of the Almighty God, spiritual and temporal, may rest upon them.

(Signed) C H. PITTMAN,
R H. B. GLADNEY.

There were fourteen ministers and eight delegates, besides a good crowd of visitors, and all went home rejoicing, both spiritually and temporally, praising the reception tendered them by the good people of Cleveland, Miss.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS H. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI DIRECTORY.

Rev. J. A. Randolph, president, Macon; J. H. Ledyard, first vice-president, Meridian; Mrs. Janie Klein, second vice-president, Vicksburg; Miss Lucy Hawkins, third vice-president, Water Valley; W. N. DeLoach, recording secretary, Grenada; Miss Vic Thompson, corresponding secretary and treasurer, Tupelo.

The Alabama Christian Advocate published a special Epworth League edition last week in the interest of the seventh State Conference, to be held in Anniston, June 7 and 8.

For three years the Alabama Leaguers have supported a female missionary in the foreign field. It has been a work of faith and labor of love with them, and the reflex influence has proved a blessing to the home work in Alabama.

God has not called us all to go as missionaries in the regions beyond, but he has surely called us to assist in sending those who are going and have gone with the message of salvation for the dying.

We are to show forth our Master's praise not only with our lips, but in our lives, by giving up ourselves to his service, and by walking before him in holiness and righteousness all the days of our lives.

Half-hearted service will not please God, neither will it prove satisfactory to us. Whatsoever our hands find to do, let us do it with our might, and ever be found diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.

What wonderful possibilities lie out before the soul that is linked on to God through faith in Jesus Christ! "And greater things than I do shall ye do, and because I go unto my Father."

Stonewall Jackson said that he had more faith in the prayers of God's people for a proper settlement of the troubles between the States than in the combined armies of the Confederacy.

God has not abdicated his seat of authority, nor surrendered his throne of power. Let the Leagues everywhere make special prayer that the present hostilities between the United States and Spain may soon terminate with an honorable peace.

Dr. Black writes us that he can not give an Epworth League Department in the ADVOCATE, and then publish a lot of League notices beside. He is right about this, and in this connection we beg to call attention to the fact that all notices anent the Epworth League should be sent to the editor of this department, so that they may be arranged and published in the columns allotted to us.

A missionary subject for each month has been placed on the topic cards for the next half year, and in a letter recently received from Bro. Cobb, at Nashville, we are informed that Dr. O E. Brown, of Vanderbilt University, has agreed to prepare an outline study on each topic.

"The Apostles of the South Seas" is the subject of first study. The field is first discussed, and embraces the following: (1) Society Islands, (2) Hervey Islands, (3) Samoa, (4) New Hebrides Then the people, consisting of (1) the Maroes, (2) the Tabu, and (3) the Etu, are represented with a short sketch of their peculiarities and superstitions. Special thoughts are brought out for careful study, such as (1) their moral darkness, (2) gross religious superstition, (3) the wonderful conversion of individuals and of whole communities under Christian agencies.

Subjects for conversation and questions for prayerful answers are the closing thoughts of the study to which we invite all the Leagues.

Be sure to send at once for the book from which these thoughts are taken, viz: "The Miracles of Missions," by Arthur T. Pierson; 30 cents, postage paid. Order of Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. The book is well printed, and contains the following illustrations: 1. A Blind Fortune Teller—Now Preacher; 2. A Christian Church and Congregation; 3. A Christian Teacher Reading the Bible; 4. Rev. Andrew Murray; 5. Palace Enclosure—Entrance to Temple, Bangkok; 6. Chu-La-Korn—The King of Siam and His Sons; 7 John G. Paton; 8. Interior of a House in Damascus; 9. Jim Sin, Taoist Priest, Now Preacher; 10 Adoniram Judson—The Apostle of Burma; 11. Ranavalona III., Present Queen of Madagascar; 12. Ramilala rivony—Prime Minister of Madagascar.

The main object of the Epworth League is to train the young men and women of our church, that they may be ready both to give and go, that the gospel of Jesus Christ may be carried everywhere, so that the kingdoms of this world may become the kingdom of our Lord.

Many young men and young women will soon be at home from school and college to spend the Summer holidays. We hope the leaguers in the home church will look after these young collegians, invite them to join their ranks, and secure their assistance in all the meetings and work of the League.

Which League will be the first to send in some item of interest that has transpired within the past few weeks? A preacher said the other day the League in the country was a failure. Let some country leaguer send in a ringing report disproving the general statement above referred to.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MISSION FUND.

The following are the amounts that have been received on the Epworth League Mission fund of Louisiana: Public collection at Alexandria, $27.05; Alexandria Junior League, $5.00; R. W. Bringhurst, $10.00; Miss Ada Black, $1.00; balance on collection for secretary's book, $1.12.

Please work up liberal pledges and contribution from your individual Leagues and send in at once, so that we may send our missionary when the call is made for her. The pledges already amount to more than $150.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Grenada District Conference was held at Pittsboro, May 26-29; Rev. H. C. Morehead in the chair.

The attendance of laymen was good. Nearly half of the preachers of the district were absent owing to sickness and other causes. The whole session was intensely spiritual all through—the most spiritual District Conference I ever attended.

All the interests of the church were carefully looked after, and, judging from reports, in a healthy, growing condition.

The preaching was plain, simple and strong.

Capt. I. T. Blount, Prof. P. H. Saunders, Jas. H. Ramsey and J. A. Benner, L. P., were elected delegates to Annual Conference, with Prof. R. W. Jones and W. M. Jenkins, alternates.

The entertainment and attendance upon the business and religious services were all that Bro. Huggins and his excellent people could make it, and fully demonstrated the wisdom of carrying a District Conference 30 miles in the interior.

Bro. Morehead was called home on Saturday to a sick daughter, who is now better. Bro. Bowen filled the chair in his absence. The next Conference goes to Tuscopoia.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

MR. EDITOR: During the recent sessions of our Sunday-school and Epworth League Conferences in Meridian, my home was in East Mississippi Female College, and host, the president of that time-honored institution of learning. Having had three daughters graduated there in years gone by, and been a frequent visitor and an interested witness (serving on the Board of Trustees for four years), I was well prepared to observe and make comparisons. I was delighted to see many manifest improvements over the past. Enlarged buildings, more care in hygienic affairs, a more bountiful table and better cooking, better water, and more of it, a more numerous and better equipped faculty (especially in the music department), better and wiser discipline, and a most delightful religious and home-like influence. I was not surprised to see more than one hundred boarding pupils (actual boarding pupils, and "not counting the faculty or the servants"), and to find more then two hundred day pupils enrolled. Neither was I surprised to hear that additional buildings would be needed for the next session.

President Beeson is a model president of a college for girls. He is gentle, refined, cultured, wise, firm and prudent, and a thoroughly devout Christian. He walks close with God, and gratefully ascribes his phenomenal success to the goodness of Almighty God, and not to his own merit. I can most cordially commend President Beeson and his college to the public, and especially to our own people. A girl is in safe keeping in East Mississippi Female College, so far as health, education, morals and religion are concerned.

DO YOUR BEST.

BY JENNIE L. LYALL.

Whatever you do, my little man,
Do it the very best you can,
Time speeds along, and day by day,
Life is hastening away.
Then what you do, my little man,
Do it the very best you can.

God made the world in which we dwell,
And all things of his goodness tell,
The flowers bloom, the grasses spring,
The bright sun shines, the sweet birds sing,
And if you think, I'm sure you'll say
They do their very best each day.

Then do your best, my little man,
You'll find it is the nobler plan,
If when you work, you work with care,
And when you play, you're fair and square,
There'll be a place for you, my man,
If you but do the best you can.

—Lutheran Observer.

HE HAD A BABY.

A touching conversation once took place on the train as the writer was on his way for a visit among friends in the East, as follows:

"No, I won't drink with you to-day, boys!" said a drummer to his companions, as they settled in a smoking-car, and passed the bottle. "The fact is, boys, I have quit drinking; I've sworn off."

"What's the matter with you, old boy?" sang out one. "If you quit drinking, something's up. What is it?"

"Well, boys, I will tell you. Yesterday I was in Chicago. Down on Clark street a customer of mine keeps a pawnshop, in connection with other business. I called on him, and while I was there a young man, not more than twenty-five, wearing threadbare clothes, and looking as hard as if he hadn't seen a sober day for a month, came in with a little package in his hand. He unwrapped it, and handed the article to the pawnbroker, saying, 'Give me ten cents.' And boys, what do you suppose it was? A pair of baby's shoes—little things, with the bottoms only a trifle soiled, as if they had been worn only once or twice. 'Where did you get these?' asked the pawnbroker. 'Got 'em at home,' replied the man, who had an intelligent look and the manner of a gentleman, despite his sad condition. 'My wife bought 'em for our baby. Give me ten cents for 'em—I want a drink.' 'You had better take the shoes back to your wife—the baby will need them,' said the pawnbroker. 'No, s-she won't, because she's dead. She's lyin' at home now—died last night.' As he said this the poor fellow broke down, bowed his head on the show-case, and cried like a child. Boys," continued the drummer, "you may laugh if you please, but I—I have a baby at home, and I swear I'll never take another drink."—National Temperance Advocate.

A PARABLE OF CONTENTMENT.

A violet shed its modest beauties at the turfy foot of an old oak. It lived there many days during the kind Summer in obscurity. The winds and the rains came and fell, but they did not hurt the violet. Storms often crashed among the boughs of the oak.

"Are you not ashamed of yourself when you look up at me, you little thing down there, when you see how large I am and how small you are; when you see how small a space you fill, and how widely my branches are spread?"

"No," said the violet, "we are both where God has placed us; and God has given us both something. He has given to you strength, to me sweetness; and I offer him back my fragrance, and I am thankful."

"Sweetness is all nonsense," said the oak; "a few days—a month at most—where and what will you be? You will die, and the place of your grave will not lift the ground higher by a blade of grass. I hope to stand some time—ages, perhaps—and then, when I am cut down, I shall be a ship to bear men over the sea, or a coffin to hold the dust of a prince. What is your lot to mine?"

"But," cheerfully breathed the violet back, "we are both what God made us, and we are both where he placed us. I suppose I shall die soon. I hope to die fragrantly, as I have lived fragrantly. You must be cut down at last; it does not matter, that I see, a few days or a few ages, my littleness, or your largeness, it comes to the same thing at last. We are what God made us. We are where God placed us. God gave you strength; God gave me sweetness." Be contented with your lot.—Selected.

Your Liver

needs coaxing, not crowding. Dr. Ayer's Pills stand without a rival as a reliable medicine for liver complaint. They cure constipation, and they cure its consequences, piles, biliousness, indigestion, sick headache, nausea, coated tongue, foul breath, bad taste, palpitation, nervousness, irritability, and many other maladies that have their root in constipation. They are a specific for all diseases of the stomach and bowels, and keep the body in a condition of sound health.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know of no better remedy for liver troubles, and have always found them a prompt cure for dyspepsia."—JAMES QUINN, 90 Middle Street, Hartford, Conn.

WHOSE PLACE WILL YOU TAKE?

You are looking for a place. You may make a place for yourself. By some invention or wise management you may originate some work which no one ever did before, and so have a place which is all your own. But in most cases boys, as they grow up, take the places which other men occupied, and do work which other men have done. It is quite important, therefore, for boys to consider what places they will take when they grow up.

"I read," says one writer, "of a boy who had a remarkable dream. He thought that the richest man in town came to him and said: 'I am tired of my house and grounds; come and take care of them, and I will give them to you.' Then came an honored Judge, and said: 'I want you to take my place; I am weary of being in court day after day. I will give you my seat on the bench if you will do my work.' Then the doctor proposed that he take his extensive practice and let him rest, and so on. At last up shambled old Tommy, and said: 'I'm wanted to fill a drunkard's grave. I have come to see if you will take my place in these saloons and on these streets.'"

Every boy should be preparing himself for the place that he is to fill. The boy who is studious, honest and true is fitting for a good place. The boy who runs the streets nights, who lies and swears, smokes cigarettes, drinks beer, and keeps bad company—what kind of a place will he fill?—The Little Christian.

BENEFICIAL RESULTS.

To children. Where children are trained to keep the Sabbath day holy, they do not easily forget it. A woman had forgotten to send some work home on Saturday, and on Sabbath morning desired her little daughter to take the bundle to the lady for whom it was intended, telling her at the same time to put it under her shawl so as not to be seen. "But," said the little girl, "is it not Sunday under the shawl?"

A young man was trained in a home where the Sabbath was observed in a Christian manner. Forced by ill-health to seek work in a foreign land, he was strongly tempted to join some young men of his own age in very doubtful Sabbath evening amusements. When about to yield he chanced to wander by the seashore while debating with his conscience, and over that sea, in the twilight, came floating to him the sweet melody and touching words of a familiar hymn—one often sung with his sisters at home. Tears gather in his heart and rise to his eyes as he exclaims, "Surely it was God who put this song into the minds and upon the lips of those singers." Cheered and comforted by that dear old hymn, he no longer feels tempted to join the gay throng of Sabbath-breakers, and he returns to the "busy haunts" a wiser and a better young man.

RULES OF LIFE.

The elder Baron Rothschild had these rules posted upon the walls of his bank: Shun liquors; dare to go forward; never be discouraged; never tell business lies; be polite to everybody; employ your time well; be prompt in every thing; pay your debts promptly; bear all troubles patiently; do not reckon upon chance; make no useless acquaintances; be brave in the struggle of life; maintain your integrity as a sacred thing; never appear something more than you are; take time to consider, then decide positively; carefully examine into every detail of your business.—Scottish American.

ALWAYS DOING.

It has been said that he who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is a benefactor. A writer tells of a nobleman who always carried acorns in his pocket, and whenever he found a bare spot on his estate would plant one of them that a tree might spring up to brighten the dreariness. That was something worth while. He who watches ever for lives that are bare of gladness, and drops a kindness to grow into a blessing, is doing work worthy of an archangel.—Sunday-School Times.

Hygiene.

SLEEP.

When a person retires for the night he removes the clothing he has worn during the day and dons looser garments which will not obstruct the free unconscious movement of his body, or limit the circulation of the blood. He should also leave behind him the cares and trials of the day that his sleep may come quickly and sweetly. They are obstructions to repose quite as much as a hard bed or tight clothing. If one has done his best during the day, he has nothing to regret. If he has not done his best, he may be sorry, but to worry over it is useless, for it can do no good. Once in bed never allow the mind to be charged with business or brain work of any kind has always been Mr. Gladstone's rule, and to this he owed largely health of brain up to an age rarely attained by anyone. He was able to sleep the sleep of a child from the moment he is in bed till next morning, no matter how intense may have been the excitements of the day. Probably few will ever be able to attain so high a degree of self-mastery over the mental faculties as this. It is an ideal state, but it must be remembered that Mr. Gladstone's life has not all been in Parliament, nor in places where night work was necessary, and when it has not been, according to the statement of his daughter, the morning hours have been given up to business, with an hour or more after lunch when his recreation was taken, formerly tree cutting, which he chose because it gave him the maximum of healthy exercise in the minimum of time. In later years the tree cutting has been discontinued and other forms of recreation substituted. I mention this habit of Mr. Gladstone of doing the severe work of the day in the morning so far as possible because I believe this is the best time for it, though the man in perfect health may work at all hours. Morning brain work leaves the remainder of the day for lighter work and for recreation, so that when the hour for sleep arrives the brain is not over-charged with blood, which keeps up cerebration for a long time before the blood vessels are able to contract and relieve themselves from the pressure.

Mr. Gladstone's habit of taking vigorous exercise in the afternoon also illustrates another important hygienic habit. Exercise is absolutely essential to the brain health of the brain worker. Not only does it promote sleep, but it brings into the blood an abundance of oxygen, and the brain can not be in good health without this. It is as important as any other food, is food just as much as bread or eggs. Exercise also calls the blood away from the brain, and this should happen after the brain work has been done rather than before.

It often happens that persons who have not formed good habits for promoting sleep, find, in the course of time, that they can not stop thinking for some time after retiring. The brain keeps on cerebrating for one, two, or three hours after lying down, automatically, like a machine, and the will has no power over it. This lowers the standard of brain health, diminishes the amount and the quality of the work that can be done, and, worst of all, makes the pleasure of living very much less. Such persons are in great danger of falling into the still worse habit of taking some hypnotic drug to bring relief, with the result in the end of making the brain worse or, perhaps, of destroying its health altogether. —Journal of Hygiene.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

BISHOP WILSON

In speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

COLEMAN—Ethel Carrie Coleman was born March 18, 1885. On May 24, 1898, her pure spirit left the casket of clay which contained it, and returned to the God who gave it. We laid her body away amidst many flowers loving hearts had sent, and prepared for her flowers of which she was so fond in life; and as they shed forth their fragrance, making the atmosphere around them sweet, so the influence of her life was felt by all who knew her; and though she will never again pluck the flowers of earth, she is where perpetual flowers bloom, and will gather them from the banks of the river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God.

At the age of seven she gave her young heart to the Savior, and remained ever faithful until death. She was always a pure, innocent child; lived a life worthy of imitation. She was a faithful attendant at Sunday-school; beloved by teacher and classmates. The weather was never too cold for her to go, if they would permit her. She was a consecrated worker in all church work, but especially in the missionary cause, always doing her part. Being very intelligent as well as sweet-spirited, she was indeed a treasure, and her place can not be filled. While we will miss her bright face here, we know heaven is made brighter by her presence. As a sister, she was kind and thoughtful; as a daughter, words can not express how she cheered the heart of father, making his life bright with smiles, pleasant words, and song. We all loved her so well, but Jesus loved her best.

While we would fain have kept her with us to brighten our lives, we look up through our tears and realize that our Father doeth all things well, and how in humble submission to his holy will, and praise him for binding up the broken heart and giving us a hope beyond this vale of tears. God grant in that day when he shall make up his jewels we may all be included amongst them!

Farewell, dear Ethel, we will meet again,
Then to be parted no more;
But while eternal ages roll
We will live and love on that fair shore.

The loving Shepherd hath need of thee,
So He gently gathered you into the fold;
Now you are pillowed on his dear breast
In that city whose streets are paved with gold.

No wintry storms of sin or sorrow
Will ever molest you now;
The battle is over, the victory is gained,
The crown is upon thy brow.

One who knew and loved her well,
Aunt Lou.

Cleveland, Miss.

DURBIN—On the morning of April 29, followed by a large concourse of friends, we buried in the cemetery at Natchez, Miss., all that was mortal of Mrs. Olive Wailes Durbin. In this bereavement we are prone to repeat that "the ways of the Lord are past finding out." Why one so full of hope and promise to the church, and so full of cheer and happiness to the home, should be taken, is indeed a mystery to those of us who remain; yet we bow with humility, knowing that our Father doeth all things well. She was born in the town of Waterproof, La., to Edmond and Ahlde Gorton on the fifteenth day of December, 1875. She spent her life in this community until her marriage to Bro. Will Durbin, April 21, 1897, when she moved to the city of Natchez, Miss., and where she died just one year and six days thereafter—April 27, 1898.

That blessing which is the promise of the pure in heart was hers in all its fulness. From her childhood she had been a conscientious child of God. She professed conversion when fourteen years of age, and one who knew her in the home and in the community says that she was incapable of an impure thought or an unkind word, and that her religion was ever of that character as to show that she lived with and for the Master.

In her death there is a sore bereavement to her family of mother and brothers, but to the young husband whose affection had grown with the days of their associations the stroke is felt with greatest keenness. Who can know the loneliness of that life and the depths of that sorrow? T. B. Holloman.

CUMMINS—Mrs. Sallie Cummins (nee Fuller) was born in Perry county, Ala., Nov. 9, 1855; came to Kemper county, Miss., when quite young with her father; was married at about the age of twenty years to Mr. John Cummins, and died April 10, 1898.

Early in life she joined the church and gave her young heart and life to the Savior. The cause of her Master was dear to her heart, and all through her life she never tired in working for its interest. Her amiable life and warm-hearted Christian influence had drawn around her a host of loving friends. Indeed, none knew her but to love her. She was an invalid for several months before her death, but she bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude and resignation.

As her pastor, it was my privilege to visit her in her illness, and I always found her trusting in Jesus. She was ready and waiting when the summons came, and with a heavenly smile upon her brow she sweetly fell asleep in the everlasting arms of Jesus. Her voice is hushed, and we see her face no more, but her influence still lives. God help the loved ones to meet her where sad parting will be no more. L. F. Alford GASSIE—Died Friday, May 20, 1898, Carrie Belle Gustine, wife of H. J. Gassie, and daughter of the late Dr. S. D. Gustine and Maria L. Barnett.

When the life of one whose pure influence visibly affects all with whom she comes in contact is brought to an untimely end, we involuntarily ask, "Why is it?" We dare not question the justice of God, yet we are compelled to admit that "his ways are past finding out." Is it because he knows the dregs of life's chalice are bitter, that he withdraws it ere they are drained?

Carrie Belle Gustine was one of the few beloved by all who ever met her. Beautiful and gifted to an unusual degree, she was like the violet flower she most loved—clothed with humility, utterly unconscious of her own worth. Her willing hands and feet were ever hastening to the relief of those in need. A life of self-abnegation was congenial to her. From babyhood she was a Christian, an angel in the household. During five years of illness her late father felt the uplifting charm of her presence, and showered blessings on the head of her who has gone to join him, leaving desolate the hearts of those who wait the summons to that land where parting is unknown.

M.

MAXEY—The subject of this sketch, Mrs. E T. Maxey, was born in Lauderdale county, Miss., Aug. 2, 1832. She joined the Baptist Church in 1868. Shortly after she transferred her membership to the Methodist Church, where she remained a faithful member until death, which occurred May 22, 1898. She was married Oct. 9, 1870, to R. W. Maxey, of Lauderdale county, Miss., which happy union lasted twenty-five years. Bro. Maxey died Oct. 23, 1895. After her husband's death the care and anxiety for the welfare of her children, and exposure in trying to keep up the large farm owned by her husband prior to his death, laid the foundation for the dreadful disease that caused her death. It was my privilege, as her pastor, to visit her frequently during her protracted sickness. I always found her hopeful and perfectly resigned to the will of God. She leaves three children, all of whom are members of the church, and a host of friends to mourn her death.

Weep not, dear children and friends; your loved one has only been transplanted from this world of sorrow and sadness to the home of the blest, and it is your happy privilege, sooner or later, to be reunited in the haven of eternal felicity. R. A. Sibley, Jr.

CARLISLE—Minerva Carlisle was born June 19, 1820, and died May 2, 1898, aged seventy-six years, ten months and nineteen days. Her maiden name was Walker. She first married John Garner. After his death she married a man by the name of Carlisle, who also leaves to mourn her departure. She joined the Baptist Church about the year 1838, and some time in the year 1850 she went to the M. E. Church, South, of which she was an acceptable member until death.

Aunt Nerva, as she was familiarly called, was loved by all who knew her, which was evidenced by the large number of friends that followed her to the last resting-place of her mortal remains. Our loss is her gain; hence we sorrow not without hope.

Weep not, dear husband; you may meet the loved one in the sweet by-and-by if you will only give your heart to God. B. A. B.

GREEN—Sister L. A. Green (nee Carter) was born Jan. 25, 1837; joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of sixteen; was married to W. C. Green, Oct. 5, 1854; died May 15, 1898, near Independence, Tate county, Miss. She was the mother of eight children, five of whom have gone on before. She leaves a husband, one daughter and two sons to mourn her loss, with many friends, who will miss her here. May they all be warned and encouraged to be faithful until death, and join the happy union in the home above!

J. H. Smith.

Wall Hill, Miss.

"WHAT DOEST THOU HERE?"

How often is that question put still! When a Christian worker, sorely needed, deserts his post because of some unseen difficulty, or for some selfish gratification and ease, to that couch of indolence, or to that forest glade where soft breezes blow, the question comes, "What doest thou here?" When a child of God is found in the theater, the dancing-saloon, or the place of evil companionship, sitting in the seat of scorners, or walking in the way of the ungodly, again must the question come as a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, "What doest thou here?" When one endowed with great faculties digs a hole in the earth and buries the God intrusted talent, standing idle all the day long among the loungers in the market-place, again must the inquiry ring out, "What doest thou here?"

Life is the time for doing. The world is a great workshop, in which there is no room for drones. God himself worketh as the great Master Builder. All creatures fulfill their useful functions, from the angel that hymns God's praise to the worm that buries a corpse. There is plenty to do—evil to put down, good to build up, doubters to be directed, prodigals to be won back, sinners to be sought. What doest thou here? Up, Christians, leave your caves, and do! Do not do in order to be saved; but, being saved, Do!—F. B. Meyer.

God gives to each a varied experience. We march not in serried numbers to conquer a common foe, but he leads us through separate paths, each one to struggle with his own adversary alone, that, when the victory is gained, and the crown is won, each shall have in it a leaf or a chapter which is unlike any other, so that all together may reflect every possible hue of the divine loveliness.—E. H. Sears.

Work touches the keys of endless activities, opens the infinite, and stands awe-struck before the immensity of what there is to do.—Phillips Brooks.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

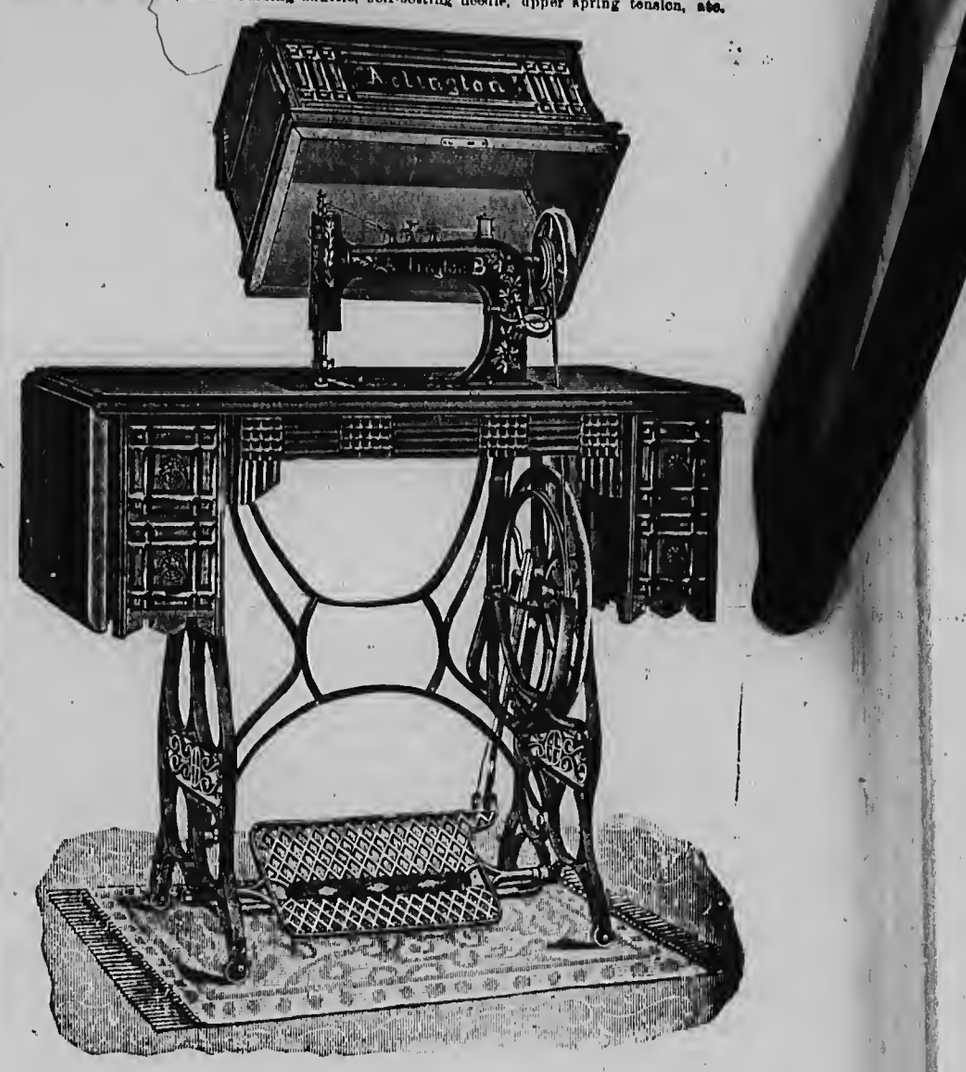
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

The Head is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

Needle Bar is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

Improved Automatic Bobbin Winder which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

Self Threading—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

The Needle is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

Self-Threading Shuttle—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

Loose Pulley for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

Parts Subject to Wear are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Five thousand American troops have been landed near Santiago de Cuba.

A Spanish torpedo boat destroyer is said to have been sunk at Santiago.

In answer to numerous inquiries on the subject, it is officially announced that the Government, and not the States, will pay all volunteer troops for the time between the dates of enlistment and muster.

The Illinois Congregational Association has adopted a resolution urging the faculties of Congregational colleges and universities to use all their power to stamp out the drinking habit and to suppress betting.

The public reunion of the New Orleans Bar Association was held on last Saturday. The president, Mr. Henry P. Dart, delivered the annual address. A number of addresses on important subjects were delivered by prominent members of the local bar.

The Spanish batteries at Santiago were completely silenced on Tuesday after a bombardment lasting only about three hours. The fire of the American warships was terribly effective. Two of the strongest batteries were totally wrecked. Only one American wounded and a fighting top damaged.

Very little has happened to give a new phase to the situation in the progress of hostilities between this country and Spain. All interest for the moment has centered in the blockade of the Spanish squadron in Santiago harbor by the American fleet. On Friday, according to accounts, another bombardment of the forts at the entrance to the harbor of Santiago was attempted, but no definite details as to the results are yet obtainable.

The news of the safety of the men of the "Merrimac" was brought to the flagship "New York" Friday afternoon by a Spanish tug flying a flag of truce. She came out by order of Admiral Cervera, who was represented by Captain Bustamente y Oviedo, his chief of staff. The Spanish admiral was so struck by the daring shown by Lieutenant Hobson and his men, that in generous admiration of the bravery of his foemen he sent his chief of staff to let the fleet know that the men were safe and well treated as prisoners of war.

The Navy Department has reported that Admiral Dewey, at Manila, had cabled that the insurgents had captured a large number of Spanish soldiers and officers. While the Admiral no doubt had information to that effect, further reports will have to be awaited to remove all doubts as to the accuracy of the report. The insurgents in the Philippines are actually giving the government more uneasiness at the moment than the Spanish troops. The authorities at Washington realize that the civilized world will hold this country responsible for any atrocities which may be committed by the half-civilized insurgents of the Philippines, who have already earned a reputation for their barbarous methods of warfare; so that our military authorities are compelled not only to prepare to vanquish the Spanish troops, but to hold the insurgents in check as well.

The Spanish fleet is now helpless, being held captive in Santiago de Cuba harbor. The narrow channel leading into the harbor was completely blocked early on Friday, when the United States collier "Merrimac" was sunk across its entrance. It is now impossible for the Spaniards to get out, and it is equally impossible for any vessel to get into the harbor. Therefore, the Spanish first-class armored cruisers, "Infanta Maria Teresa," "Cristobal Colon," "Vizcaya" and "Almirante Oquendo," with the two torpedo boat destroyers, "Furor" and "Pluton," are no longer of any use to Spain. This result was accomplished through the heroism of Lieutenant Richmond P. Hobson, assistant naval constructor, and Daniel Montagne, Geo. Charette, J. C. Murphy, Oscar Deignan, John P. Phillipps, John Kelly and H. Clausen. The latter, coxswain of the "New York," took part in the expedition against orders. They were all captured by the Spaniards, but the Spanish admiral in recognition of their bravery sent word to the American admiral under a flag of truce that he was willing to exchange the prisoners, and assuring the American commander that they would be treated with kindness. Money and provisions have been sent to them, and the necessary steps are being taken to bring about their exchange.

PAINT TALKS. VI.

THE COMPARATIVE COST OF PAINTS.

Figures have been published claiming to show a saving of nearly fifty per cent. in the cost of painting done with pure white lead as compared with ready-mixed paints.

Mr. Oliver D. Goodell, now of Baltimore, who is an authority respected by all paint manufacturers, made in 1896 a series of experiments to test these figures. He found that a pure lead paint mixed according to the published formula would require four coats to cover instead of two, as claimed, and, therefore, the cost of the lead paint was quoted over fifty per cent. too low. He also found that a mixture of equal parts of lead and zinc showed a saving, for the same work, of over ten per cent., while with pure zinc white, the saving in cost for the same work equally well covered, was about fifty per cent.

The practical demonstration from these experiments is that combination paints are more economical than pure lead, as I have already asserted in these articles. That they are more convenient everyone knows; that they are more durable is guaranteed, under forfeit, by several manufacturers of them; and that zinc paints are innocuous, has been fully demonstrated. Why then do painters continue dictating pure lead? I will allow Mr. Goodell to answer this question:

"We have heard one old honest painter give the kernel of truth in this matter. Let us quote his words: 'I know white lead does not last as long as the mixed paint; but when it goes it goes all over alike and leaves a fair surface to paint over. Then again houses painted with white lead need painting oftener, and as long as people think it is best I let them think so, as it makes better business for us.'"

Powerful saline and other drastic purgatives should be strictly avoided, except in extreme cases. When an aperient is called for, take Ayer's Pills. They restore natural action by imparting strength and tone to the bowels, and their use is always attended with good results.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

THE BIBLE.

The author, God himself;
The subject, God and man; salvation, life
And death—eternal life, eternal death—
Dread words, whose meaning has no end, no bounds.
Most wondrous Book! Bright candle of the Lord!
Star of eternity!—the only star
By which the bark of man could navigate
The sea of life, and gain the coast of bliss securely.
. . . . . .
This Book, this holy Book—on every line
Marked with the seal of high divinity,
On every leaf bedewed with drops of love
Divine, and with the eternal heraldry
And signature of God Almighty stamped
From first to last—this ray of sacred light,
This lamp from off the everlasting throne
Mercy took down, and, in the night of Time,
Stood, casting on the dark her gracious bow,
And evermore beseeching men, with tears
And earnest sighs, to read, believe, and live.
And many to her voice gave ear, and read,
Believed, obeyed, and now as the Amen
True, Faithful Witness swore, with snowy robes
And branchy palms surround the fount of life
And drink the streams of immortality
Forever happy, and forever young.

CENTENARY COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement exercises of Centenary College began Saturday night with the Preparatory Department, which, as usual, drew a good crowd; and Sunday, June 5, Dr. Hunnicutt preached the commencement sermon to the edification and delight of his many old friends in and around Jackson. Sunday night Bro. H. W. Rickey preached to the college Y. M. C. A., and the praises of that sermon were sounding in the air when this scribe arrived on the ground to take part in the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees.

On Monday night Prof. Alphonso C. Smith addressed the Literary Societies on Southern oratory of ante-bellum days, giving a lucid sketch of Patrick Henry and the character of his eloquence; then of the Father of his Country, George Washington; taking up the contemporaries, Haine, of South Carolina, and Daniel Webster, as they were pitted over against each other in their great debate on the States rights' question. Coming on down, he touched on the other great orators, John C. Calhoun, Sargent S. Prentiss, Henry Clay, and others of the lesser lights. The address was forceful, finished, and highly entertaining, making these great orators stand out before the audience in a very graphic way.

The alumni orator spoke on a familiar theme, but handled it so masterly that it was highly enjoyed by the audience. It was so effective in presentation that many were moved to tears through the pathos of the speaker. T. Cage Gordon, from Dyersburg, Tenn., was the alumni orator, and his subject was, "Home, Sweet Home." He was back on his native heath; hence this was quite an appropriate theme for one who had not visited his alma mater for nearly a score of years. The absence of the writer from the audience cut the audience out of a racy paragraph; so the speaker informed us. He had an old score to pay, but the pressing business of the Board deprived us from being on hand to cheer and clap for "Cage," like we used to do in the early seventies.

On Tuesday night there was the contest for the McGehee medal. There were original orations by several young men. All did excellently, but Rev. A. S. Lutz was the victor, and some looked downcast next morning.

The graduating class consisted of six—four taking the degree of A. B. and two the degree of B. S. These young gentlemen acquitted themselves finely, from the salutatory to the valedictory.

Dr. Carter gave one of those baccalaureate speeches which was apposite and deeply spiritual. None can do it more felicitously and eloquently than our Dr. Carter.

In March, Dr. Carter wrote to the president of the Board of Trustees, stating that he felt his place was in the itinerancy, and that the Board should get another president for the college. Following this up, he tendered his resignation. The Board highly appreciates the fine work Dr. Carter has done in the past quadrennium while president, and felt they could get no finer model to put before our young men.

During the session just passed there has been a fine revival among the students, and though the numbers were not what was desired, yet the session was never better in the health and morals of the student-body.

The Board, after full discussion, elected Dr. Inman W. Cooper president; Prof. W. B. Griffin, of Oxford, Professor of Languages. Prof. Marion G. Evans was elected principal of the Preparatory Department, Prof. W. H. Carter was re-elected to his former chair, and Prof. Sullivan was also re-elected as Professor of Natural Science.

The Board ordered the repair of the main building and some other improvements, costing several thousand dollars. The time for opening the next session is fixed for the first Wednesday of September, and closing the first Wednesday of June. If you want your boys educated as Methodists, send them to Centenary, where their souls will be looked after as well as mind and body. The Board of Trustees has at last declared strongly against all inter-collegiate games of all kinds, thinking their influence was detrimental and distracting and dissipating.

This venerable institution will be doing business at the same old stand next Fall as in the half century that is now gone. Many of her friends, like Job's comforters, who thought her days were numbered, and they were ready to write her obituary, are dead and gone, while still good and true men are going forth from her halls. So it will continue.

The Board conferred the degree of D. D. upon Rev. J. L. Pierce, who is now finishing his fourth year at Carondelet Street. May it make him flourish like a green bay tree!

The work done by Centenary in the session past is just as superior as that which has been done for the past score of years. There may be other colleges sending forth many more in numbers, but those who bear the imprimatur of our college are far above the shoddy graduates that are flooding our country. Men may come and men may go, but Centenary goes on forever. "Long may she wave and never waver."

Let us rally to our new president, who, in his vigorous young manhood, will give his best and most enthusiastic work to the college. In his canvass for students let us all give him a helping hand. He is ready to go anywhere to secure a scholar for next session.

WOMAN'S PARSONAGE AND HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

CHANGES IN THE CONSTITUTION.

BY MARY HELM.

The changes made by the recent General Conference in the Constitution of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society were unimportant, with the exception of three articles—I., III., and X.—as follows:

"Article I.—This organization shall be known as the Woman's Home Mission Society of the M. E. Church, South."

Many of us had become attached to the old name, and some may dislike to give it up, but it was long and cumbersome, and was constantly miscalled by the preachers in making announcements, and on the Conference floor even our own workers often failed to call it correctly. The shorter name of "Home Mission Society" does not in the least degree affect the purpose of the society, and parsonage building remains, as before, its first object. Never will this society cease to be the "home-builder" of the church, the friend of its preachers and their families.
